The Franchise
O. C. C. Likely to Adopt Resolution Today and Next Week

Attended Suite

The regular weekly meeting of the O. C. C. is scheduled today at the hotel. For some time past there has been discussion among some of the more important members as to the advisability of bringing court action against some members for the purpose of “clearing up” the situation if it exists locally with regard to the W. C. franchise of Asso. First National.

One of the leaders of the local organization and on Saturday however, that the statement issued by President Lieber of First National as “so fair that it would seem to be right idea to carry out his suggestion—in other words if anyone is dissatisfied with First National’s W. C. franchise let it work out as he suggests.”

It will be recalled that last Spring he O. C. C. had serious ideas as to the franchise and discussed the matter at some length with Senator Walker.

Negative Costs
Reaching too high. Mounting out of sight. What’s to be done? Something, surely. Because you can’t stretch a rubber band too far. It’s bound to snap. And so with prices.

If they don’t come a tumbling. Something’s going to snap.

One of the best known men in the business. In the producing and distributing field. Says prices were never as high as today.

He’s right. They are. And they are too high.

It’s an old story. And an old laugh. That you never hear of anything in this business. But “million-dollar” pictures. Those that have grossed that much during 1922. Can be counted on the fingers of one hand. And you’ll still have a finger or two to spare. Then you hear a lot of the half million babies. And you can count them. Anything less than $300,000 gross. Well, you never hear of it.

But—

If all the distributing companies were honest. (What horse laugh do you hear?) And would give the figures of the gross. On the average picture released during 1922. You can bet the bankroll. That the average won’t show $300,000 — oss. Not exhibition value, but money paid in.

There’s too much being spent for story material. Too much for names—that mean too little at the box office. Too much for overhead. Too much for everything entering production. With the result that the average so-called “big” picture, has a negative cost of approximately $150,000 before it gets going. Then add a 35 per cent distribution on that, and the cost of prints, the advertising, and the interest on the investment before it pays out in about 18 months. And the picture just has to do something like $300,000. Before the producer receives any real money.

All of which is all wrong. Everything is geared too high. Everything is too improperly high for a sound business. The quicker producers get down on negative costs the better. The more pictures that have box-office value that can be turned out at $75,000 the quicker everybody in this business is going to get off to a better start.

This doesn’t mean that the so-called “big” pictures shouldn’t be made. And if they have a real box office value they will be shown. The Warners made two of the best box office bets of the year. “Why Girls Leave Home” and “Schools Days.” They cost less than $40,000 and $60,000 respectively. Everybody made money out of them.

But who made any money out of “Nero”? Fox didn’t—that’s a bet. Exhibitors didn’t. That’s a certainty. Who did? And so it goes—right down the line. Yet “Over the Hill” made Fox a fortune. And cost comparatively little.

You don’t make “big” pictures by spending a lot of money. You don’t make big box office successes that way either. “Million dollar” pictures are accidents. Half million rarities. Good, week in and week out pictures—the kind that every house has to play regularly, costing over $100,000 to $150,000 inevitably spell ruin.

Gentlemen, what are you going to do about it?

BIG WESTERN’S

May be a bet. Don’t know why they have been overlooked so long. First National just secured “Girl of the Golden West” for next season special. Should cash in.

Can’t understand why the big producers haven’t done more of this. Hardly any type of picture so popular through country as “Western’s.” Ask the small town exhibitor. He’ll tell you they invariably go. Some sections, of course, where they don’t—but not many. So it’s about time one of the big fellows came along with a real “Western” background and plot.

Now this doesn’t mean that every producer in the business. Need rush into making a “Western.”

ELLJAY’S RETIREMENT

Turned the business over to his boys. Sounds good. But—and it’s some But—you’ll notice Elljay is still Chairman of the Board. Of both of his companies. Which means that pop will keep his eye on the youngster’s. While they grow their wings.

TALKING ABOUT BOYS

Means this “infant” industry is getting a bit older. Almost old enough for long pants. Adolph Zukor’s son, Eugene, is over at Famous. Own office and everything. In Metro Arthur and David Loew. Real business-like. Only take an hour-prompt at lunch are growing up with the business. And so you find it all over. Bill Fox hasn’t any sons. But they say he reads all the scripts. To his daughters. And Carl Laemmle’s daughter—bright, smart girl—is a real authority on modern literature and plays.

THOSE MILLIONS

Smart aleck press agent for Arthur Hammerstein. Got story printed that his boss. Would pay three million. For the Arbuckle negatives held by Famous. He would, wouldn’t he? But he hasn’t. And what’s more, he won’t.

If anybody offered Famous a lot less than three million iron men for those three Arbuckle’s. Now on the shelf. The way the offer would be grabbed. Would make a piker. Of the fastest 100 yard man. In any college. By the way. You’d better set down. Awaiting the release of those Arbuckle’s. By Famous. You may get tired standing up.

New German-Russian Combine

Berlin—The oldest German company, the Mutoscope and Biograph Co. of Berlin, which will soon celebrate the 25th anniversary has concluded an alliance with "The Flaming Torch Ltd. of Moscow, Russia, providing for an exchange of productions and collaboration between German and Muscovite stars.

Injunction in Film Case

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

New Orleans—The Pearce Film Co. has been granted a preliminary injunction against H. F. Wilkes and Southern Enterprises restraining them from showing in any theater in Louisiana and Miss. "A Woman Above Reproach." The firm claims it signed a contract in 1921 with the Anywoman Film Co. for the exclusive right in the two states and alleges that Southern Enterprises has been encroaching on its territory.

U. F. A. Sued For 700 Million Marks

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Berlin—Joe May has sued the U. F. A. for damages to the tune of 700 million marks. May complains that the U. F. A. sold his serial "The Mistress of the World" to U. S. and in spite of a special provision in the contract that the film should not be changed, such cuttings and alterations were made by the American buyer that the picture was entirely spoilt. It was due to these cuttings, says May, that the film not only lost all chances of success but was rejected by the American public. This failure, May pretends, damaged his reputation in such a way as to prevent further sales of his productions. He values the damage sustained at 700 million marks or about $80,000.

It may be mentioned in this connection that the producer of the French super-feature "Atlantide" also complained some time ago in the French trade organs that his work was "barbarously mutilated" by the Yankees.

Canadian Notes

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

St. John's, N. B.—G. W. Kerr, has been appointed manager of the Famous-Lasky office here, having come from Montreal, where he was formerly with the Anglo-Canadian exchange.

A new producing company is in the offing. The intention is to start producing in the spring, beginning with one and two reeler. The Joe Lavelle stories may be used for a series of 12 two-reeler.

German Film Exports

Berlin—Exports of exposed films, favored by the low German currency has increased considerably during the second half of the year. 7,215,000 meters; or about 22 million feet, were exported during the 3d quarter of the year, against approximately 10 million feet in the first 3 months of 1922. The high water mark was reached in September last with 3 million feet.

Raw film exports from July to September were still higher, being valued at more than 700 million marks. Principal buyers for exposed films were Austria and successor states of Austria-Hungary, also Spain, while raw stock mostly went to America, Italy, France, Austria.

Imports show, on the other hand, a marked decrease, their value was only about 4 million marks.

On the other hand, "Penalty" featuring Lon Chaney, was presented in Berlin with such fearful cuts, ordered by the Censors, as to become quite nonsensical.

THE PASS PROBLEM

Every exhibitor has it. Big nuisance. But there's always a cost of folks. Who have to get them. Which reminds of what happened to Bill Swanson. Years ago. At his house in Salt Lake. Gave a Mormon Bishop a pass. Reading "Admit Bishop Hunter and Family." Shortly after the good Bishop arrived with his family. And the pass. And Swanson had to eat eight vives and 30 kids. After that Bill discontinued passes to Mormons.

EXHIBITOR DISTRIBUTION

Important man. One of the most important in business.
Yelling of exhibitor-distribution. "To arrange a distributing machine is simple," he said. "But what of the product; what of pictures? That's where the trouble will come from. Of course they will get pictures. But what kind? And how will they gear the distributing machine? To handle a few specials. Or a lot of average product? And what do they know of distributing problems; much less those of production? To talk about doing it—yes—but actually doing it. Well that will prove another story."

Exploiting "Via Radio"

Educational in collaboration with Scientific American, has arranged an elaborate exploitation campaign on the one-sentence "Via Radio." A C. Lescarboula, managing editor of Scientific American, is sending material for broadcast to every broadcasting station in the United States. Scientific American will also carry a story in the January issue on the instructive value of the picture.

Watertown, S. D.—Harry Keller at the Colonial put over "Sherlock Holmes" by using 20 bronze frames with photos and wording "See John Barrymore in 'Sherlock Holmes' at Colonial. He placed these frames in all hotels, cafes and department, drug and clothing stores, also used filmy window cards and hit almost every window in Watertown with one. Arranged with Watertown Police Opinion for Newsboy and Carrier Party for opening night, boys paraded from newspaper office down principal street and to Colonial carrying banners "Going to See Sherlock Holmes at Colonial!"—"Meet Us at the Colonial Tonight!" the boys each brought a boy friend and all wore the Sherlock Holmes Masks. At a dance a man in charge announced "A Sherlock Holmes Special!" and each dancer wore a mask with lights low, made big hit with young people; there were about 200 there. The above with cut-out lobby and shadow light on same created much talk.

Meadville, Pa.—Manager Chas. E. Schatz, the Park had only intended using the regular line of advertising which includes 24, 6, and one sheet stands, heralds, window cards, lobby display, slides etc., but when Goldwyner Bill Robson came along from Pittsburgh with his tales of what had been done on "Remembrance" they decided to go after this one. They made three distinct appeals; reached the school pupils with a "Remembrance" souvenir book mark, distributed throughout the teachers to every grade and high school pupil in town; got into every store window in town; with an 11x14 card which read "Buy Your Christmas Remembrance here and be sure to see Remembrance Rupert Hughes big Goldwyn Picture at the Park Theater" with the play dates. Where the merchant demurred he was told to cut the theater name and date off after the show was over and the top of the card would be a live one for him right up till Christmas. Tribune Republican agreed to sponsor a matinee for all men over 60 years and in the stories brought out the fact that we have all heard the name of another extolled to the skies in song and story but seldom hear anything about father. This is father's "Remembrance" Day ushering in "Remembrance" week and the holiday season is one of "Remembrance."

Flood Scenes for "The Sin Flood"

Through the efforts of H. T. Snowden, Goldwynner, the Palace had a very unusual lobby display on "The Sin Flood." Snowden secured a number of exceptional photos of the Indianapolis flood in 1913 and these along with stills from the picture were placed on a 7x4 compo board with captions reading: "Scenes from the Greatest Flood Indiana History, Indianapolis 1913." "Scenes From the Greatest Flood Picture in Motion Picture History." "The Sin Flood." This display attracted an unusual amount of attention with the throngs of holiday shoppers.

A Holiday Stunt

Cleveland—Seovil Essex and Rief, managers of the Gorden Square promoted a real live publicity stunt for the week before Xmas by connecting with C. E. Holah of the Cleveland M. P. Co. for the production of 1,000 feet of Movies to be made of their entire neighborhood including all School Kiddies, Hospitals, Churches, Holiday shoppers, etc. Holah's outfit appeared on the streets in the vicinity of the theater with a real live Santa Claus and Cameramen in Aviators helmets and leather coats and with a large touring car with flaring banners on its side announcing where the motion pictures would be shown the following week. About everyone in the neighborhood tried to get in the picture with the result that three traffic cops had to handle some of the shots taken in order to let Santa escape with a whole skin.

With the stunt the Gorden gave cash Christmas presents to certain people in the picture who identified themselves in a marking on the film.

Some Good Ideas

Faribault, Minn.—The Strand put over "The Sin Flood" assisted by Buddy Stuart, Goldwyn exploiter this way:

Had boy on street carrying umbrella seven days in advance of snowing—reading in yellow "The Sin Flood is Coming." Run tracrer adds in paper six days in advance—"The Flood Will Sweep You Away"—five days in advance—"The Sin Flood is Coming."—4 days in a "Chief of Police What Do You Know About The Sin Flood"—"Mayor Will The Sin Flood Sweep Faribault" others along this line addressed to prominent and well known men about town. Used letters similar to those added six days in advance 1,000 of them. Used stickers "Rush The Sin Flood is Coming" and "See The Sin Flood" on all letters mailed out from theater also got tie-up with offices and stores to use stickers on letters and packages. Used lobby in red lights with red flood falling on big five foot black circle with letters The Sin Flood in Red in front. Result had everybody talking days before picture got here and went over with a bang.

Censorship

Threatened in Missouri—Arbuckle Situation Aggravates Conditions

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

St. Louis—An open drive for state censorship of moving pictures has been launched by the Missouri Sunday School Association, which embraces some 4,500 Sunday school superintendents in the state. Hays' order reinstating "Fatty" Arbuckle, has precipitated the censorship drive, and well informed politicians and students of Missouri psychology frankly admit that the situation is grave, taking the most optimistic view of the conditions that prevail.

"Merton" In Pictures?

Reported Glenn Hunter May Use It—Chaplin Reported Interested

"Merton of the Movies" in which Glenn Hunter is appearing, and which ran as a serial in the Satepose, is, according to reports, to be made into a picture with Glenn Hunter appearing as Merton, the same part which he is presenting on the stage.

No confirmation of the report is obtainable.

A number of film folk have seriously considered "Merton" for picture material. Some time ago it was said that Charlie Chaplin was considering the play as material, but the price asked for picture rights is said to have blocked the idea.

The Troubles of an Exhibitor

Ouija, Ohio.

I just saw the paper in which you publish the troubles of exhibitors in your columns, I think this is good news, as we fellows should all hang together. Because then those big companies like Lubin, Essanay, and so forth, whose pictures I play would be brung closer to us.

Charlie Chaplin in my city, only I charge ten cents. It's right next door to Hemmabery's Drug Store, the first road to your right as you get off the street in front of Jones Notion Store, after you walk about one or two hundred feet.

New Capitol Record

It was reported yesterday that the Capitol had established a new record with Neilan's, "The Stranger's Banquet." On Sunday the business totalled $13,559.80, and on Monday, $10,324.10, thus grossing almost $25,000 for the first two days of the week.

Use Bombs on Danz

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Seattle—A bomb explosion, which wrecked the limousine of John Danz, owner of four down town second run houses, is thought to have been intended to have killed Danz, who has been having labor troubles with the musicians' unions since last June.

For some time, the practice of placing chemical bombs in the town theaters has been going on.

Pola Negri in "The Cheat"

Famous Players announced yesterday that Pola Negri is to be starred in "The Cheat" to be directed by George Fitzmaurice with Jack Holt to be featured and Charles De Rochef in the company. Production will start about Jan. 22.

Nearly eight years ago Cecil De Mille made "The Cheat" with Pauny Ward and Sessue Hayakwawa and it became one of the greatest box office successes in the history of the business.

Hal Roach, producer of the Harold Lloyd and other comedies, is in town for a brief vacation, looking over new props and trying to find some leading ladies. Headquarters at Pathe.

Abe Warner Back From Coast

Abe Warner arrived east last night after a three months' stay at the Warner's coast studios. According to Warner, Hollywood is humming with activity, there are few idle film folk, and this year threatens to be the biggest in the history of the industry from a production standpoint. "One of the biggest and most satisfying things on the west coast today," said Warner, "is the making of fewer and better pictures. This is an actual fact."

After spending about six weeks here Abe Warner will return to Hollywood to watch production for the coming season.

Hays Back

Enthusiastic Over Outlook for Better Cooperation and Understanding for Los Angeles

Confident that there will be a far better cooperation than has heretofore existed in Hollywood, Will Hays returned to New York yesterday.

This cooperation will come not only from the studio workers and employees numbering approximately 15,000 and upward but will also be found forthcoming from businessmen and others with whom the picture people present a united front.

"I left Patten out there and N'Oile will remain on the coast indefinitely," said Hays. "I feel that a great deal that was started during my visit to the coast last summer has not been definitely consummated and we are anticipating not only a better understanding but a better working arrangement."

National Plans Off

Understood A. B. C. Will Not Endeavor At This Time to Form Booking Organization Across Country

It is understood that the Associated Booking Corp., the A. B. C., has, for the time being decided not to try to organize nationally. For the time being efforts will be concentrated in developing the New York organization, and securing pictures.

A number of obstacles apparently have developed, one of them being the possibility of becoming involved with other companies which will return difficulties at such points where booking organizations are at present operating.

Government Taxes Show November Not as Good as Last Year

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Admission taxes collected during the month of November amounted to $8,484,790, according to returns made to the Bureau of Internal Revenue. This was an increase of $88,000 over the collections for October, which were $8,396,461, or $1,508,585 less than the $6,995,375 reported for November, 1921.

William Standing has returned from Europe on the Berengaria.

"Knighthood" to the Rivoli

"Knighthood" will be shown at the Rivoli next week.

Oppose School Movies

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Milwaukee—Jack Silliman, of the M. P. T. O., says Milwaukee exhibitors feel that the growing tendency to show pictures in church and school is dangerous. They expect to make a more definite statement regarding this within a few weeks, when the investigating committees report.

Kansas Insurance Idea

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

St. Louis—Frank L. Travis, retiring superintendent of insurance in Kansas, is one of the chief promoters in a mutual insurance company to be known as "The Theatre Mutual," which will write fire and explosion insurance for theaters, principally picture houses. Some of the Kansas exhibitors have complained that they cannot get the right sort of coverage for some of the business they want from the old line insurance companies, such as book and films. The new company will write insurance on everything in the theater, charging the field rates on lines now covered by old line companies and special rates on the new lines.

With regard to the Arbuckle situation Hays said that he had nothing to add to what has led to so much publicity excepting that "there has been a rather broad and general misunderstanding of what he had in mind at the time that he removed his objection to Arbuckle working.

"This does not mean, nor did it ever mean," said Hays, "that the Arbuckle pictures were to be released—that is a matter which concerns the company distributing them. Nor did it mean that Arbuckle was to return to the screen as a star. It meant simply and brightly that Arbuckle was to be allowed a chance to earn a living. Those interested in his future can arrange that to their best satisfaction."

Capital Increases

Albany—Capital increases filed by New York picture corporations include:

New York Studios, Manhattan, $40,000 to $60,000.

Universal Picture Corp., Manhattan, $1,000,000 to $7,000,000.

The Story at the Box-Office

Shadows (Lichtman) with Lon Chaney. — The star's masterpiece. Will live up to all exploitation you can give it. Played up "Ching Chong Chinaman." Milwaukee Deals
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Milwaukee—Joseph Schwartz, pioneer Milwaukee exhibitor, announced the sale of his three picture houses, the Liberty, Kosciusko and Riviera, for a sum approximating $300,000. Schwartz is leaving for Europe. The Liberty has been bought by Henry Wehr; the Kosciusko and Riviera will be operated by Nat Cohn and associates, owners of the Fern and State.

Some Sign

Nazimova’s “Salome” sign in front of the Criterion is attracting unusual attention. Some say it is a far better eye getter than the big board which was originally built for “Knighted.” The sign is illuminated at night with red incandescents and the glare can be seen for several blocks.

I got competition from a low life who owns the Elite, so I wanted to run something special. So a salesman from some company (I lost the card) said I should always have a filler in on my program and he would fix me up. I asked him what a filler in was, and he told me it was something between the feature and the comedy to fill out the program and give the audience a rest between the tears and the laughs, altho I forgot to tell him that some of the features made the audience laugh. He said he had an old print at the hotel that I could have for $25 and sell again to other exhibitors in Pneumonia, Allep and the others and still put over a scoop on the Elite.

So I figured I could give four shows at night and make up some of the money. The name of it was “Medinah.” So I run my show and all I could get out of it was one and a half shows, “Medinah” wasn’t a filler in. It was a filler up. And besides it was a foreigners picture. So I lost the $25 and two and a half shows. The print was very bad, but I think with a little fixing up this could play as a regular feature, if they take out the News weekly parts, especially the volcano, because we ain’t got none in this country. Just the same I wish you could keep them salesmen off the road. Will write you again soon. Yours for the good of the business.

BETTY COMPSON
in

“The White Flower”

Written and directed by Julia Crawford Ivers

Released March 5th

A ROMANCE of Hawaii, full of mystery and strange adventure. Miss Compson has the role of a girl who is half Hawaiian, half American. Her struggle between her conflicting selves makes the role rich in emotional power.

In order to have the atmosphere correct, the entire company went to Hawaii, where all the scenes were taken. So for the first time the real Hawaii will be seen on the screen.

The supporting cast includes Edmund Lowe, Arline Pretty, Edward Martindell and Leon Barry.

Newspaper Opinions

“Salome”—United Artists

HERALD—Indeed, “Salome” is distinctly erudite entertainment. It falls into no group of classification that has hitherto been established in the world of the silent drama, which means that it contains no trace of that shopworn bokum which seems to be so essential a part of box office value. It is beautiful—extraordinarily so—but it is not beautiful in a conventional way. It is, in fact, startlingly different from anything that we have ever seen, on the screen or off.

TRIBUNE—It is a series of beautiful pictures, and Natasha Rambova has succeeded in making even the actors themselves look not like the sort of human beings we see around us, but like Beardsley drawings. Our advice is, do not miss “Salome” whatever you do. It is beautiful and fascinating.

NEWS—We liked it enormously. Whether you will is another question. We say this because many of our friends, whose intelligence and opinion we respect, differ with us. We would not dream of saying to you, “Go to see Salome, it is a picture you will like”. We do not know whether you would or not. But if you do wish to see a really significant cinema, then “Salome” may well be your object lesson.

WORLD—Of all the bizarre costumery and background settings which we have seen in pictures, “Salome’s” are the bizarrist. Everything done up and acted in front of gorgeous draperies and fantastic curtains. From the beginning to the end of the picture there are fitting views of symbolic design, some of them in color, which are extremely beautiful, and the close-up scenes of the little actresses are smartly done as to photography, lighting and posing. Nazimova is a magnetic and interesting figure throughout.

TIMES—It is different but does not depend upon mere difference for its attraction. The eye looks upon it and finds it good. Consistently fantastic, making no effort at literalism in investiture, the picture appeals at once as a work of fine imagination. There remains the story itself, and it is disappointing. It runs out in an anti-climax.

GLOBE—Oscar Wilde’s biblical drama, which has had such an unhappy time of it on the spoken stage, comes to the screen with every stamp of being a success. Throughout the picture is pitched in the plane of the fantastic and grotesque. None of it seems art to all human, and if “Salome” is a “moving tapestry,” as some one vaguely put it, “Salome” is an intricate pattern come to life.

MAIL—Nazimova portrays a chaste, ice-like and passionless Salome. Even while she tempts Jokanaan, the prophet, she gives the impression that she is moved more by curiosity to see the prophet betray some human weakness than by first love. Nor does she exhibit enough feeling in professing her love for Jokanaan after he has been beheaded to make the scene altogether convincing.

EVE WORLD—We thoroughly agree with the verdict of the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays of the National Board of Review, viz., that Nazimova’s screen version of “Salome” is well worth waiting for.

TELEGRAM—The most unusual picture of the present season.

SUN—Of course, the success of the picture rests on the poignant charm of Nazimova herself. In fantastic head dresses and very brief costumes she plays the role of the passionate princess with studied consciousness.

“Sure Fire Flint”—Mastodon

CAMEO

WORLD—With its ample supply of “action” views and its “cameo,” “Sure Fire Flint” ought to go well in the film houses throughout the country.

TRIBUNE—“Sure Fire Flint” is the best thing Mr. Himes has done. It is amazing that man’s versatility. He can dance, and how he can play pool! There are new motor races and train wrecks, and heroines locked in cages, and all the time a mystery, which starts in the first reel, and which you forget all about until it is solved in the last reel.

In justice to “Sure Fire Flint” we wish to say that it has a better plot than nine-tenths of the photodramas conceived.

WORLD—There’s one thing mighty certain, and that is his latest picture will make for John a lot of friends. It’s good picture entertainment.

New Contract
As Planned by Actors Equity—Some of the Terms—No Strike Contemplated

The council of the Actors Equity Association has appointed a special committee to draw up the proposed standard contract for motion picture actors in the East, guided by the proposed standard form received Tuesday from Los Angeles. The main feature of this is a provision that a standard week's work shall consist of 48 hours.

Other provisions follow:
- An agreement as to the minimum length of time of the actors' employment shall be arrived at prior to each engagement.
- Actors shall agree to return to work for retakes or additional scenes after the completion of the picture at the same salary provided they are not otherwise employed.

Grainger Off On Trip
James R. Grainger, Vice President and General Sales Manager of Famous Players, left New York yesterday for an extended tour of the country during which he will visit the 27 Famous Players Exchanges. Grainger is delighted over the success of the pictures released by Famous Players for the first months of the season. "Conditions in all parts of the country are looking up," he said, "and 1923 will be a good year. All we need is confidence and good pictures."

"It is not apparent that there is a particular demand for any special type of picture. Reports that I have been receiving indicate that exhibitors are less demanding on famous names and more on good, sound, well produced stories. This is a healthy condition and gives producers just the incentive they need to turn out pictures that will win on their own merits." [Continued on page 3]

Natural Market
Of State Right Field the Neighborhood House, Says Producers Security

The result of a nation-wide survey made by Producers Security Corp. covering the state-right market indicates conclusively to the officials of the company that the outlook for 1923 for the independent distributor is very good, but that to cash in on his possibilities he must have real box-office values to mix in with his regular program stock, and that likewise it is just as important to have a line of program pictures as a few big box-office values.

Famous Players Reported Taking Over Entire Lynch Holdings in South—Exchanges as Well as Theaters—Lynch to Retire From Picture Field

It is reported that an important deal is under way between Famous Players and S. A. Lynch. As the story goes, if the deal is completed as outlined, it will mean the retirement of Stephen A. Lynch from motion pictures.

Under the plan outlined Famous Players will take over the exchanges now operated in the South by Lynch and Lynch will release Famous from the contract now in effect with Southern Enterprises by which the Lynch organization will be removed from all identity with Southern Enterprises and various allied corporations which are at present operating the so-called "Lynch string" in the South.

According to reports if the deal is closed it will mean that Lynch will retire from motion pictures.

Importance of Move
Probably no move within the industry holds as much interest as the probability of a deal between Famous Players and Lynch.

Some years ago, when Lynch left New York to undertake the distribution of Famous Players in the South he was immediately demanded instantaneous recognition by securing theaters all over his territory. He became an important factor in the distribution of Famous Players and other product but within a brief period became the most active buyer of theater properties in this country. So much so, that eventually Southern Enterprises was formed, and while Famous Players was practically the owner of this corporation the Lynch organization through a contract operated these properties on a percentage basis of the gross.

The Lynch plans were of such an

Only recently he acquired control of a patent medicine corporation which handles "Tanlac" and it is expected that he will devote the greater part of his time to this. He owns newspapers, movie agencies, and real estate throughout the South. His home is in Atlanta, Ga.

New Screen Reduces Stress

An improved screen is said virtually to eliminate eye strain and render the projected picture as clearly visible from a position at one side of the house as from a seat directly in front of the screen, says Popular Mech-

Chicago—Aaron J. Jones of Jones, 1.nick & Schaefer, says: "At last the sun of prosperity is peeping over the horizon of the period of discontent and chill for the theatrical industry in general. The patient has passed the crisis and is on the fair road to recovery. The past three years have been a veritable slough of despond, but the bright rays of approaching prosperity will dry up all signs of depression, and the year of 1923, without doubt, will be the greatest normal theatrical year since the ball days before the disaster of the world were steeped in the recent war."

The survey includes the following:
"It is evident that in the scramble for pictures of a larger size the necessity of the small town exhibitor and the neighborhood house, who must put on a daily change, might be overlooked. The natural market of the state-right exhibitor naturally is the neighborhood groups and other houses running from four to six changes per week. Most of the first-run accounts are so locked in with the national distributing organizations that it is only occasionally that an independent distributor, operating under state-rights, can put his picture in for a first-run. He must therefore look to the smaller houses for his revenue, and if he expects those houses to stay in business and to pay him the kind of prices he must have for the more important pictures, the result is that the independent distributor is the one to take care of the demand and to furnish very good entertainment at a fair price.
"Never before has the state-right exhibitor had such a splendid opportunity to make himself the only associate of the independent exhibitor in his field."

"My American Wife"—F. P.-L.
Rivoli

AMERICAN—Good story.

TRIBUNE—"My American Wife" is another one of those elaborate films which always surround Miss Swanson—perhaps not as elaborate as a DeMille Picture, but pretty elaborate for all that. And Sam Wood brought a real horse on in the haphazard scene. Something to be noticed: We believe Mr. DeMille has not yet thought of.

SUN—One of Miss Swanson's best pictures, for she is more restrained than usual, and is not in her familiar role of vamping her way to success against the discouraging attitude of numerous llevaring cavaliers who hold she is not better than a pretty lady, and to be treated as such.

TELEGRAM—"My American Wife" is a beautiful production laid in the Argentines.

MAIL—Will please people who like stories about so-called high society, horse racing and life in South America. It will also please those who like Gloria Swanson. How large a proportion of the public has any or all of these tastes can be determined only by the future success of the picture.

“The Strangers banquet”—Goldwyn

CAPITOL

WORLD—The picture really hangs upon a conflict between labor and capital, with several love stories embroidered on the social fabric. The story is rather difficult to follow if one is seeking plot effects, but the beauty of the photography makes it acceptable to the eye at all times.

TIMES—Neilan has a knack for spirited narration; he selects good casts, as a rule, and gives the masses of the people a chance to play for him, and, when he avoids the excesses to which he is sometimes tempted, he can make moving pictures mean more and mean it quicker than almost any other decently cast director.

AMERICAN—It contains what many pictures lack—a dramatic opening. The picture moves swiftly, with few reminiscent cut-ins.

NEWS—This photoplay certainly belongs on your holiday film shopping list. It is novel, it is interesting from the opening scene to the last, it presents for your approval the 1923 type of motion picture hero. It is full of human beings; in short it is a Neilan picture.

TRIBUNE—This picture does not seem like a Marshal Neilan production. It lacks humor, and we do not mean by that comedy. There is a vast difference. But it is interesting if familiar and has in it a cast of wonderful collection of stars. Some of them have such small parts that Mr. Neilan seems almost prodigal in his casting.

HERALD—Neilan knows a great deal about motion pictures. When he wants to he can be more forcibly expressive than any actor in the business. He can outdo ideas with a terrific punch, and do it in a way that is essentially his own work, but it is frighteningly inconsistent.

SUN—Indeed a feast for the eye, but it occasionally suffers from the uneventfulness which comes with a multitude of courses. The honors of recipes are splendid, but toward the end the entire goes a bit flat, and the dessert is somewhat insipid. The climax of Marshall Neilan's latest picture, one might say, lacks the consistent robustness of ham eggs.

TELEGRAM—The finest thing to come out of this young director. The story is a thrilling and dramatic one, bringing to the busy yards of a great shipbuilding concern.

EVE. WORLD—This is Neilan's first production under the Pioneers banner at Goldwyn, and he has done both himself and his new associates proud in turning out what we think is one of his best.

MAIL—Almost epic in its proportions. The chief fault with so many pictures nowadays is a thin story padded to make a five or six reel picture. Here the handicap is in the other direction. There is material enough for half a dozen plays.

GLOBE—It has been said that with the single exception of D. W. Griffith the only producer whose name has any drawing power at the box-office is Marshall Neilan. Why this condition exists is made plainly evident by a viewing of "The Strangers Banquet." It is an all-star cast of separate scenes is concerned this picture is as nearly perfect as any ever shown on Broadway.

Northwest Notes
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Butte, Mont.—The Ansonia Amuse Co. will show pictures in the Broadway, a legitimate house.

Seattle—R. C. Montgomery has resigned from the local F. B. O. staff. W. E. (Bill) Bonham will travel out of the Seattle office.

Metro reports confirmation of the loss of "Hard Luck" and " Burning Daylight" in the Astoria fire. They were booked at the Columbia.

Arrow in Seattle, will have the Northwest distribution of the Woman's Home Companion films which will be released day and date with the publication of the magazine.

Spokane—A. J. Bischell, of the Rex, has taken over the Paramount, Lewiston, formerly operated by A. H. Hilton. It has been closed since August.

Honqiam, is to have a new house which will be operated by G. M. Terry, the recently sold his Rex at Spokane. Construction has just begun. The house will seat 800.

John Harrick owner of a claim of Blue Mouse theaters in the Northwest, has launched a Singers Popular Contest in his Seattle, Portland and Tacoma houses. Judgment is to be made by the audiences. Prizes aggregate $1,000 in gold.

The employer shall have the right to make any changes or eliminations in the scenario provided the minimum term of employment is not thereby reduced. Should such changes in the scenario eliminate the part entirely provided the actor is notified prior to the commencement date of the contract, the employer may cancel the contract by paying the actor one week's salary.

Frank Gillmore, executive secretary of the Equity, stated that a movie strike is not contemplated. He said that will H. Hays and other film leaders had given a sympathetic hearing to the proposals of the motion picture actors. His criticisms, he explained, had not been directed at the first grade picture companies, but applied to difficulties which had been experienced with certain other producers.

There was no information forthcoming from the Hays office yesterday regarding the Actors Equity contract.

Montreal Taxes
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Montreal—Theaters here pay enormous taxes. First there is an annual license fee of $500 and another fee of 30 cents per seat; special tax for operators and electricians; civic assessment on premises; special taxes on canopies, electric signs, motors and boilers; civic taxes, snow cleaning, etc., and also the business tax. Apart from these levies are the Amusement tax of 10 per cent and the censorship fees.

Sherlock Puzzle Puzzles

Tulsa, Okla.—The manager of the Majestic, got his townsmen puzzled into attending a screening of "Sherlock Holmes," through a new variation in the co-operative page advertising stunt.

He took one of the "Sherlock Holmes" stills, cut it into twenty-three segments and printed one or two segments in each ad that appeared on the page. Free tickets to the Saturday matinée were offered to all persons who cut out the segments and correctly pasted them together and presented them at the box office.

Hundreds of solutions were handed in.

Bonni Works in Chicago

Chicago—An effective advertising campaign was held in conjunction with the booking of Goldwyn's "Broken Chains" at Balaban & Katz, Chicago, under the supervision of Eddie Bonni, of New York and Walter D. Neal of Goldwyn's Chicago branch.

A strong newspaper campaign, including full page advertisements, billboards on every elevator station for two weeks prior to the opening and a "Traveling Billboard," consisting of a truck carrying two large painted scenes and a six sheet on the rear helped considerably, as did tie ups with the United Cigar Stores and the Weed Tire Chains Company.

Another good stunt was having Nimmo Black, aviator, fly over the city with his plane covered with signs painted in 16 foot letters. Twenty thousand cards were dropped into the streets from the plane for live consecutive days.

Using Racial Propaganda

Detroit — The exploitation of "Hungry Hearts" at the Broadway Strand, Christmas week, resulted in the most extensive propaganda among the Jewish people as has been known in this city, conducted by Phil Gleichenh and John Wistach, Detroit Goldwynner.

The European Jewish Women's Welfare Assoc. handled 5,000 tickets on a percentage basis. The membership of 1,500 went to work with a will.

The picture was endorsed by the leading Jewish Lodge, B'nai Brith, and the United Jewish Charities, as being of great benefit to the race, because of its sympathetic appeal.

The B'nai Brith printed an editorial supporting the picture in its official organ, "The Jewish Chronicle," "The Jewish Today," and "The Forward" were advertised in extensively, and carried favorable editorial comment.

Five thousand folders, and five hundred cards in Yiddish were distributed in the Jewish neighborhood. Newspapers and billboards were both used strongly. The Detroit Times used a "Hungry Hearts" story with a seven column heading splash across the page.

"Police Left in Good Humor After Frame-Up"

Lawrence, Mass.—Fred Demara of the Palace got the whole town on its guard against Boston Blackie, after the latest, and mount law, international crooks—"The Face in the Fog." Demara sent a message from Boston to the chief of police and the mayor, telling them to be on the look-out for the famous crooks and "if you see or hear anything of the 'Face in the Fog,' that's the cue, Watch out!"

The police suspected a hoax but played safe, put out detectives and gave the story to the newspapers. The police were sore at first, but Demara gave each officer a pass, and now they're laughing about it. The chief came through with a published endorsement.

Red Lights Fan "Flame"

Danville, Ill.—For the showing of "The Eternal Flame" at the Fisher, the manager used a striking night ballyhoo. A flat wagon was draped in red and drawn by horses blanketed in red. The driver was masked out and in the center of the wagon the lettering, "The Eternal Flame" was illuminated by an artificial flame of red lights. Thin paper streamers whirled in the air by a concealed electric fan gave the effect.

Among a dozen tie-ups effected by the theater a novel one was that with the heating and lighting company which used the sign: "The Eternal Flame" of love lights your lives. Let the  heater heat your home.

Small bottles of perfume were given away to ladies attending the opening night, a tie up with the manufacturer by which four gross of these sample bottles were donated and two gross more were bought by the theater. As a result of the deal the retail store handling the line of cosmetics arranged a handsome window display for "The Eternal Flame."

Winking Contest

Sharon, Pa.—The winking contest, used with such success by Jacob Fabian when First National's "East is West" played the Regent Theater, Paterson, N. J., was sold to a newspaper as a circulation building idea when the picture played the Liberty. The Sharon Herald footed the bill for the contest, including the prize awards because of its faith in the idea to build reader interest. The only expense incurred by the exhibitor consisted of the slides used to advertise this exploitation in his theater.

Millions Involved With Famous Taking Over Lynch Interests in the South—Best of Feeling Prevails—Lynch One of Largest Stockholders in Famous—Michaelove Probably General Manager

As exclusively announced in yesterday’s issue of THE FILM DAILY, a deal involving millions was practically closed yesterday between Famous Players and Stephen A. Lynch.

As a result, an important official of Famous Players, will become president of Southern Enterprises. Dan A. Michaelove will be retained in all likelihood, as general manager. It is understood that the personnel of the Lynch organization will remain practically intact excepting that Y. Frank Freeman, who has practically been in charge of Southern Enterprises, will become the president of the corporation controlled by S. A. Lynch, which handles “Talk.” E. C. Holcomb, Lynch’s former treasurer in Southern Enterprises, also goes with the Tanac organization.

Franklyn in Charge
The practical operation of the 100 or more houses in the Lynch string will be in the hands of Harold B. Franklyn for Famous. The exchanges will, of course, be directed by S. R. Kent.

Best of Feeling Prevails
It is understood that the very best of feeling exists between all parties concerned in the deal. While Lynch will sever his connection actively with the picture industry, he will still retain his large stock holdings in Famous Players, and those who in the know say that he is probably one of the largest stockholders of the corporation.

Lynch, Freeman and Michaelove who have been here closing the transaction, left yesterday for Atlanta.

It is said that Lynch will immediately organize a trust company in Atlanta with capital of $5,000,000.

Hodkinson Secures Clifton Feature
“Down to the Sea in Ships” produced by Elmer Clifton has been secured for release by W. W. Hodkinson. Clifton was at work a long time on this special which has for its particular thrill the overturning of a ship loaded by men by a whale; the subsequent capture of the whale, and a lot of material devoted to whaling. The production was made in and around New Bedford, the Caribbean Sea and off Hatteras.

Says Laemmle Relative to Production Costs—Universal’s Plans

The following has been received from Carl Laemmle.

“Editor, The Film Daily:

“I've never seen quite so much good, sound, common sense packed into a small space as you packed into your brief remarks about "Negative Costs" in your Tuesday issue of the Film Daily. You not only had your figures and your facts straight, but you showed exactly what they meant, where they are leading to and where they get off. It may interest you to know that you have almost exactly summed up the Universal's future policy. We are going to make more and more negatives for less than $100,000 apiece and less and less negatives costing over that amount, for the very reason given in your story. "You've given a wise suggestion to the whole industry on how to start the new year on the right foot and I congratulate you."

Dear Danny:

I have read with interest the troubles of Clem Dencker of Split Lip and Pneumonia, Nevada. Seeing that these people are working up a good big circuit and that they can’t get anything better to run than “Annie’s Aching Adams’s Apple” and “Lena’s Load.” I have a bright idea. Please take this up with Mr. Dencker and maybe he can get some actors and a producer to produce my scenario. For fear that some of the producers and scenario writers will steal my thought, I will only explain the action of one scene.

In this particular scene, the villain drives a hole in the bottom of a large ocean liner. Of course, the boat (Continued on Page 8)

In the Courts

A confession of judgment by Herbert Brenon in favor of Messmore Kendall for $8,453 has been filed in the Supreme Court. Mr. Brenon stated that he borrowed $5,600 from Mr. Kendall in 1914, which, with interest since that time, makes the amount of the judgment.

A default judgment for $3,722 against the Motion Picture Post has been entered in the Supreme Court by the Ad Press for work, services and materials.

The Ascher Features, Inc., filed suit in the Supreme Court against Ralph Spence for $15,000 damages. The complaint alleges that in May, 1920, an agreement was made by the defendant with Sidney Ascher, Joseph A. Jacob and James L. Burke, who have assigned their claim to the defendant to persons named to buy negatives and certain positive films of "The Gentleman Crock" and form a distributing company for it, and Spence was to re-edit, cut and finish the films and put them in shape for distribution, and have completed it by July, 1920. It is alleged that they paid $1,500 for the films, spent $500 additional, and recognized the ownership of Humor Films, Inc., as distributor at a cost of $600. After the films were delivered to the defendant, it is alleged that he did nothing with them and refused to return them.

The Appellate Term has dismissed a suit of Mildred Travers, child actress, against Plymouth Films for $100.

Bray Sales

Contracts have been closed for Bray Magazine and Bray Nature Pictures, with the Motion Picture Dis. Corp., Boston, for New England territory; and with Renown Pictures, New York, for New York State and Northern New Jersey territory.

Daab Studio Publicist

Hyatt Daab, for three years connected with the advertising and publicity department of F. B. O., has left for Los Angeles, where he will be in charge of the R-C Studio publicity department.

Ben Grimm will occupy the position left vacant by Daab.

Second National Plans

Second National Pictures announce for the new year that American made productions exclusively will be handled hereafter. They say that American production companies now are under agreement to deliver their entire product to Second National Magazine Films, and Better Day Pictures, producers of the Bruce Barton editorials.

Big Pay

Gossip out here is to the effect that Fitzgerald, Inc., has brought suit in the Supreme Court against the Motion Picture Company for $30,000 a year with Famous, and that he has had several offers from producers ranging around $50,000 a year. The offer of S. M. Goldwyn, however, is said, has killed off all other bidders. Ouida Bergere, Fitzgibbons, and all, it is understood, be included in the deal, to handle scenarios.

So far as is known in the East the only productions which Goldwyn has arranged for is the picturization of "Christmas Shoes" & Perlmutter. This type of material is quite different from what Fitzmaurice has made for Famous, and in all likelihood Fitzmaurice will not handle this production.

Nothing has come from the Coast to indicate where Goldwyn will release his productions.

"Robin Hood" at Capitol

"Robin Hood" will go into the Capitol at the end of this month for an indefinite run.

Shipman's Distribution

Toronto—Canadian Educational Films will handle the physical distribution of all the Ernest Shipman Canadian-made productions. The selling forces will be headed by William Cranston at Toronto, and by Burke and West at Montreal.

Chadwick Pictures Again in Field

Chadwick Pictures Corp., will again enter the field distributing in the open market. I. E. Chadwick who operates Merit will be president, and Jacques Kopstein general manager.

"David Copperfield" Here

Andre Olson, Nordisk Films, is here with a print of "David Copperfield" made by the company. It is thought that an American edition will be prepared for presentation. Olson is at the McAlpin.

Warner's announces a version of "David Copperfield" with Wesley Barry and the Lesser organization is planning the sound version of "Little Heroes of the Street.""}

Cuts and Flashes

Ira H. Morgan will photograph "Little Old New York." Monte Blue, who has the lead in Warner Brothers' "Main Street" leaves for the coast Sunday.

Wesley Barry is here for a few days. He will leave for Cleveland shortly in connection with the showing of "Little Heroes of the Street."

Celia Krieger, after six months of work as a writer at the Warner studios, has returned to New York. At the Albert.

Daniel Carson Goodman, author and producer of "Has the World Gone Mad," is now cutting and editing this production. Actual filming was completed last week under the direction of J. Searle Dawley.

Here's the answer to a puzzle—

We often wonder why certain pictures go over so big. Pictures like "Humoresque," "Miracle Man" or "Over the Hill." Many of the greatest hits are without famous stories or famous stars. Why do they break box office records?

The answer is—

They make people feel what the screen doesn't show

Such pictures are rare but Edwin Carewe's "Mighty Lak A Rose" is one of them. It is from Curtis Benton's original story of high society and low society.

It has a title the whole world loves.
Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Battle Scene Boosts Picture

Knoxville, Tenn.—A simply constructed battle scene showing incidents from “Hurricane’s Gal,” did more good to the Strand than their usual advertising policy. The scene pictured U. S. destroyers in pursuit of the “Tahiti Belle” and was lavishly colored and mounted.

Banners Form Barricade on Horizon

Stamford, Conn.—Manager Sam Weiss of the Allamaba is away from the center of the town. To remedy this he put 30 foot banners and spotted on the tops of buildings in the main section of the town, advertising “Oliver Twist,” that dominated the horizon in all directions and brought people away from the main section to his house.

Playlet Contest

Louisville, Ky.—In preparation for a week engagement of “Oliver Twist” at the Mary Anderson here, Manager George A. Wine offered a $50 prize for the best 20 minute one act play based upon any incident in Dickens’ “Oliver Twist.” The Mary Anderson remained in the background, the contest being sponsored by the Louisville Theater Guild and publicized by the Times and the Courier Journal.

Ten Thousand Dimes Do Good Work

Sharon, Pa.—Ten thousand dimes placed in a window of the McDowell National Bank, helped to exploit “The Light in the Dark” when that attraction played the Liberty. This display was part of a tie-up effected with the bank and was visualized by a card with this plan “Come out of the dark and into the light, open a savings account and start the New Year right by seeing ‘The Light in the Dark’ at the Liberty.”

Telegrams Boost “Sonny”

York, Pa.—Manager Kelly of the Orpheum sprang a variation on the usual postcard and “teaser” campaign when he sent out 400 teaser telegrams a part of the exploitation of First National’s “Sonny.” The wire read “Am coming home. Meet me at Orpheum tonight. Sonny.” By a judicious selection of those to whom the telegram was sent this stunt resulted in word of mouth advertising that well repaid.

Uses Diamond Display

Salt Lake City—Anything worth $10,000 is bound to attract attention and the display for “Pink Gods” was worth just that.

George Carpenter of the Paramount, Empire Theater, and Rick Ricketson, Paramount exploiter, tied up Boyd Park, the leading jewelry store for a display of diamonds in the windows to the wonderment of the Cullinan, Star of India, and others, together with mounted stills from the picture.

Coast Brevities

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Hollywood—Henry MacRae will leave shortly for Siam to film a series based on Samson’s life.

Noah Beery will support Viola Dana in “Her Fatal Millions” which John Arnold will photograph.

Harold McCord has arrived from New York to edit Selznick’s “The Common Law.”

“Vanity Fair” is finished. Eleanor Boardman will have the leading role in “Tales for Sale.”

James W. Horne, formerly with Universal and Inc, will direct Ethel Clayton in “The Greater Glory,” her third production for F. B. O.

“Too Many Lovers,” starring Baby Natty, has been finished. Herman Raymaker and Sig Neufeld are working on her next to be made on her return from the East.

Doris May, Harry Myers, Hobart Bosworth, Miss Dupont, Bryant Washburn and Phyllis Haver have been added to cast of Selznick’s “The Common Law.”

Noah Beery has been engaged by the Warner Brothers to play the part of Adolf Valborg in the screen version of Sinclair Lewis’ novel, “Main Street,” being directed by Harry Beaumont.

Camera work on Chaplin’s “Destiny,” starring Edna Purviance, has been resumed, after two weeks illness of Miss Purviance. The production will be released through United Artists.

Shooting has begun on Universal’s “Nobody’s Bride,” starring Herbert Rawlinson, Herbert Blache is directing. Cast includes Edna Murphy, Alice Lake, Harry Van Meter, Frank Brownlee, Philip Van Zandt, Lilian Langdon, Robert Dudley and Sidney Bracy.

H. E. GAUSMAN.

Hays on Arbuckle
Issues Final Statement — Says Question Must Be Left to Public

The following statement was issued by Will Hays yesterday on the Arbuckle matter, and refers to the suggestions and comments of all kinds and from all quarters that have been received by him. This, it is said, will be the final word on this matter. Says Hays:

"All suggestions which have been received from all viewpoints, and they are many and varied, will be returned to the proper parties. This is the kind of question that must be left finally to the judgment of the public. There is no Table on the one hand, and on the other hand to those who have business associations with the individual and the individual himself. I have removed the artificial situation of a man being or appearing to be the judge in such matters either for one hundred and ten million people, or for a great industry and art. Such a condition in the development of a business is absolutely undemocratic, economically, and from every other standpoint, and permanently must not be. A temporary framework or scaffolding may be a very valuable suggestions and comments of all kinds and from all quarters that have been received by him. This, it is said, will be the final word on this matter. Says Hays:

Arbuckle Working?
So Reported on Coast But Not Believed in East — Frisco Capital Involved

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Hollywood — It is reported here that Gavin McNab, one of the leading attorneys on the coast, who defended Arbuckle in the three San Francisco trials, has gathered together a group of San Francisco financiers, who have organized a motion picture producing corporation to be capitalized at $100,000.

The new film producing organization, which probably will seek a location in Los Angeles for production purposes, will be directed by Attorney McNab, but it will be Arbuckle's company and the copulent comedian will be its active head.

It is also said here that McNab has denied the report that he was interested in financing Arbuckle.

In New York the report is discredited.

The Hays Committee on Public Relations in a resolution adopted Thursday disapproves of Arbuckle pictures being shown.

Johnny Hines, Doris Kenyon and Robert Edeson in one of the peppy scenes from "Sure Fire Flint." Presented by Mastodon Films, Inc., this C. C. Burr production has been the talk of Broadway during its engagement at B. S. Moss' Cameo theatre this week.—Advt.

Goldwyn Gets "Merry Widow"

Goldwyn has purchased the picture rights of "The Merry Widow." Von Stroheim will probably direct.

"Willat With Technicolor"
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Boston — "Doc." Willat, one of the best known in the old-time pioneers, has flown up in Boston where he will stay for some time to come. Doc is the practical mechanical chief of Technicolor, being the link between the scientific theorists in the company and the theater screen actuality.

Big Business at Capitol

The Stranger's Banquet," Neilan's latest, is reported to have broken all records at the Capitol this week with the exception of "Passion," which did about $53,000 the first week of its run. The Neilan picture would have been held over had it not been for a series of bookings, which would not permit of extension. The booking condition at the Capitol has resulted in "Robin Hood" being delayed from Jan. 21 to Jan. 28. There is some talk of bringing "The Stranger's Banquet" back later.

Off On Mission

Sidney Garrett sells for London for Associated Exhibitors and Other Matters

Sidney Garrett, of Inter-Globe Export, sold today on the Majestic for London. While there he will look into several matters of importance regarding Associated Exhibitors' product, and will also take up with Ideal Films and Gaumont (Bromhead's) several productions so far as American rights are concerned. One of these is the Ideal production of "Habour Lights," made by Tom Terriss and featuring Tom Magee, and the other "The Hawk," in which Charles Hutchison is starred. The Bromhead's new picture, Terriss under contract for a special which, it is said, will be made in Egypt, and for which a number of important American stars are being courted. Garret signed Wanda Hawley for one of the leading parts just before sailing. He will be away about six weeks.

In Russia

Producing and Distributing Arrangements Weak — Fox and Paramount Popular

According to Charles Recht, Soviet attorney here, picture conditions in Russia are very promising. A special government department, the "Photo-Kine," headed by Libermann, a former engineer, has been formed to foster and encourage the building of theaters and picture making in Russia must be licensed by this bureau. There are four producing companies, Moscow, Russ-Screen and Falke, engaged in mak—(Continued on Page 2)

It's a Business

F. B. O. is claiming a record for booking the smallest theater in the country. A report from a Los Angeles sales representative shows that he recently sold a contract to the Simpson theater, with a post office address of Niland, Cal. This theater stands on the prairie a mile and a quarter from the nearest habitation. The total population is two consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Simpson. The rest of the audience is drawn from the farmers and ranchmen within a radius of 20 miles—all of whom are forced to cross a mile and a quarter of the Imperial Valley desert before reaching this unique "neighborhood" house.

Giannini Dined

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Hollywood—Joe Schenck and Sol Lesher were hosts at a luncheon tendered at the Ambassador to Dr. A. H. Giannini, prior to his departure for the East. The Doctor again voiced his well known objections to honories paid for loans from banks and banksters. Among those present were Mack Sennett, Thomas H. Ince, Abraham Lehr, J. F. Goddol, J. D. Williams, W. W. Sennett, M. C. Levey, Ben P. Schultt, A. L. Gore, Adolph Ramish, Michael Gore, Irving M. Lesser, Michael Rosenberg, Mario Hellman, Jack Cohen, Samuel Varnum, Jack Sam, and Harry Warner. J. G. Bachman, George Lichtenberger, Sun Goldwyn, John W. Comick, A. L. Bernstein, Montague Glass, Edwin Carew and Harry D. Wilson.

ing pictures now. The fear of these, Pakel, is also a distributing concern. While producing is going on at an encouraging rate, because of government aid, and the plethora of artists and actors at liberty, distribution is quite another matter. On account of the size of Russia, the scattered locations of the houses, and the exportation facilities, this is quite a difficult task. The government department is lending as much aid as possible, while local distributing concerns, such as the Northwesterns, are trying to meet the problem locally. In addition to studios, laboratories are being erected; foreign experts being employed largely for this purpose.

All this work is under government supervision and control; but the government is not financially interested in the companies. The Russians have as their favorite star an Armenian, Moisse, who started in a Russian melodramatic production, “Women of the 100 Years.” It was completed about a year ago. The big German feature, “Lady Hamilton” is a favorite Russian film; as is every Russian picture yet seen. “Lady Hamilton” was bought by a Russian for a sum equaling $800 in American money. Fox and Paramount pictures are seen very frequently. The more melodramatic pictures are the better they are liked. Admissions scale from 5 to 25 cents.

Forbes Forecast

B. C. Forbes, in Forbes Magazine, forecasting 1923, says in part: “All this work is under government supervision and control; but the government is not financially interested in the companies. The Russians have as their favorite star an Armenian, Moisse, who started in a Russian melodramatic production, “Women of the 100 Years.” It was completed about a year ago. The big German feature, “Lady Hamilton” is a favorite Russian film; as is every Russian picture yet seen. “Lady Hamilton” was bought by a Russian for a sum equaling $800 in American money. Fox and Paramount pictures are seen very frequently. The more melodramatic pictures are the better they are liked. Admissions scale from 5 to 25 cents.

If I were to confine my forecast to the opening months of 1923, I would, with a fair degree of confidence, a continuation of the improving trend which has been under way for many months. “But when I try, as I have tried most earnestly and persistently, to read the outlook for the second half of the year, I confess that so many questions and objections come into my mind that I hesitate to make any definite predictions by way or other. I am sorry to have to say that the scales threaten to tip toward the unfavorable rather than the favorable side. * * *”

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Mary Carr Double Helps
Youngstown, O.—A simple stunt that netted all sorts of publicity as well as increased dollars to the Park during the showing of “Silver Wings” was the one initiated by Manager Joe Shaggir who secured the services of a lady who resembled Mary Carr and who dressed in similar clothes. Three days before the opening she walked through the principal streets of Youngstown giving away small handkerchiefs which contained the inscription: “See Mary Carr in Silver Wings at the Park Theater starting Sunday.” So great were the requests for these souvenirs, that police were used to hold the crowd in check.

Merchants Tie-up With “Confidence”
San Francisco—Ben Westlake, Universal exploiter here seized upon the title of the Herbert Rawlinson picture playing at the Frolic for an advertising tie-up. The picture was called “Confidence” and Westlake convinced three big San Francisco merchants that Confidence meant a lot in their business. One was a big music store and the others clothing stores.

Each of the stores took a quarter-page ad, which together with the Frolic ad for “Confidence” made up a page lay-out in the San Francisco Daily News. A big streamer across the top of the page announced “The merchants below merit your Confidence both for quality of merchandise and for price.” The word “Confidence” was featured at the top of each ad. The merchants were delighted at the opportunity to tie-up with such a good- will establishing display.

Insures “Monte Cristo”
Charleston—As the result of an exploitation campaign conducted by the Capitol, during the recent showing of “Monte Cristo,” the leading newspaper of the city carried a three column photograph and story, part of which follows:

“The picture, ‘Monte Cristo’ is the first that has ever been insured in Charleston. The management of the Capitol, realizing the value of the films, and taking into consideration the expense to which they were going to get it, have followed in the line of many other amusement places, and taken out a policy for $6,000, insuring the films against loss by theft or any other manner. There have been but few copies of the picture made, and the show is being run in Charleston is the first outside of New York where it is now playing.

“The firm is Patterson, Bell and Crane, through H. B. Littaker, their agent issued the policy, and one of the clauses called for an armed guard to accompany the film from the station to the theater.”

Ties Up With Newly-weds
Lawrence, Mass.—Fred Demara of the Palace believes the love-stuff is sure-fire after a couple has just hooked-up, so he established a “ Newly-Weds Night” for the run of “The Impossible Mrs. Bellev.” He secured a list of the month’s marriages from the County Clerk, numbering 104. PASSES were sent to all of them and 97 showed up. The newly-weds raved over a picture of true love, and the next day the receipts took a jump.

Poppies and Cartes
Newark, N. J.—Three city sprinkling carts were used to exploit the Strand by Manager O’Crowley and showing of “The Sin Flood,” at the W. R. Ferguson, Goldwyn exploitation man.

On the rear end of each cart was a big sign reading: “The Sin Flood” will sweep you away at the Strand. The carts covered most of the business section of the city and carried the signs for several days. The stunt was a simple one but proved one of the best attention-getters the Jersey town had seen during the season.

Perilous Situation Contest
Charleston, W. Va.—A new slant on a newspaper contest for “The Sin Flood” was used by the manager of the Capitol. He arranged with the Charleston Gazette to run the contest. The first prize was five dollars in gold, the second a two months’ pass to the Capitol, other prizes being two tickets each to “The Sin Flood.”

The prizes were offered for the best 250-word essays on the most perilous situation ever faced by the writers. More than 100 replies were received each day.

The winning essays were published in the Gazette daily and stimulated attendance.

“Lorna Doone” in Many Windows
New York—A new record for window tie-up was established during the run of “Lorna Doone” at the Strand here according to the check-up made by the Ince offices. More than 3,000 windows were secured. Here’s the list: I. Miller gave a display on Madge Bellamy shoes; F. O. A. M. Schwartz tied up the Lorna Doone book; Gimbel’s dressed a window on the Lorna Doone hat; The New York Manufacturing Retail store gave another window on the hat; Wannamaker’s gave a window on the hat, dress, umbrella and coat; Maurice Mantel shops gave a window on the coat; Macy’s used the umbrella for a window; Seven women’s specialty shops carried displays on the Lorna Doone dress; 75 windows featured the Lorna Doone song and 2,000 windows displayed the Lorna Doone Biscuit manufactured by the National Biscuit Co.

in The Flame of Life
A picturization from one of the famous novels by Frances Hodgson Burnett Universal-Jewel Hobart Henley Production
EVERY prediction has been fulfilled. Constance Binney in "A Bill of Divorcement" is superb entertainment.

In dramatic strength it even exceeds the power of the stage play which amazed New York, startled London and in Chicago lived up to its reputation as one of the biggest hits of 1921-1922.

Joe Dannenberg of Film Daily saw the feature and wrote "A fine picture—one that is going to start them talking because of the wallop it contains. For sheer dramatic entertainment it can hardly be surpassed."

The National Board of Review (Exceptional Photoplays, November, 1922) declares, "It has an essential merit deserving of wide appreciation."

Constance Binney's work is simply amazing. Her exquisite beauty lends an appealing background to her poignant interpretation of a daughter who sacrifices her own future for the happiness of a divorced mother and the salvation of a lonely father.

Fay Compton, Malcolm Keen, Henry Victor and others complete "an exceptionally capable and well suited cast and all credit is due Denison Clift, who made the picture," to again quote Film Daily.

Associated Exhibitors proudly proclaims Constance Binney in "A Bill of Divorcement," combining the name of an alluring star with the fame of a great stage play, as an emotionally perfect photoplay and a genuine first run attraction.

Splendid Production Values But No Kick in Nazimova’s “Salome”

Nazimova in “SALOME” Allied Artists

DIRECTOR .............. Charles Bryant
AUTHOR .................. Oscar Wilde
SCENARIO BY .......... Peter M. Winters
CAMERAMAN ............... Charles Van Enger

AS A WHOLE..... An artistic, somewhat daring and unusual production. May be difficult to put over as a financial success

STORY....... Oscar Wilde’s conception of Herod’s daughter given remarkably unusual treatment. Not the character known in opera

DIRECTION..... A bizarre conception of an unusual characterization

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Excellent
LIGHTINGS ...................... Splendid

STAR..... Still her unusual and artistic self. Gives a splendid performance

SUPPORT...... Satisfying; Mitchell Lewis excellent as Herod, Nigel de Brulier very good as John. Others unimportant

EXTERIORS ................. Practically none

INTERIORS...... Artistic; unusual. Designed by Natacha Rambova after Aubrey Beardsley’s quaintly clever original drawings

DETAIL...... Fair. Famous dance of seven veils not particularly thrilling

CHARACTER OF STORY...... They’ve tamed it down a lot. Any sixteen year old girl can see it with safety

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...... About 5,000 feet

When Oscar Wilde wrote his version of the story of Herod’s daughter and her voluptuous, passionate desires for John he used enough descriptive words to make very clear just what Salome was. When the opera was produced the big kick came in the tremendous passion with which Salome kissed the lips of the dead John who in life had scorned her love.

Alla Nazimova, always a great artist and always different, stands out supreme in her desire to do things her own way in the conception of the naive, sweet and childlike Salome which she presents in a production of rare artistic value. The Nazimova Salome is an imperious, self-willed child. She pouts and contorts her body in a gesture of supreme indifference even at the death of the handsome Captain of the Guard who loves her. She exhibits no particular pulsating passion for John, rather that of a spoiled child who, because she cannot get what she wants, cares nothing for what else happens. It is rather the selfish feeling of an adolescent than the fully developed passion of a woman that Nazimova portrays.

What was naturally expected to be a daring bit—the dance of the seven veils—is an extremely tame though artistic performance. If anyone in the audience was one-tenth as shocked as the banquet attendance on the screen appear they failed to show it.

Whether or not there is sufficient interest among the public to take to “Salome” remains to be seen. From a production viewpoint it is more than could be normally desired and artistic in the extreme. The star’s work is excellent and there is an ample display of her boyish figure. The cast has little to do.

For the “Artistic” Crowd Yes—For Others Figure It Out

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Here is a fine artistic production with a wellknown star. You know what an artistic production means to your clientele. If you happen to cater to this sort of a crowd, you can get this one by safely, but if you haven’t such a crowd you had better see this and figure it out carefully. Many of the so called thrilling bits naturally to be expected in a production of “Salome” are missing. There isn’t any wonderful dance of the seven veils and the love anguish of Salome over the lips of her dead lover carries little or no punch.

Of course if your people know, or if you want to tell them what the famous Oscar Wilde story is all about, it will undoubtedly create a certain amount of interest. But be careful of your promises other than that it is one of the most unusual and most artistic productions of the year. It is all of that, the only question is whether or not it has sufficient box office value to you.
Drama That Offers Variety of Appeal

Marshall Neilan’s production
“THE STRANGERS’ BANQUET”
Goldwyn

DIRECTORS....Marshall Neilan and Frank Urson
AUTHOR ..................Donn Byrne
SCENARIO BY............Marshall Neilan and Frank Urson
CAMERAMAN ..............David Kesson

AS A WHOLE......Contains many good exploitation angles and points of appeal; will please a good majority

STORY.......Has an unusual angle—too much of it for one feature

DIRECTION......At times very good and distinctive; gets away from the commonplace; often interrupts the continuity

PHOTOGRAPHY ...............Good

LIGHTINGS ..................Good

PLAYERS......A long list of particularly efficient and pleasing players including many prominent names such as Hobart Bosworth, Claire Windsor, Rockliffe Fellowes, Ford Sterling, Eleanor Boardman and Thomas Holding

EXTERIORS ..................Suitable
INTERIORS ..............Many of them attractive

DETAL ..................Fair

CHARACTER OF STORY......The conflict of capital and labor with a girl managing the ship yards of her late father and quelling the spirit of unrest

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION........8,153 feet
Regardless of what may be said either for or against “The Strangers’ Banquet” as a production, it is very likely that it will “take” with the average audience because there is such a wealth of varying incident and novel situations in it, and, on the whole, Marshall Neilan has made a very interesting picture as far as its individuality is concerned. It does get away from the usual routine of screen entertainment and the many odds and ends of audience appeal which Neilan has injected, make it worthy of special consideration.

and Has Been Excellently Produced

The picture has one weakness, however, that doesn’t fail to attract your attention and that is incoherence. Strange as it may seem the difficulty seems to have been that Donn Byrne’s story contained more material than they could comprehensively work into one feature even considering that Neilan’s picture runs over eight reels. The plot becomes highly involved and complicated and in his desire to supply the variety of atmosphere and incident which the theme embraces, Neilan interrupts the continuity with the result that the spectator is frequently confused and it takes a little while for him to catch up with the progress of the plot. There are also obvious evidences of a not over premeditated editing. The insertion of titles written in plain language would help to clarify matters considerably at times.

Neilan has assembled an unusually notable cast composed of many well known and capable players. Claire Windsor is very attractive and does very good work in the chief feminine role. Rockliffe Fellowes is especially well suited as Angus Campbell and there is a long list of others. Among those not previously mentioned are Eugenia Besserer, Nigel Barrie, Stuart Holmes, Claude Gillingwater, Tom Guise, Cyril Chadwick, Philo McCullough and Arthur Hoyt. It is undoubtedly a splendid company.

There is considerable that is convincing in the theme in connection with the conflict of labor and capital. It requires numerous sub-titles but Neilan also injects a good deal of force into the situations and there are other equally noticeable deft touches that mark him as a director of ability. A few of his clever, but somewhat delicate, “touches” may cause some comment where they aren’t “over their heads.” It is mostly suggestion, but quite obvious.

The story is too complicated and could hardly be done justice in a brief synopsis but it can be recommended for those who like something a little different with an attractive combination of entertaining elements.

Worth Careful Exploitation and Should Do a Good Business

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

“The Strangers’ Banquet” is Marshall Neilan’s first production under the Goldwyn banner and, all told, is a rather auspicious introduction. Undoubtedly Neilan’s production will prove a satisfying box office attraction because of the entertainment values which it contains and the variety of angles from which it may be exploited.

Use the director’s name prominently in your announcements and you might make it plain that the story—they may already be familiar with Donn Byrne’s novel—is somewhat out of the ordinary. This promise should prove thoroughly attractive particularly where they demand something new. The cast deserves special mention and there is a long list of names for you to use. Properly handled the picture should prove a profitable proposition.
The Greatest Box-Office Picture Nell Shipman Ever Made

A tremendous romance and melodrama of virgin Alaska.

A story of gold and frozen, snowswept wastes; of a duped girl who won her fight against Man and Nature in their most merciless mood.

Filled in a dozen great episodes with the famous animals that no other star has ever learned to handle so well.

The GRUB-STAKE

A Story of the Klondike

Directed by Bert Van Tuyle

in collaboration with the author

This tremendous eight-reel production could be played to amazing receipts nationally as a "road show." Miss Shipman and her distributors believe that pictures of this caliber should go to the established picture first runs to give them the success and earning that they need and deserve at this time more than ever before.

Prints of "The Grub-Stake" are now on the way to all American Releasing branch offices.
Jack Ford Makes Interesting and Entertaining Picture of Famous Poem

"THE FACE ON THE BARROOM FLOOR"

Fox

DIRECTOR ..................Jack Ford AUTHOR .................... G. Marion Burton
SCENARIO BY ............Eugene B. Lewis
CAMERAMAN .................George Schneiderman

AS A WHOLE .... A very interesting picture that has been skillfully made and offers a good entertainment

STORY .......... Particularly well constructed and executed; good box office possibilities in it and fine audience appeal

DIRECTION..... Excellent; there's a genuine agreeable surprise in the way Ford has done this

PHOTOGRAPHY ...............Very fine
LIGHTINGS ..................Good
PLAYER...... Henry B. Walthall gives a remarkably worth while performance; Ruth Clifford a suitable lead; others Frederick Sullivan, Alma Bennet and Norval MacGreagor

EXTERIORS..... Some very beautiful coast shots
INTERIORS .......... All right
DETAIL ................. Satisfactory

CHARACTER OF STORY.....Degenerate, once famous artist, relates incidents that caused his downfall, and paints the face of the woman on the barroom floor

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......5,785 feet

This is by far the best of the recent Fox specials and a great deal of credit is due Jack Ford for the success of the production. "The Face on the Barroom Floor" will undoubtedly prove an agreeable surprise for those who have been wondering just how the G. Marion Burton poem would be handled as a screen story. The result is very satisfying. It isn't often that a story, told through the use of flash-backs, maintains a comprehensive continuity or a well sustained interest but Jack Ford has succeeded in doing both.

In the first place it has been well constructed and very carefully treated. The characters are introduced in a way that secures your interest in them right from the start and maintains it throughout. The development is unusually good and Ford has built toward the climax with steadily increasing interest. His method of using the flash-back denotes extreme care and discretion. One reason for the success of picture is that Ford does not shift the action. The painter starts relating his story to a group gathered in a cafe and he remains there during the entire telling of the story. On the other hand there is the dinner party where those concerned in the past life of the painter are gathered. Through this definite placement the spectator does not lose track of events and the denouement is both comprehensive and consistent.

For those who prefer to have something left to their imagination, the first ending would be more desirable but probably from an average audience viewpoint, the epilogue scene, showing the regenerated artist reunited with his former love, will be the more appropriate.

Henry Walthall gives one of the best performances of his career as Robert Stevens, the hero of the famous poem. Walthall's portrayal is well worth seeing and it is doubtful if anyone could do it better. His emotional scenes are done with considerable restraint and sincerity. Ford allows a few too many shots of Walthall walking with his back to the camera. This registers effectively at first since it shows the man's weakness in his gait, but it is slightly overdone. Production values are very good. The photography is excellent and many of the coast shots very beautiful. The storm is rather mechanical but may serve for a fair thrill. The cast is first rate with Ruth Clifford a pleasing heroine.

Undoubtedly Contains Fine Possibilities For the Box Office

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Here's a very definite box office attraction and you have a title that should certainly draw a good business. Further than the drawing power of the title, you have a very worth while picture in back of it and a story with a good deal of sure-fire audience appeal. Everyone who has ever been anywhere at all has heard "The Face on the Barroom Floor." It would be well to have the showing preceded by a recital of the poem to refresh their memories and be careful to secure an appropriate musical accompaniment with a catchy theme melody.

The picture is the best of the recent Fox specials and with the proper boosting it should prove a thoroughly gratifying box office number. Let them know about the performance of Henry Walthall and make promises for his work. Use Jack Ford's name and above all, boost the title and say that it is a picture that will appeal to all and offend none.

Good Dramatic Material That Has Been Carefully Handled

"THE POWER OF A LIE"
Universal

DIRECTOR .................. George Archainbaud
AUTHOR ...................... Johann Bojer
SCENARIO BY ............... Charles Kenyon
CAMERAMAN ................ Charles Stumar

AS A WHOLE...... Average dramatic offering that has been satisfactorily produced and will please a majority

STORY....... Given a good treatment and interest is nicely sustained; contains several good dramatic moments DIRECTION .... First rate for a picture of this type; uses very good judgment usually

PHOTOGRAPHY .............. All right

LIGHTINGS ................. Good

PLAYERS...... Well suited and capable cast that includes Mabel Julienne Scott, David Torrence, Maude George, Earl Metcalfe and June Elvidge

EXTERIORS ................ Not many

INTERIORS ................. Suitable

DETAIL ..................... Adequate

CHARACTER OF STORY ..... Man lies to shield his reputation with the result that sister’s fiancé is accused of forgery

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 4,910 feet

For those who like more serious thinking stories, Johann Bojer’s "The Power of a Lie" will prove thoroughly interesting and a satisfying entertainment. The theme has been very well handled by George Archainbaud. There were several instances where he might have overdone things but the scenes are acted with considerable restraint and there is obvious indication of good judgment on the part of the director, particularly in the fact that he does not overdo scenes such as the rounders’ party, the fire or the trial. The last episode is quite a favorite topic for directors to dwell upon but Archainbaud does not carry it to extremes and there is no time wasted once the ending is in sight. The story moves along at a good pace with the interest well sustained throughout and the parts are in the hands of capable players.

David Torrence plays the fairly important role of the man who lied while Earl Metcalfe makes the most of the opportunities afforded by the part of the man injured by the lie. Mabel Julienne Scott is an attractive heroine and photographs nicely although the numerous close-ups accorded Maude George, as Torrence’s wife, would have been used to better advantage for Miss Scott. June Elvidge has an shining in the dinner episode when she hints that the husband of her hostess was the one who attended the midnight orgy which ended in a fire and the death of one of the party. Incidentally this bit is very well done from a directorial standpoint. Others in the cast are Ruby Lafayette, Philip Smaley, Stanton Heck and Winston Miller.

Archainbaud builds toward a first rate suspense in the climax and for a time the spectator cannot decide whether hero will really be convicted of the forgery charge. It is very likely that a good many will expect that the “mysterious woman” who attended the party and saw Hammond sign the note, will come forward and tell what she knows. The fact that they get around to the happy ending in a different manner makes it all the more unexpected and convincing.

Story: Hammond signs a note at the home of Burton where a party is in progress. A fire casts an unpleasant light on the affair and rather than have his wife know that he was at Burton’s, Hammond later infers that the signature is a forgery. Burton loses the love of Betty, Hammond’s sister, who later believes in him and tries to shield Burton by saying she saw Hammond sign the note. Hammond’s own confession saves Burton.

Will Appeal to a Good Many and Title Will Attract

Exhibitors catering to people who prefer more serious thinking stories or subjects dealing with situations that require more thought than a light, humorous feature, will undoubtedly please them with "The Power of a Lie." You could probably arouse considerable interest by using the title with catchlines although it is quite sufficient of itself to indicate the theme.

Say: “Have you ever thought what “The Power of a Lie” is? See how it threatened the life and liberty of an innocent victim of another’s lie in Universal’s latest attraction at the blank theater.” Of the players you might use the names of Mabel Julienne Scott, David Torrence, Earl Metcalfe and June Elvidge.

“MY AMERICAN WIFE”
Sam Wood Prod.—Paramount

DIRECTOR ..............................................................Sam Wood AUTHOR .............................................................Hector Turnbull
SCENARIO BY .......................................................Monte Katterjohn
CAMERAMAN ........................................................Alfred Gilks

AS A WHOLE...“Another Gloria Swanson picture” should cover it adequately; it is just what she usually does

STORY......Involves South American politics as a side issue with a pretty romance for the star as the main situation

DIRECTTION......Almost DeMille-ish at times; provides plenty of atmosphere and some spectacular effects

PHOTOGRAPHY .....................................................Very good
LIGHTINGS ..........................................................Good

STAR......Hasn’t exhausted her supply of bizarre headdresses or unusual evening gowns

SUPPORT........Antonio Moreno very well suited opposite for star and does good work; others Eric Mayne, Geno Corrado, Josef Swickard; Eileen Pringle and Walter Long

EXTERIORS .........................................................Appropriate
INTERIORS ................ Some big and lavish settings
DETAIL .................................................................Ample
CHARACTER OF STORY......Rich Kentucky girl disapproved by parents of South American aristocrat, wins him in spite of the objections

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..............6,061 feet

To say that “My American Wife” is anything more than another typical Gloria Swanson offering seems superfluous because it is just one more vehicle to show off Paramount’s dazzling star in another series of pictures that include lavish settings, attractive atmosphere, some spectacular effects and, of course, Miss Swanson in a number of gowns that give her added distinction as a purveyor of thrills from a sartorial viewpoint. There are also some more equally bizarre and uncomfortable looking headdresses which will certainly give her feminine admirers something to talk about. She certainly is in a class by herself when it comes to unique modes of hair dressing.

Other than the star’s appearance the picture is not especially attractive. It offers one or two slight thrills in the way of a horse race and a duel. Beyond that there is some sort of conflict between two factions of a South American community, with the son of each family striving for the favor of an American woman. Sam Wood tells the story nicely and has spent a good deal of money; too much in fact, to provide some spectacular effects such as the flower carnival, a lavish party and the elaborate ball. Of course these things dress the story up extensively but it is great waste of money when the material is not deserving of it.

There is some slight humorous relief but the theme is mostly dramatic with the climax affording a rather forceful conclusion. The American girl pretends to favor the son of De Grossa merely to further her scheme to expose him for the attempted assassination of her lover, Manuel. The exposition is made at the height of the grand ball and gives the picture a satisfying ending. The star’s gown of ermine tails, worn in this scene, will undoubtedly cause considerable comment. Antonio Moreno is a desirable leading man and does very good work in this.

Story: Following a duel in which Manuel La Tassa avenges an insult to Natalie Chester, an American girl, Manuel is nursed back to health by the girl. She leaves when his people object to her presence. To verify her suspicion that all was not fair in the duel, Natalie patronizes Manuel’s opponent, Pedro, and after gaining the necessary evidence exposes him at the grand ball, wins the admiration of Manuel’s people and is happy with him.

For Star’s Admirers Or Where They Want Pictorial Appeal

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You know best what returns the Gloria Swanson pictures bring you. If she is a drawing card and your folks are satisfied with the pictures in which she usually appears, you can feel certain there will be no exception in the case of “My American Wife.” The star appears to splendid advantage at all times and for the benefit of your women folks, don’t fail to mention the variety of new and dazzling costumes which she displays in this one.

Talk about the star’s new leading man. He has many admirers who will probably be anxious to see him playing opposite Gloria Swanson. It may be better to talk about the lavish settings and more or less spectacular atmosphere. It is what a good many people want to look at so attract their attention to “My American Wife.” Say it is a Sam Wood production and you might mention the race and duel for the action events.

Poor Judgment In Direction and Unpleasant Detail Mar the Story

Edward Sloman presents
"THE LAST HOUR"
Mastodon Films, Inc.—State Rights

DIRECTOR .................... Edward Sloman
AUTHOR ...................... Frank R. Adams
SCENARIO BY ............ Hylia Hollis
CAMERAMAN ................. Max Dupont

AS A WHOLE.......Crook melodrama that outruns all of the similar productions for sensational thrills and gruesome effects

STORY.......Told in too much detail that is unpleasant and at times repulsive

DIRECTION.......Should know better than to offer some of the scenes that are included here

PHOTOGRAPHY ...............All right
LIGHTINGS ................... Suitable

PLAYERS......Milton Sills too good an actor to be wasted on such material; Carmel Myers in a rut again; a fine cast on the whole but handicapped by poor story

EXTERIORS .................... Few
INTERIORS ................. Adequate
DETAIL ...................... Overdone

CHARACTER OF STORY......Based on the idea that "for every wrong done you pay here—not hereafter."

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......6,929 feet

It does seem that a director of experience, such as Edward Sloman, would certainly know better than to offer a production containing as many unpleasant sequences as "The Last Hour," a crook melodrama based on Frank R. Adams' story "Blind Justice." Just why Sloman saw fit to run into such a mass of repulsive detail as that depicted in at least two instances is inconceivable and unjustifiable. There is a wholly unpleasant touch early in the story when a youth suspected of a bank robbery, is shot down by a detective. This is followed a little later by the interruption of a dinner being tendered the governor by a political boss when the governor suffers a paralytic stroke at the table. This same man is given a further chance to depict the agony of such an affliction when he is called upon to sign a pardon. Sloman not only shows poor judgment in repeating this but also allows agonizing close-ups of Eric Mayne, who plays the part, blinking his eyes and otherwise denoting the effects of a stroke.

Sloman still further carries out his intention to provide sensational thrills in the climax, a masterpiece for long drawn out suspense arrived at through a series of the most unpleasant and objectionable scenes that have come to the screen in some time. Milton Sills, is the innocent man doomed to be hanged for the murder of a political boss who happened to be, himself, the murderer of Sills' brother. While Sills checks off the hours on the walls of his cell, Carmel Myers, his sweetheart, begs a pardon from the governor. His stroke prevents her success and she forges the signature. A taxi driver robs her and leaves her on a deserted road. Meantime the hour approaches for the hanging. The hanging apparatus is successfully tested and you see Sills being led from his cell with the usual procession.

Sills is blindfolded and there are close-ups of the hand ready to cut the rope. The real murderer, the girl's father, arrives to confess and save Sills but is knocked down by an auto at the prison gate. The order for the hanging is given but the ropes refuse to work and Sills' life is saved for another hour while the thing is put into order. If folks aren't worn out by this time they are a marvel for endurance. Those who do sit through it would undoubtedly be willing to vote a like penalty for Edward Sloman for ever giving them such a picture in the guise of entertainment. It just isn't and he should know better than to offer it as such. Frank Adams' story might have served for a satisfying crook melodrama but not in the forced, exaggerated fashion of Director Sloman.

Will Do For Sensation Lovers But Not As a Clean-Cut Entertainment

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You better see this one and make your own decision. The picture cannot possibly appeal to people with refined tastes. They will refuse to accept it because it depicts unpleasant incidents that hardly belong in subjects prepared for entertainment purposes. Where they go in for sensational themes, the picture will undoubtedly be approved but that is its only chance of appeal.

It is a pity such a good cast has been wasted. Nearly everyone is well known and certainly Milton Sills deserves a better opportunity than that afforded by the role of Steve Cline, ex-crook and ex-war hero. Incidentally the war is also brought into play. Carmel Myers is not well suited to the emotional part given her. Others are Pat O'Mally, Jack Mower, Alec Francis, Charles Clary, Walter Long and Wilson Hummell.

"The Social Buccaneer"—Universal
Type of production..........................10 chapter serial
Those who hunt excitement, regardless of plausibility of story will find much that will please them in Universal's latest chapter play. Starring Jack Malhail, whose work in the Jack London "Fish Patrol" series during the past few months may have kept him before your crowd, it manages to hold the interest in spite of the somewhat jumpy story, by Frederic Isham from his novel of the same name. The producers have played up the vogue for imaginary kingdoms defended by beautiful princesses who are rescued from peril by the brave American, and if your crowd is inclined to like this sort of thing they will be interested in knowing about it. A good supporting cast includes Margaret Livingston as the little princess, William Welsh, Harry DeVore, Robert Anderson, Lucille Ricksen, George Connors, Buck Conners, Sidney Bracy and others. Robert Hill has directed and credited for the scenario is given Anthony Coldeway and Burdette Brown.

The theme, in brief, trimmed of course with stunts to give the necessary thrills, is that of young John Norton, before the war a society darling, now returning home from the trenches a two-listed American to find his father in jail charged with theft from the bank of which he is president. The money, placed there by American authorities to safeguard it for Thorwald during the war, has been returned to Princess Elsie who is now on her way to receive it. John lets his father think he is still the top that he was before the war, but secretly he dons his old doughboy uniform and sets out to clean up the crooked gang that is the cause of the trouble. How he wins the love of the princess as the doughboy and her failure to recognize him as the top may prove a little far-fetched to the more critical but the rapid action will make up for slight deficiencies of this nature.

"Tea N. Tea"—Cameo—Educational
Type of production..........................1 reel comedy
A good number of laughs should be resultant from Jimmie Adams latest, which has been directed by Fred Hibbard. Virginia Vance is having a birthday party but Virginia is not interested in anyone but Jimmie. A fat boy who is in love with her starts to spoil the party and by several sweet little tricks manages to have the cook leave, break three or four chairs and generally upset things, finally putting T. N. T. in the birthday cake which explodes and wrecks everything but Jimmie's love. A negro, whose name is not given, manages to inject several laughs without much effort.

"Paste and Paper"—Hal Roach—Pathe
Type of production..........................1 reel comedy
Rather more mirth-provoking than the average run of Paul Parrot's offerings is this one-reeler, and it has a good chance of amusing your crowd. Parrot is a novice in the paper-hanging business and has everything possible happen to him while making a rush job of papering the drawing room of a fashionable family. There is a laugh at the finish when he has hung paper on all the walls, covering both windows and doors and making himself a prisoner. But members of the family rescue him by falling through the paper which is as surprising to them as to him.

"Hazel From Hollywood"—Christie—Educational
Type of production..........................2 reel comedy
Farce, comedy, melodrama and thrills are all to be found in Christie's "Hazel From Hollywood" in which Dorothy Devore and Henry Murdock are featured. Dorothy Devore does some very good work as the awkward young miss from Iowa who goes to Hollywood to become a star. She actually does break into the films by accidentally getting into a burning building in a serial scene and is accidentally rescued by the hero. The producer refuses to erect another building so that the real star can do the scene and continues the picture with Hazel. Henry Murdock, Hazel's hick sweetheart, comes to rescue her from the villains of Hollywood and wrecks many a scene in his efforts.
Your folks will probably enjoy the studio atmosphere where desert love scenes become mixed with wild west stuff. To add a little more plot, Hazel overhears three bank robbers planning to actually rob the local bank whose officials have agreed to permit a fake robbery to take place for a scene. After much excitement she arrives with the police just as the robbery is taking place. The picture has real entertainment value.

"Stung"—J. K. McDonald—Pathe
Type of production..........................2 reel comedy
Directed by Mason N. Litson this Johnny Jones comedy tells its pleasant little tale in a smooth, interesting fashion, that will hold the attention and interest of almost any audience. Johnny is ably assisted by his usual company of youthful players headed by little Gertrude Messinger. A young actor arrives in the little town from the city and proceeds to break up a love affair by taking charge of an amateur performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Johnny seeking to play a joke on him fills the donkey's head which the actor uses for the part of Bottom, with honey, but a swarm of bees, attracted to the honey fill the head instead. With eyes "stung" shut, the youth is seized by deputy sheriffs for running away with a partly paid for machine. This they sell to Johnny for the amount of the balance due and the love affair is patched up.

"The Terrible Tree"—Tony Sarg—Educational
Type of production..........................1 reel animated cartoon
Most artistic as well as entertaining is Tony Sarg's latest subject, which deals with an ancient knight's fabrications to his wife to account for his absence. He has been sent to get a basket of eggs and his flirtation with the egg dealers fair daughter causes the dealer to smash the eggs on his head. But he tells his wife a story of a terrible tree which became human in a most fantastic manner and held him in its claw-like branches. Will please a high-class clientele.

Type of production..........................1 reel magazine
There are some very beautiful shots showing the path of the sun on water in the section entitled Photographic Gems that prove worthy of the name. Tinted and toned they stand out as one of the high spots of the Review. Some pictures taken in the New York aquarium show the shark and his small followers, and the Pathe Color contribution shows "The Cities That Time Forgot," in the province of Gard, France.

IS READ EVERY MORNING FROM COAST TO COAST FROM COVER TO COVER
“One Week of Love from an audience viewpoint, is made on platinum and set with pearls.” — Film Daily, Nov. 12-22.
Evans Resigns
From Eastern Penna. M. P. T. O. A.
(Officers Not Listed)
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Philadelphia — J. S. Evans, at the meeting of the M. P. T. O. A. of Eastern Penna. Friday when he resigned from the board of managers and as a member of the organization. His resignation of the board of managers was accepted, but the members present would not consent to his leaving the association.

Evans has been one of the leading figures in the activities of the Penna. branch of the exhibitors' league. He was vice-president of the local organization up to a year ago, and was, until recently, national M. P. T. O. A._committee man from this district. He was a strong supporter of Sydney Cohen for some time, but has recently disagreed with the latter on a number of subjects. As noted, he was dashed at the last meeting of the local association.

It is most likely that the resignation of Evans at this time is guided by his desire not to embarrass Sydney Cohen and the national organization and also not to hinder the progress of the incoming local officers.

New Officers Nominated
The following are nominated for the various officers of the Penna. organization, the formal election to take place on Jan. 19:

President, Dr. H. J. Schad, Reading; Vice-President, William C. Hunt, Reading; Second Vice-President, Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg; Secretary-Treasurer, William Butler, Philadelphia; Board of Managers, 3 years each, George Kline, Harry Stephenson, Dr. Morris.

Boyd Chamberlain was re-elected to the board of managers to fill the vacancy of John S. Evans, resigned.

Cold
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Philadelphia — Many of the members of the M. P. T. O. A. of Eastern Penna. and Southern New Jersey are at the moment "cold" on the question of the national distribution or the booking association idea. They know too much of what happens with the Stanley Company.

Correction
In a report published recently relative to the address of the Theater Owners' Distributing Corp., it was stated that these offices were in the same building with the headquarters of the National Exhibitor organization, the M. P. T. O. A. This is incorrect. The M. P. T. O. A. is located at 19 W. 43rd St., while the Theater Owners' Dis. Corp. offices are located at 25 W. 43rd St.

The "Charles W. Morgan," oldest whaler in existence, on which "Down to the Sea in Ships," the new Hodkinson super-special, was filmed. Inset shows Raymond McKee in the crow's nest.—Advt.

What's Wrong?

Between 70 and 80 per cent of the exhibitors of this country are paying unfair prices for pictures. Lack of regulation as to methods; exorbitant demands of the big buying powers, coupled with competitive conditions at varying points brings this about.

And the great trouble is that in nearly all instances the exhibitors who can afford to pay the proper price don't and the load is passed on to the smaller houses who "pay the freight." If Hays can get started on straightening this out he can command the respect and attention of the exhibitors of this country instantly. But can he?

Here's the situation in a nutshell: There are just two classes of pictures. No more; no less. There are the big ones, which must gross somewhere from $350,000 up and the others. Now what happens? Well—but here's a story; a fact. It tells it all better than any argument that exists. In the Middle West the salesman of a certain company offered a so-called "big" picture for a week to a first run house for $800. "Don't want it," said the exhibitor. "Besides there isn't such a thing as an $800 picture for this city. You should either get $2,000 for the week, or $40 a day. We don't play anything in between." That same condition exists all over. Either you get "big money" or practically nothing.

What is the result? Simply this: A producer puts, let's say, $60,000 in a picture. It just misses being "big." A distributing company releases it. The boys who have a regular $7.50 a day rate won't pay a nickel more. It isn't big enough. Here and

Important Americans as Well as Chinese Among Directors—Plans of Dragon Films

Officers and directors of Dragon Films, Inc., a five million dollar corporation which plans to open up China for motion pictures, contains names of importance both to this country, as well as China.

The better known Americans in the corporation include Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., a vice-president; James A. Thomas, vice-president and chairman of the board, who has for over 20 years been identified in the British and American Tobacco Co. in China; Charles T. Lark, who is trustee of the Mark Twain estate; Percy E. Mann, former president of the Eagle Soap Company; Morris R. Fishcher and Charles A. Meade, who together with Frank du Pont represent the du Pont interests, and Frank V. Chamberlain, probably the best known of all among film folk. Chamberlain was formerly with Famous Players and will be the manager and assistant secretary of Dragon Films.

The list also includes as President Chow Tschu, who has probably held more cabinet positions than any other Chinese and who has been for years prominent in the finances of China.

Selznick Officcs to Coast?

The report was confirmed Saturday that the entire Selznick offices contemplate moving to the Coast some time in the Spring.

It Pays

Wright Louis O. Macloon, Morosco Prod.

Dear Danny:

The old sheet pays. This morning I read of an electric light sign for rent on Broadway. Just a piker two inch ad. But that was what I wanted. Investigation showed it was the "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" flash on the corner of 45th and Broadway. Just next door to our theater. I closed the deal over the phone and on Monday night the sign will flash.

One month $2500 cheap for me and let me say quick results for $8.00 spent with THE FILM DAILY. Now, you read the sign and spend $8 of that $8 for two seats.
China Development

A number of important Chinese are included in the organization and it is anticipated that through the influence of these important Chinese, of China that the development work planned will be put through without difficulty.

Messrs. Thomas and Chamberlain will leave New York in two weeks and plan to sail for China on Jan. 26.

Headquarters will be established at Shanghai where incidentally an exchange will be opened and a school where projection will be taught to 1,000 Chinese youths.

New York headquarters are temporarily at the Bar Bldg., 36 W. 44th

Street.

Immediately upon their arrival in China preparatory work to the opening of 2,000 theaters will be begun.

There are at present but 68 theaters in all of China and practically all of these are in what are known as the treaty ports.

Production will also be started immediately upon the arrival of Chamberlain and for the first time in the history of the screen some of the relic-es and antiquities of old China will be shawn in a production which will in all likelihood be made in color. At first all productions made in China will be of an educational nature.

Chamberlain is working day and night looking at film and he anticipates having 50 complete programs including a short comedy and a feature ready when he sails. He anticipates needing 200 complete programs at the start. All productions will be retitled in Chinese.

About 2000 theaters or places where pictures will be shown are expected to developed within the next three years. There are 430 million people in China and 5,800 cities of a population of 20,000 or more. Motion pictures are practically unknown throughout 80 per cent of China. At present Chinese Theaters, Ltd., Ra-mes and France and Goullette control the distribution of pictures in China and between them practically control the 68 theaters.

there come spasmodic bookings at better figures. But generally speaking the $7.50 price holds. What happens? The picture grosses less than it cost to make. The producer is sick.

Gentlemen, what are you going to do about it?

TALK OF CLOSING HOUSES

From the Northwest come reports of poor business. One of the biggest operators in that section is talking of closing over a third of his houses. "Rotten business" is his only comment. "Too many seats?" he was questioned. "Perhaps," he said, "but in addition film rentals are higher today than ever in history.

The prices we paid during the high water level of 1923 are a joke as compared to what we are being asked—and what we have to pay—today. It started with 'The Sheik.' Since then it has been a succession of prices that knock you cold. And you can't get out of the red."

THE PRODUCER'S SIDE

So with this kick aboard a big producer was asked about things. He didn't like the idea of talking. "Perhaps prices are high," he admitted. "But what can you do about it?" Salaries of stars are soaring. Directors are asking the earth. Sam Goldwyn is giving Fitzmaurice about three or four times what he got from Famous. Others after Fitzmaurice offered twice as much as his old contract. Valentino has enough offers to sink a ship. At five, ten times what Famous has him for, Schenck can leave First National any day. He can get a better offer for the Talmadge's anytime. Is First National making any money with the Talmadge girls? Ask any of the big men in First National. And print what they say—if they'll say anything.

"What brings it about? Exhibitors. They'll outbid each other all the time. They always have. They always will. Look at Fox. Giving Hearst somewhere between $40,000 and $50,000 for 'Knighthood.' Bucking the ABC who gave Abrams $60,000 for 'Tess.' That's the way it goes. It always will. And as long as they boost prices why should they kick?"

So there you are. And you're just where you started. But something's got to happen.

NICKELS AND DIMES

And here's what it must be. According to Ricord Gradwell, "We've lost our prospective," says he. "This business was built on nickels and dimes. They made a fortune for people in the early days. True; that was before the palaces were built and before everybody thought they had to spend a hundred thousand on every picture. You can do a lot with nickels and dimes. If you don't believe it look at the Woolworth Building. It was built with them. And from them. Exhibitor's will tell you they can't afford to reduce rentals. I'd rather reduce rentals than wave the sheriff's flag. Let some of those who say it can't be done try it. Sandwich in a popular priced night. See what happens. You can't run the big houses for Saturday and Sunday business alone. An empty seat is a challenge. To fill them. It isn't the pictures because they are better than ever. It's simply that the family can't afford to go at 40 or 50 cents a head. And there are usually four or five to the family. It takes too much away from shoes and stockings and food. 'Let's get back where we belong. And everybody will be better off.'"

THAT LYNCH DEAL

Sure a big one. Some millions involved. And Harold Franklin will get a chance to show something. Looks like a lot of theaters down South, will pass to other hands. Just as Franklin did in New England. Turned the Black string from a loss. To a gain. Pretty smart operator—that boy. It's the old story. You can't keep a good showman down. And Franklin is a good showman. Ask Mike Shea.

And Lynch gets out of pictures. Except for his stock in Famous. It's a lot, they say. Everybody feels happy. Kent included. Who can now run the exchanges as he wants to. And that's that.

DANNY.

2,000 Reissues
Harry Atken and Oscar Rice Buy Old Triangle Output for State Rights Distributing

Harry E. Atken, former officer of Triangle, has re-entered the business as partner of Oscar Rice, a new company known as Tri-Stone Pictures, Inc.

According to Mr. Price, the company has bought from Percy L. Waters, former president of Triangle and from Hy Winkler, the entire domestic and foreign rights to the Triangle output both features and comedies which, in the total, aggregated 2,000 negatives. Price stated yesterday that the company intended releasing this vast amount of product in bulk, and that the amount chosen was the state right field.

The features in the list include productions which achieved a marked degree of popularity when originally released. They include productions starring Douglas Fairbanks, the Gish sisters, William S. Hart, Charles Ray, and Haritch Dorothy, Dorotho Dalon, Louise Glamm, Bessie Barriscale, Gloria Swanson, and many others.

The plan calls for the release of the first of a series of 12 two-reel key stone comedies, which will be available in the near future. The pictures will be re-edited in their entirety before released.

One portion of the business will cover sales of the motion picture rights to other producers. It is understood that the old Triangle company held rights to a number of vehicles which were never produced.

Postpones Dorothy Vernon to Make Classic—Lubitsch Will Direct Production

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Mary Pickford's next vehicle will be "Faust" which Ernst Lubitsch will direct.

It was Miss Pickford's plan to make "Dorothy Vernon of Haddum Hall" next but the production has been postponed until summer.

Dennis O'Brien, Miss Pickford's advisor stated yesterday that he had not heard definitely that the production of "Faust" had been decided upon. At United Artists, the publicity department said that the coast report was correct.

It was recalled yesterday that W. Griffith had planned a production of "Faust" but that he had changed his mind because of expected difficulties with censors.

Coast Producers Seek Los Angeles District Attorney for Position Similar to That of Will Hays

Los Angeles—At midnight, New York time, a number of independent producers on the coast were holding a meeting here at which plans were discussed for the formation of an organization of independents similar to the one which is headed by Will H. Hays.

Credence is placed in local circles in the report that Thomas Lee Woolwine, district attorney of Los Angeles and Democratic nominee for governor is slated to head the new body at a salary of $100,000 a year. The tentative name of the organization is the Independent Producing Managers' Association but its personnel is being guarded carefully at the moment.

It is understood that Herman L. Roth, an attorney is largely instrumental in preparing the necessary arrangements.

A Cosmopolitan Production

The same trio that made "Humoresque" and "My Man and His Wife," working in complete co-operation, have produced another triumph of heart-appeal in "The Nth Commandment." It is a story of the simple lives that Fannie Hurst knows so well, with much laughter and tears and drama as "Humoresque."

The great cast includes Colleen Moore, James Morrison, Eddie Phillips, Charlotte Merriam, and James Cooper. This picture has the kind of appeal that always means big money at the box-office, and is certain to rank as one of the big ones of the season.

Wilmer and Vincent Protest
The following communication has been received from Walter Vincent, of Wilmer & Vincent:

"Editor Film Daily: In the issue of your 'Daily' of the 27th ult. there appeared an article, which seriously reflects upon this company.

"We realize that the function of a newspaper is to supply news to its readers, but is it news if it is not the truth? Your informant as to the Victoria Theater at Harrisburg, Pa., has himself been misinformed or else he has misrepresented you.

"In the first place, Wilmer and Vincent never cast longing eyes on the Victoria Theater. At the time that the Meeba, George owned and operated it, we were in friendly competition, and never even considered making purchase of their property. At the conclusion of the European War they decided that they wanted to return to Greece—offered the house for sale, naming a price. There were a number of individuals who were willing to buy, but their initial payment offer did not interest the Meeba, George.

"One day, they came to us with the proposition that if we would make purchase, they would take a very small first payment—thereafter the transaction was consummated. The theater under our management has been operated at a profit and until the industrial and financial depression became so marked in Pennsylvania, at a very large profit.

"It is difficult for us to understand why you left it within your province to make publication in the first place, of an article reflecting upon our management, of any theater. Since you have done so, we trust you will make publication of the substance of this communication, as a matter of simple justice."

Independent Producers Approached M. P. T. O., President on Distribution—No Confirmation

Locally

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Herman L. Roth, the attorney who is credited with being the important figure in the movement to combine independent producers in an organization similar to the Hays movement said yesterday that he had submitted a producing plan to Sydney S. Anson, president of the M. P. T. O., and that he had received a receptive response from Cohen.

The meeting scheduled for Monday night was held in Roth's office. Those present included Nat Spitzer, John P. McCarthy, John B. O'Brien, James Young, John D. Clemons, Eugene Kaufman, W. D. Russell, and a representative of Louis Burton. Nothing definite was decided upon at the meeting.

Thomas Lee Woolwine, as noted, has been offered the position as head of the organization but he declined. Roth that until the plan had been evolved in a more definite form, he could not make a decision. In film circles, here, the movement is not being considered seriously.

Owing to the death of his mother, Sydney Cohen was not in his office yesterday. No information was obtained relative to the Roth telegram. When W. A. Dine, president of the recently formed Theater Owners Distributing Corp, was asked about it, he said his first information was received from the coast dispatch appearing in yesterday's issue.

Gianinni So Describes Statement Regarding His Activities With Valentino

Dr. A. H. Gianinni, of the Bank of Italy, who has been on the Coast for the holidays, returned yesterday to New York.

When informed of the reports published that it was anticipated that he would make an effort to settle the Valentino case with Famous Players so that Valentino's pictures might be released through J. D. Williams, the Doctor declared that any such statement was without foundation of fact and that any statement regarding his interest in Valentino was without foundation.

The following communication has been received from Arthur Butler Graham, Valentino's counsel:

"There is no foundation whatever for articles in certain trade papers reporting a rumored settlement between Rudolph Valentino and Famous Players-Lasky Corp. "Mr. Valentino's speeches over the radio to millions of people, and his articles published in motion picture magazines show that he is fighting for a principle, and is fighting to the finish. "There has been no final determination of the action in the equity court. Preparations are being made to try the case when reached, and the evidence will be Mr. Valentino's complete justification for his present self-denial and courageous resistance."

New Camera Said to Have Reached Technical Perfection—Eastman Experts at Work

(Rochester, N. Y.—"A movie kodak" is the descriptive title given a new invention which is said to have reached technical perfection at Kodak Park.

For three years camera and lens experts and chemical scientists have been heading efforts toward the perfection of a motion picture camera which could be used by amateurs. At last the experiments have borne fruit, and at a meeting Monday of the American Chemical Society Dr. C. E. Kenneth Mee, director of the research laboratory of the Kodak company, is lecturing on the new machine.

The camera, called the motion picture Kodak, takes a film of 16mm. in width. The standard motion picture film is 35mm. The capacity of the new kodak is 100 ft. of the small film, which is equal to 250 ft. of standard film. The action of the kodak is the same as the large standard professional cameras.

Newspaper Opinions

"One Week of Love"—Selznick Capitol

AMERICAN—* * * It is all extremely well done. Elaine Hammerstein, however, displayed dramatic power that was quite surprising.

TRIBUNE—It should prove great entertainment for all those who like their society pictures unadulterated.

TIMES—"One Week of Love," * * * pursues the course of out-and-out melodrama to a simple conclusion, which is, patently put on for the sake of its thrill without regard to the logic and aim of the story.

MORNING WORLD—Elaine Hammerstein * * * is distinctly Broadway caliber. But we are not so sure of that, either. If Fifth Avenue had cinema theaters, Miss Hammerstein would deserve to have her name there in lights as big as Nazimova's. * * * Even so, "One Week of Love" is as good a screen melodrama as Broadway has seen for a year, and Miss Hammerstein's performance is remarkably nice.

HERALD—The spectacle of an airplane crashing through the roof of a Mexican stele but is beautifully managed in this film. * * * There are other big scenic punch—

A railroad train crashing through a miniature bridge into a miniature river, and a heroine rescuing a hero on the brink of a waterfall. * * * In fact, "One Week of Love" is just about as obvious in theme as it is possible for a motion picture to be. * * * That it is more than adequately acted is a tribute to the skill of its director, George Archainbaud.

MORNING TELEGRAM—* * * a Western romantic drama acted with restraint and with several exciting scenes and much suspense.

MAIL—"The ship is well with us again, American, so far as this film is concerned." * * * The climax is a thrilling wreck, in which an entire train plunges from the edge of a cliff into a river below.

TELEGRAM—But it is, after all, the airplane scene which leaves the most indelible impression. An incredible amount of attention has been devoted to minute detail.

GLOBE—There are situations that are very alive and tense, and the theme as handled and directed is sufficient to hold the interest.

SUN—"One Week of Love," * * * is obviously "The Cleopatra" done to the tune of airplane motors and Mexican greasepaint. * * * In the end, the air parts come down on him quite tenderly and yet sensitively. * * * One wishes the picture could end right here, for the story * * * has proceeded quite flawlessly, and yet entertainingly, up to this point, full of natural human reactions, and under Archainbaud's judicious emphasis, direction showing snappy signs of life that distinguish the movie quick from the movie dead. * * * such a powerful, vivid and sensational wreck that one can forgive it readily even when the airplane parts are dropped in.

DAILY—* * * excellent film romance * * * "One Week of Love" gets away to a good start and maintains the tempo, even though most of its situations have lost their novelty for picture enthusiasts. It has two or three thrills that actually thrill.

October Exports

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Statistics covering exports of films during October, just made public by the Department of Commerce, show that shipments totaled more than 22,000,000 feet, with a value of approximately $750,000. The most important item was positively identified as 2,200,916 feet valued at $531,754, which was exported to the principal markets being Argentina, Australia, Canada, etc., the order named. During the month also there was exported 492,781 feet of exposed negative film, valued at $37,995, the most important market being England. Exports of sensitized but un-exposed film during the month totaled 9,215,143 feet, with a value of $195,837, the most important markets being France and Japan, the former taking half of the total exports.

Assets are reported to be about $90,000 and liabilities, including the mortgage on the property, about $85,000.

Robin Hood Big London Success
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
London—A special correspondent of the Times reported: "It packed the Pavilion the first performance, and that astute shrinker from publicity, C. B. Cochran, has a good story to tell for the next, and they told it every time since that the house isn't big enough. England, even that England which Ambassador Page said was so beautiful on account of the thick green moss of tradition, has taken this Yank hero and his California fast-food setting to its heart. Leaping literally, as he does through one of the most English of all English traditions Doug must have had when he saw the film here. He may be satisfied. Even the Morning Post approves."

KEYSTONE COMEDY REVIVAL
France is worried!
England is worried!
The United States is worried!
Everybody is worried!

ALL THEY NEED IS A GOOD HEARTY LAUGH!

Of course, everybody remembers Keystone Comedies. No Program was complete without them, and, since then, real laughs have been few and far between. Audiences pay to be amused; that's why Keystone is the best known Trade Mark in pictures throughout the world. Recently, for whole days, we looked at Keystone comedies with some of the greatest laugh experts in the world and decided they would cure both world and Box Office troubles.

So, we're going to release, during the next six months, twelve of them, re-edited and re-titled, by a well known comedy producer and assisted by one of the screen's cleverest titlewriters, they will be protected as such by copyright.

All theatres are warned against the use of dupes or unauthorized prints of these subjects, as all violations will be vigorously prosecuted.

State-right exchanges are wanted in each state to cooperate with us in an intensive campaign of exploitation which will put these high class comedies on every screen in America. They must be of good business standing and financial responsibility.

Just then, from somewhere, came a raspberry. It was a loud one too. Bevans refused to continue. Then the repartee started. "The Wholsum of Leprosy" said that Lena Glenster pulsed the raspberry and Lena made a witty comeback by saying, "Wholsum you're a darn sight better. Well that got a big laugh and Lena was forced to make a speech. Lena gets up and says: "Fellow exhibitors, I been wanting to speak but since this convention started and now that I am called on, I want to say that I have had a good time. I want to thank Mr. Deneker for his personal trouble." She sets down and boy you should have heard the applause it gets.

All over the room is shouts, the hole ten of them was shouting. I think I heard a raspberry or two, but didn't pay no attention to them. So I gets up and delivers the speech of the day, I says: "Ladies and Gentlemen (Mrs. Deneker is there with me) I am glad you all have had a good time and if there is anything you all have learned from my method of exhibiting, why welcome to it. "I admit I am a good exhibitor and if you holmets get any ideas, I'm glad." Well, that's where the repartee ended. I never heard such a raspberry in my life. Of course I could a planned it on Bevans, my nearest competitor but I'm not saying. But this much I know, anyone that tries to get a bunch of hick exhibitors together for their own protection, is a first class sap. I'm through with 'em.

I got a big lot of high class features coming in the next two weeks. I got that serial I got hooked with. Boy, it sure is a bed ridden feature. Every time I walk in on it, some one is either getting in, or out of their bed. I think its some kind of a tie-up with the Owen Daveno Company. That'll be all for this time except that I am going to Los Angeles next week. My wife won a free trip from the Rocky Mountain Gazette and I am going to see Boy—that Hollywood better look out. I'm thinking for picking my films from the studio direct and not bother in with no salesmen or exchanges.

Merry Christmas,

Yours,

CLEM DENEKER.

The Celluloid Salesman

"Jimmy" Granner writes:

"Regarding your pertinent comment with reference to salesman selling and being conversant with the product they are selling:

"It may interest you to know that there are now in our exchanges short sales reels approximately 1,000 feet in length titled 'The Celluloid Salesman.' These show the highlights and outstanding scenes of the picture, contain suggestions of exploitation value to the exhibitor, and also give him some ideas of the advertising accessories and novelties in conjunction with each picture to enable him to put it over as successfully as possible.

"Our sales staff has found that in the majority of cases exhibitors dislike using up time to see sales reels and we generally find that at such screenings a few scenes will suffer in sales. The explanation is that therefore, these reels are carried by our salesmen and are being shown. To the exhibitor an idea of the picture he is buying.

"These 'Celluloid Salesmen' will be issued with each of our bigger productions starting with 'The Stranger's Banquet.'"
Contract Completed
First National Secures Chaplin's Latest 'The Pilgrim'—Last of Series
First National officially announced yesterday that they had secured world rights to Chaplin's latest, "The Pilgrim." This is the last of the Chaplin's to me through First National. There have been a number of interesting developments with regard to this production and it is said that because various developments and complications, his original contract papers were presented to be served on Hiram Abrams United Artists through which organization Chaplin is obligated by contract to release a number of pictures.
Chaplin has in readiness a two-reeler which is said to be called "The End" which on one occasion was referred to First National in preference to "The Pilgrim." But the completion of the arrangements with regard to "The Pilgrim" nullifies the possibility of First National handling this two-reeler. "The Pilgrim" is over four reels in length. It is understood that a large sum was paid in cash for distribution rights to "The Pilgrim" and that Chaplin will have a sharing arrangement in the gross beyond a certain release date has been set for Feb. 26.

First Nat'l Not to Handle "Ten Ton Love"—Disagree Over Exhibition Value
It is understood that First National will not distribute "Ten Ton Love," an Ince production directed by John Griffith Wray. It is further understood that there has been a disagreement over the exhibition value set on the production.

Originally, according to report, an exhibition valuation of $75,000 was placed on it but when the executive committee met, the valuation was reduced. Ince refused to accept the figure and, for that reason the deal fell through. An effort was made to obtain a statement from Cobin Brown, Ince's New York manager, but he could not be reached at his offices yesterday.

Wants Couse in Film

Promises Two Units
One Will Make Fitzmaurice Prod. and Goldwyn Comedy for Sam Goldwyn
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Samuel Goldwyn promises to have at least two production units. One will be headed by George Fitzmaurice, and the second by an as yet unnamed director, whose first picture will be Montagu Glass' "Portia and Pericles."

Goldwyn states that production will be centered here and that he may later sign several stars. He is silent on the subject of distribution.

George Fitzmaurice is now editing and editing "Bella Donna," for Famous Players. He is still under contract to that organization and has yet to make "The Cheat." Ouida Bergere, his wife, will continue to write stories and scripts for him under the contract with Goldwyn.

"Producer Releasing Through Famous Players" Made Valentino Offer—Seeks Relief
Chief Justice John Proctor Clarke of the Supreme Court has signed an order whereby Famous Players is ordered to show cause why the injunction restraining Rudolph Valentino should not be reargued and altered so that Valentino can be permitted to earn a living. "So some occupation not in competition with the plaintiff—respondent's business."
Arthur Butler Tynan, Valentino's attorney, will also seek to secure a surety bond of $50,000 to indemnify Valentino against loss in the event that he should be successful at the trial.

In connection with this action, Valentino has sworn an affidavit that a producer who is now making films for Famous Players offered him $50,000 to appear in a film, designed to be completed in 10 weeks with a proviso that Valentino was to receive $5,000 a week if the production should run over the stipulated period. The affidavit alleges that a representative (Continued on Page 2)

Navarro To Be Starred
Ramon Navarro, whose work in "Trifling Women," as well as "The Prisoner of Zenda," attracted unusual attention, signed a long term contract with Metro yesterday. He will appear in the forthcoming Rex Ingram films, one of which will be "Skeen." and will later be starred.

"Success" Garson's First Ready
"Success," the first special made by Murray W. Garson, Inc., featuring Brandon Tynan has been completed. This is Tynan's first appearance in pictures. He has a strong following on the legitimate stage. The production was directed by Ralph Ince.
"Counterfeit Love" the second Garson production is now in work.

Artists' organization, the Los Angeles Times states today:

"The expense plans contemplate the production under the supervision of Mr. Fairbanks and Miss Pickford of feature films by eight or nine of the most popular screen artists. Mr. Fairbanks said that Jackie Coogan would be offered a contract with the United Artists calling for an advance of $500,000, and a guarantee of 60% of the profits of the first four pictures he would make at the Fairbanks-Pickford studio."

Iris Lesser is in California and when Max Roth was reached at Lesser's office yesterday, it was said it was all news to him.

Says Stock Issue Was False

At the hearing in bankruptcy against Max Spiegel, Walter Hays, vice-president of the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corp., operators of the various Mark Strand theaters, charged that Spiegel had issued a false issue of voting trust certificates on common stock with a face value of $490,000 on which, Hays alleges, Spiegel secured bank loans to the extent of $327,000.

of the producer interviewed Adolph Zukor and pointed out that distribution would be handled by Famous Players inasmuch as the producer in question was obliged under contract to release all of his productions through Famous. The affidavit goes on to say that Zukor refused to act on promise that he has been offered to finance at $6,000 a week and another to make phonograph records at $5,000 a record plus a royalty.

Famous Players has been ordered to show cause at the Appellate Division Court House, 25th St. and Madison Ave. on Friday morning. Graham advances as a reason for a new argument that Valentino was induced to sign the contract with Famous under representations that it was the same as the Meighan contract.

The only producer who is making outside productions for Famous Players release is the Cosmopolitan Corp. (Hearst). At the studio yesterday no one could be reached to comment on the statement made by Valentino in his affidavit.

Superior Film Statement
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Philadelphia—E. A. Jeffries, president of the Superior Film Exchange, questioned regarding the statements in the anonymous letter relating to that exchange, declared that it was not true that Superior is out of business and said that aside from the officers there are no more than seven or eight exhibitors interested in this exchange with a total investment of about $1,500. Generally, this exchange was formed as a co-operative distributing company with about 30 exhibitors as stockholders, a total of $7,000 in stock was sold. The company was then a solid co-operative one, no one having received any commission or salary for the sale of stock. Later the officers of the corporation purchased the holdings of all but about six of the seven men.

Housman Comedies File Attachment Against Chaplin Classics Over "Snatching Hour"
An attachment for $18,803 against the property of the Chaplin Classics, Inc., has been filed in the Supreme Court by the Housman Comedies, Inc. The complaint alleges that on May 29 last, the plaintiff made an agreement to lease to the Clark-Cornelius Corp., a five-reeler "The Snatching Hour" for $200, which was to be payable five months after the film was released. It is alleged that the film was released July 1st, but that only $1,196 has been paid. It is also stated that the Chaplin Classics, Inc., has taken over the business of the Clark-Cornelius Corp.

The attachment was served on E. E. Murphy, of 416 216th St., Edgar Lockwood, assistant treasurer of the Guaranty Trust Co., where it is alleged the defendant has funds on deposit, and on S. J. Rollo, vice president of the defendant at 217 W. 46th St.

"Hunting Big Game in Africa"
Lyric

TRIBUNE—There is more drama in a single reel of the African big game-hunting picture than in a bale of Hollywood productions.

DAILY NEWS—Monday night we saw a picture which thrilled, delighted and entertained us as much as anything has in years. We’re afraid our typewriter is going to stutter when we try to tell you about it. It is called “Hunting Big Game in Africa,” and it is absolutely fascinating.

AMERICAN—A vivid record of the thrills and chills of the jungle, the H. A. Snow production, “Hunting Big Game in Africa” shown at the Lyric Theater, is well worth seeing.

EVENING WORLD—Comparison with the pictures taken by the Paul Rayner expedition a decade ago is inevitable, and while the Snow pictures show nothing quite as tense and thrilling as the famous water hole scene of the Rayner pictures, they are better balanced and provide fully as good entertainment.

HERALD—For H. A. Snow, who went into the heart of darkness with his gun and his camera, has made a film that is worth while from a dramatic as well as an educational point of view.

MAIL—Superlatives are dangerous, yet this picture seems to surpass all of its predecessors, excellent as some of them have been. It is a marvelous panorama of wildlife marked by unusual clearness of photography, interesting subjects and exciting moments.

SUN—“Hunting Big Game in Africa” easily impressed this reviewer as the most fascinating animal picture he has ever seen. It even exceeded in entertainment power Paul J. Rayner’s classic series of close-ups of wild animals at the water hole. It is exciting and humorous. In spots it is very beautiful.

GLOBE— * * an example of the cinema at its best. A more uniformly interesting and sensational looking picture has not been shown on Broadway in many a day.

"The Third Alarm"—F. B. O. Astor
TRIBUNE—The ending is the happiest ending that ever you saw, no matter how many pictures you have seen. * * *

There are some thrilling fire scenes in the picture for which we were glad.

EVENING WORLD—There’s a fire—well, go see “The Third Alarm” and you’ll both laugh and weep. It is truly a thrilling, replete with heart throbs and excitement.

JOURNAL—This photodrama * * * is plain, unadulterated melodrama, but it is a brilliant example of how surpassingly fine screen melodrama can be made.

TIMES—“The Third Alarm” * * * wastes no time with non-essentials. Like the Fire Department with which it deals, its object is to get there without stopping to explain how or why. Its object being to supply the familiar brands of “pathos,” “comedy,” “true” and “thrills” preferred by many movie fans, it proceeds at once to supply these commodities in large and labeled quantities without regard for continuity, logic or the questions of the counterintelligents.

PEST—There is good stuff in the film, authentic material for the human interest appeal, the skeleton of an interesting plot, perfectly hair-raising fire-scenes, and some good acting. * * * It suffers from an excess of plot and sub-plots, which makes its continuity jumbled; it is also open to fair criticism for the use of too many stock devices. * * *

"Secrets of Paris"—C. C. Burr Cameo
DAILY NEWS—Paris doubtless has many more secrets than were disclosed at the Cameo Theatre Sunday night, but the ones that the picture does put on view for us are mainly unpleasant. * * * We should say here that Willie Collier is the best of the many males in the cast.

MORNING WORLD—A picture as colorful and as pulsating in its dancing and its knitting and its drinking at this show according to records of past similar photodramas, stand them up in the tin Cameo all this week and next week too, if it remains there so long.

Reproductive quality enables the sensitive emulsion to correctly portray every step of gradation from highest light to deepest shadow.

Making Overtures to Jackie Coogan—Lessers Making No Effort to Keep Him
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Metro is in the field for the services of Jackie Coogan. Officials at the studio state that nothing definite has been done, while at the Fairbanks studio the same statement is made.

It is understood that Fairbanks is personally interested in the Coogan deal on behalf of Allied Artists. Apparently, Sol Lesser is not making a determined effort to keep Jackie. The indications are that when "Toby Tyler" is completed, Lesser and the Coogan interests will start amicably. (Continued on Page 2)

In "McGrew," Lon Chaney, Barbara La Marr and Willard Mack will have the leading roles. S-L will also produce "Red Bulldogs," by Willard Mack. Metro is expected to handle distribution.

Clem Deneker
The famous exhibitor who has "sweated up" Pneumonia, Nev., and whose experiences have proven a delight to the readers of THE FILM DAILY, is coming to New York.

At the AMPA luncheon yesterday Harry Reichenbach, who has been on a trip West for the Mayer productions, when asked to talk of his experiences, said he had met Deneker; that Clem told him he was coming East to secure about 30 prints because his shows never arrived as per schedule, and to get some ideas on exploitation. He told Reichenbach that he had booked a picture called "Passion of the Third Floor Back," and when it arrived discovered it was only an episode of "Who Is Number One?" the famous old Famous serial.

He also announced that arrangements had been made for Clem Deneker to sneak to the AMPA, and Deneker was invited to attend the lunch next Thursday. Seats should be at a premium.

Allied Release
Woods-Buchanan-Harris Productions To Go Through Abrams' Organization

Allied Authors, Inc., the Frank Woods-Thompson Buchanan-Elmer Harris combination, will release through Allied Artists Corp. Harry Abrams admitted this yesterday, but said he could add nothing at the moment regarding the first release or just how many pictures were included in the contract.

It will be recalled that shortly after Woods resigned as producing director for Famous Players he, together with Buchanan and Harris, formed the above named organization to produce their own pictures. It has reported at various times that Penrhyn Stanlaws would join the trio but this has never been verified.

WARNERS CLOSE BELASCO DEAL
Will Have Active Aid of Great Stage Producer in Preparation of Scenarios and Also in Cutting and Titling Belasco Successes First Three Set

Warner Brothers, through a deal closed yesterday, have brought to the screen the greatest theatrical producer of America—David Belasco.

According to the contract, and an understanding reached between the great stage craftsman and the Warners, Belasco will aid in the preparation of the continuity and will oversee the completed productions before they are cut and titled so that the pictures may have the benefit of his vast experience.

The first three Belasco productions to be made by Warners include, "The Golden Daguerreotype," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and "Dobbs." Two of these will be in readiness for next season. There is a possibility of "Tiger Rose" and "Kiki," both with Lenore Ulric in the star parts also going to Warners in the early future. It is understood that upwards of $250,000 figured in the deal, and in production Belasco has a sharing arrangement in the profits of the productions.

As a result of the closing of the transaction, it would not be surprising if Belasco and his general manager, Ben F. Roeder, visited the Warner studios in Hollywood next summer.

The deal between Warners and Belasco was started early in the Fall.

Many efforts have been made to interest Belasco in picture making. A few of his plays have been sold as picture material, only recently first National having purchased "The Girl in the Golden West." But all efforts to secure co-operation of

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

That “Personal” Angle in Letters
Baltimore—The New Metropolitan, one of Baltimore's latest neighborhood houses, started off on the right foot, applying the personal touch to their patronage.

Leslie F. Whelan, Paramount executive, wrote a letter signed “Marjorie Daw,” the leading-lady of “The Pride of Palomar,” the christening picture, praising the theater and the picture.

“Miss Daw’s” letter went on chatting about her movie work and its tremendous publicity and effort to entertain and please you.

Next, tasteful letter-heads were printed up and the letters were dated and postmarked New York City.

Although they were prepared in Baltimore, Whelan shipped them to New York where they were dropped in the mail slot.

Pointers on Value of the Simple Life
Martinsville, Va.—Martinsville’s ambitions is to raise its 5,000 population to 10,000, and the big guns of the town tremble with the thought that the young folks may travel the jazz age.

Leslie F. Whelan saw that the Henry County semi-Weekly Bulletin was spouting editorially on the subject so he gave them an idea. “Martinsville must return to the code of ‘The Old Homestead.’ Simple devotion, love, fire-sides, mother’s doughnuts, that’s what Martinsville must get back to.”

This is the fifth town to be sold on such a campaign. In Martinsville, the Bulletin claimed that at their request the exhibitor booked the picture to show the town what the simple life was like.

Using the Badge
Owensboro, Ky.—Bob Wether, Metro salesman, took advantage of a new fire truck to exploit the showing of “Quincy Adams Sawyer” at G. M. Pedley’s Grand Theater.

Bob was seated in his hotel when he heard the fire truck’s siren sound and gong a moment later he saw the big white machine riding by. He inquired and learned that it was a recent addition and was being displayed for the edification of the natives.

That gave him an idea. A few minutes later he was in a sign painter’s office ordering two large canvas signs to read. “Quincy Adams Sawyer.”

He then called in the fire chief and finally landed the privilege of having the truck exploit the show. Bob is affiliated with the St. Louis fire fighters and his local hadde proved the clinching argument with the Owensboro chief.

Pedley and his manager, M. Clark, helped work the tie-up. The display attracted much attention and was the means of bringing many to see the show during the picture’s run.

Distributes Match Boxes
Indianapolis—One of the effective features of an extensive campaign recently put across at the Apollo, on “Lights of New York,” was the distribution of 10,000 match boxes, each bearing advertising of the picture, and distributed in restaurants, cafes, hotels and cigar stores. This method of exploitation proved very successful; every time a match was lit on the box, the attention of the holder was drawn to the announcement of the picture on the covers.

Boston Theater Distributes Oranges
Boston—To encourage creative recipes from the housewives of Boston and as an exploitation stunt for “Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood,” the Boston theater got together on a tie-up by which 10 crates of oranges were given for the ten best recipes for ways in which the orange may be used for household purposes. The American printed the recipes daily. They covered cakes, pies, marmalades and countless delicacies from the orange.

Bonnis-Ferguson “Teasers”
Eddie Bonnis, and W. R. Ferguson, of Goldwyn, devised an unusual line of teasers for “The Stranger’s Banquet” at the Capitol.

Fifteen thousand six-inch rulers were distributed particularly in offices. The Capitol mailed out 5,000 of them.

A herald in the shape of a bottle was used freely. It was green and black printed on white. It had two seals on it—the Goldwyn seal and the Neilan seal. Across the label was printed a “23 star Brand of Sparkling Entertainment.”

On the inside of the herald were names of the star, a toast, etc., the name of the theater and of showing. Ten thousand paper napkins, folded to form a triangle with “Marshall Neilan’s supreme screen achievement of 1923,” etc., printed on it, were distributed in restaurants, cafes, and other places. Ten thousand toothpicks in paper envelopes, on which was printed “Peppermint flavored,” were also distributed.

An invitation engraved invitation suggesting that the recipient attend the show, was mailed to a selected list. Enclosed was a printed menu for “The Stranger’s Banquet,” a twenty-three star course. The name of a player in the cast was used in connection with each dish. A special book of toasts was prepared.

What the Critics Said of the Play

SUCCESS

A strong heart story, with the proper mingling of pathos and humor. It is a sweet, green spot in the desert of clap-trap and unhealthful sex appeal that has characterized the stage far too long.

PITTSBURG PRESS.

Something rare and fine turned out to be an artistic romance built around a character as beautiful and distinctive as has been conceived since “The Music Master” first charmed American audiences a dozen years ago.

BOSTON AMERICAN.

There seems to be an undeniably human quality in the theme that finds a responsive chord on the part of the audience.

BOSTON GLOBE.

“Success” makes a popular appeal, and any play that does that meets the severest test of all. We can think of no other play except “The Music Master” that in recent years got such a grip on the public heartstrings as did “Success.” To brighten so pathetic a drama with humorous lines and situations, gives the public just what it wants most of the time.

Bitter and sweet never revealed more beautifully than in the comedy-drama “Success.”

Its sunshine and shadows, its heavens and hells, its pits of despair and its light-kissed heights of victory, are told in a way that can never be forgotten.

Buster to Make Full Length Comedies—Deal Closed in Los Angeles

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—It is stated here that Buster Keaton has signed a contract with Metro under the terms of which he will make a series of feature length comedies. The first one is now in production.

Marcus Loew stated yesterday that the news embodied in the east patch was news to him. Keaton recently announced he would devote his time to productions of feature length in favor of two reeler.

Classics in One Reel Form

Of the 18 one-reelers acquired by Arclites there are at least three which are either current or will be shortly, in feature form. These are “Vanity Fair,” “The Horn-BUCK of Notre Dame,” and “Olive TWIST.” The first will be released by Goldwyn as a Hugo Ballin Prod. “The Horn-BUCK of Notre Dame” will be one of the future Universal jewels, while “Olive TWIST” is the current Coogan release.

Bonus Forwarded

$50,000 Wired to Coogans by Metro For Four Productions

The biggest bonus ever given in the business, $50,000, was forwarded by Metro Pictures last night to Jackie Coogan, Sr., by wire. This cash transaction closed the deal, which will result in Metro releasing four Jackie Coogan pictures, immediately following the completion of Coogan’s contract with Sol Lesser.

While details of the deal are not forthcoming, in view of Coogan’s arrangement with Lesser, in all likelihood they will show that Coogan is to secure the bulk of the earnings of his pictures. Metro to secure a share for distribution, plus a part of the gross after a certain figure has been reached. “Olive Twist,” which is being released through First National, is understood to be out on an exhibition value of $2,000,000.

It is understood that First National made a strong effort to secure Coogan and Coo Fairbanks and several others were interested in obtaining Jackie. But the half million cash offered by Metro knocked the pins from under the others. Marcus Loew started negotiations for the Coogans pictures when he was on the Coast.

“A. B. C. Not Hit”

So Says Lee Ochs Commenting on Switch of Haring-Blumenthal Theaters to Loew Chain

“Not only is the A. B. C. not ‘staggered’ by the reported purchase of part of the Haring and Blumenthal circuit,” reported Los Angeles, as reported in a weekly paper but we are not even bothered,” said Lee A. Ochs, president of the A. B. C. yesterday.

“We have other theaters ready to step in when the Haring and Blumenthal circuit falls through and we are not at all bothered,” said Ochs.

Although no contracts have been signed by Charles Haring and Louis F. Blumenthal with the Loew circuit, it is understood that all conflicting matters have been straightened out (Continued on Page 2)

Valentino Appeal Under Advisement

The filing of briefs and supplementary papers in connection with Rudolph Valentino’s appeal for a rehearing and revision of the injunction in favor of Famous Players was as far as the matter progressed in the Supreme Court of Appeals yesterday. A decision will be made in the near future.

Plans Nation Wide Runs

Famous Players officials make no secret of the fact that they consider “The Covered Wagon,” which James Cruze has about completed on the West Coast, one of the most important productions turned out by that company.

A print is expected in New York about Feb. 1st, and, according to present plans, a series of special long run engagements will be launched all over the country, in the same manner as “Knighthood.” It is understood reports from the coast are enthusiastic to a marked degree, and that the home office officials are making all kinds of promises for its success.

...got a quartet together. The quartet was made up of three tenors and one contralto (four people all told) and then my daughter did a toe dance. It was her first appearance in public and being nervous, she suffered a broken joint on the second toe from the end of the right foot.

The producer of "What's the Matter With Women's Husband's" brought his picture up here and gave a show under a tent. We exhibitors got together and blacklisted him. I was the prime mover of this move. After the meeting and after we had put him er the ban—he got in touch with all the other exhibitors but me and damned if he didn't sell them the pictures for their towns and called it by threatening to play under a tent if they didn't. I guess these exhibitors protective leagues aren't so much if a guy with one sick film can break it up like this. Imagine what that bird Zirkor would do if he wanted too.

Don't tip anyone off that I own both theaters here. I'm working one against the other. I offer four bucks for a feature—then the company writes to the other house and asks it how much it will pay, quoting my figure, I wait two days and then write in and offer them two bucks for it—then they write on and tell me that after deliberation I can have the film for four and I writes back and says I'm not interested at that figure, but will give three—and they generally take it. I'm getting onto the tricks. I overheard two film salesmen talking at the railroad depot yesterday—and have a lot of new ones to spring on the next sucker that comes along.

Next time you hear from me I'll be at Los Angeles where the papers advices pro and con.

Hope you have a happy new year—it don't look so good to me.

Sincerely,

Clem Deneker

Stiffer Penalties for Camera Violators

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Harrisburg, Pa.—The Commission for the Re-organization of the State Government, appointed in 1921, by Gov. Sproul; has presented a plan to the legislature, to amend the present censorship laws, making the penalties for violators much more severe. The report in part reads:

"An amendment is hereby submitted to the Motion Picture Art of May 15, 1915, P. L. 534, to provide for additional, and severer penalties in cases of second and subsequent offenses."

The existing fine for an offense is not less than $25 and not more than $50. The amendment proposes a fine for a second offense of not less than $50 and not more than $100, and for a third offense, a fine of from $100 to $200.

The FLAME of LIFE

FROM ONE OF THE BEST NOVELS BY FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT

PRESENTED BY CARL A. EMMLE
Florence Vidor

CONQUERING THE WOMAN

From the Fascinating Novel by Henry C. Rowland

A King Vidor Production

"The picture opens with views of life at a seaside resort near Paris and we see Miss Vidor aquaplaning, swimming and indulging in other red-blooded sports. The action shifts to America and then quickly to the South Seas. The fights which David Butler puts up during the 'shanghaiing' moments are real stuff. The island life is well pictured and there are a number of amusing situations here.

"The chase of two ships through the seas is a bit of excitement. Miss Vidor and Mr. Butler do most of the work in the picture and do it well. The supporting cast is adequate. The photography is clear and artistic, while the sub-titles are snappy and excellently worded."

Motion Picture News

"Florence Vidor has always been one of this reviewer's screen favorites. She soothes the eye and satisfies the intelligence. Ear rings, negligees and exaggerated eyelids have not figured unduly in her success. And so it is easy to be entertained when Miss Vidor fills the camera eye. 'Conquering the Woman' is entertaining, sprightly and well cast."

The Morning Telegraph

"Florence Vidor in 'Conquering the Woman' is a good, entertaining feature, built along a theme that is familiar, but which is, at the same time, thoroughly pleasing in its unfoldment and picturization. David Butler plays the hero role and is well cast. The picture was directed by King Vidor from a story by Henry C. Rowland. Six reels.

"This newest Florence Vidor feature should not fail to register pleasantly with any audience. There is a genuine, pleasing vein to the story which makes the picture satisfying entertainment of a light, easy-to-follow variety.

"Miss Vidor is appealing and winsome at all times and in selecting David Butler to play opposite her, in the role of the hero, Director Vidor made a particularly effective choice. In this story the two make a great combination."

DIRECTION...Provides what is probably the best fire thrill ever filmed
PHOTOGRAPHY Excellent

EXTERIORS All right; street scenes good
INTERIORS Suitable
DETAIL Careful
CHARACTER OF STORY...All about a fireman—good family stuff
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION 6,757 feet

Of all the melodramas of action and thrills, which have made their appearances within the past two weeks, it is quite likely that "The Third Alarm" tops the list with a fire climax that is probably the best thing of its kind ever filmed. There certainly is a "kick" in this last reel of Emory Johnson's production, dedicated to Commissioner Drennan and the firemen of New York.

Last year Emory Johnson made a picture with a policeman as the central figure, so he probably thought, to even things up, it was due the firemen to make one dedicated to them. "The Third Alarm” is by far a better entertainment than Johnson's policeman picture, not only in the material contained, but in construction and production values generally. The story is developed logically and smoothly and builds towards the climax with an accumulative interest that only comes of careful direction. There are many fine torches that include humorous bits, pathos, sentiment and romance as well as the many genuine thrills found in the last reel.

One particularly interesting element in the picture is the much discussed replacement of the fire horses. This is brought into the story in an interesting fashion and offers a really touching bit of sentiment. It isn't quite probable that a faithful and capable man such as hero Ralph Lewis, would be forced into retirement merely because he could not operate the new motor truck. He could easily have been given something else to do. One other slightly false touch is where they handcuff Lewis when he admits the theft of his favorite fire horse, Bullet, because he thinks his son guilty. They don't usually handcuff people for such petty offenses. But in every other respect, Johnson has shown very good judgment and much common sense.

Of course, the big, outstanding feature of "The Third Alarm" is the fire. There is a real wallop in the thrill that this offers and the realism that has been injected into this sequence is decidedly unusual and very effective. The cave-in of the building and the rescue of hero's son, also a fireman, and his sweetheart, are splendid.

Ralph Lewis does excellent work as the fireman hero. His emotional scenes are very well done, and the part couldn't be given to one more capable. Lewis is especially adapted to this type of portrayal. Johnny Walker and Ella Hall do well, and others are Virginia True Boardman, Richard Morris, Frankie Lee and Josephine Adair.

A Fine Box Office Attraction That Should Clean Up

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There is a very definite box office value in this picture because it supplies a new line of thrills and the sort of action and atmosphere that will certainly make it a popular number with the big majority of picture goers throughout the country,—the crowd that continually shops for the theater promising the most thrills. Some posters with the title prominently displayed should certainly attract their attention.

There is no limit to the exploitation that you can put over in connection with the picture. Your local fire department is one sure bet if you can only secure its cooperation.

Show a trailer of the fire and they'll be back. The title will mean more than names, but you might mention Ralph Lewis and the producer's name in case they remember his policeman picture, "In the Name of the Law."

EXTERIORS .............. Very pretty and unusual
INTERIORS ................... Appropriate
DETAIL ..................... Satisfactory
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... A dramatic romance of the mining districts of northern England

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ............. 5,776 feet

Although Priscilla Dean remains the fighting, biting and tempestuous heroine, her role in “The Flame of Life” is slightly different from anything else she has done recently and as entertainment, Frances Hodgson Burnett’s novel gets away from the ordinary routine of screen plays, not so much probably in the situations but in atmosphere and action incident to the plot.

But it remained for Hobart Henley to visualize the quaint and picturesque atmosphere of the novel—that of a small mining town in northern England—and for his efforts in this respect, as well in production angles generally, Henley deserves much credit for the pleasure the feature affords. It is really a worth while offering and should appeal to everyone, especially those ever in search of something new or out of the ordinary, for “The Flame of Life” really is that.

The plot itself probably may not be considered new, in a way, since it has a brutal father and an attractive young heroine, the object of the man’s brutality. Then there is a good looking young hero who falls in love with her. But the familiarity of this triangle is very much obscured through the treatment accorded it in the story and the careful and judicious handling which it has received on the part of Henley.

Besides the pleasing romantic touches the picture contains decidedly fine action bits, with the exception of some scenes showing Beery’s attacks upon Miss Dean, as his daughter. They have been obviously kept within bounds but there is a little too much of this. The scrap between the star and one of the women workers in the yard where, with other drudges of her class, the girl calls slate from coal, is a good bit and of course the climax, in which Beery, to get even with the foreman, explodes the mine, is the real wallop of the film. This has been excellently done and if it doesn’t send them out thoroughly thrilled, they can’t be satisfied. It’s a real live piece of excitement. And for once a picture is given a sensible and logical ending.

Priscilla Dean performs very much in her usual manner but she probably works harder in this than anything else she has done in a long while. Wallace Beery is always a capable villain. He doesn’t fail in this one. The star has been given capable support throughout with Robert Ellis and Kathryn McGuire next in importance.

Plenty For You to Talk About With This One and Use Star’s Name

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It is a safe bet that Priscilla Dean’s latest picture, “The Flame of Life” is going to not only please, but thrill, a great many picture goers. Where they like action and thrills you can go the limit on promises and you might let them know that the climax contains a mine explosion. In view of recent actual occurrence of this nature, they’ll be especially interested. On the other hand you have a quaint and picturesque offering to show them and you can talk about unusual atmosphere.

Of course many of your folks know what to expect of Priscilla Dean. You can promise them she is at her best in “The Flame of Life.” Tell them it is a Hobart Henley production and mention his recent picture, “The Flirt.” There is plenty for you to talk about for this one and it’s up to you to get them in. The picture is really “there.”

A year or so ago Gilbert Emery's "The Hero" served as a stage vehicle for Richard Bennett and was an acknowledged success with Bennett's fine ability for dramatic characterization evidently one good reason for its favorable reception. But there was also some very worth while material in the Emery story which is now serving as the latest Al Lichtman release, under the original title. The theme contains some very sound philosophy and will appeal to those who like a dramatic entertainment that really does get away from the commonplace.

The plot, on the whole, is very slight and it is evident that it was not the easiest thing in the world to adapt it to the screen. The opening scenes promise a better picture than you really get. There are innumerable receptions for the returning veterans, "The Hero," in particular who is feted and honored at every turn. But it suddenly lapses and nothing happens except the regular routine of the household in which the characters are congregated.

Gasnier spends far too much time acquainting you with his people. That Andrew Lane is a typical loving, kind-hearted and easy-going husband and father is brought home to you at least a dozen times more than is necessary. That he has habits that annoy his young wife to distraction are indicated by showing him picking corn plasters from his feet, bathing the sore spots and finally stepping out of the water and dragging the suds across the floor. This is just an indication of the manner in which Gasnier uses his footage on unnecessary detail.

The episode in which Lane's young brother, a returned war hero, decides to steal the church funds which his brother has locked in a desk, and his subsequent scenes with Lane's wife—which get nowhere at all—are much too long drawn out. And the great fault is that the ending is obvious all the time. Cutting would be a decided benefit for the picture as an entertainment. In its present footage it will hardly hold them for the almost seven reels. Production values are average to good and the cast, especially Sainpolis, does good work.

Will Stand a Much Better Chance If Carefully Re-Edited

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If they can see their way to re-editing this one, it seems very possible that it can be made into a worth while attraction with a whole lot more value as entertainment than it possesses in its present form. Despite the good material and some interesting ideas that it presents, "The Hero," will have difficulty in holding the average audience. The interest is not well sustained and the fault lies chiefly with Gasnier for spending so much time on certain episodes which would have been decidedly more forceful if shorter and more to the point.

Of course, there are those who may favor this form of suspense. The longer you hold off from the climax, the better they'll like it. The title offers fine exploitation and you can arouse considerable interest with catchlines such as: "When is a hero not a hero?" Or, "What is your idea of a hero? Have you ever thought of how many kind of heroes there are? There are some interesting angles on this in "The Hero," the latest Al Lichtman production." Of the players use Gaston Glass' name. Those who have seen Barbara La Marr in the recent Rex Ingram productions will be attracted by her name.

CHARACTER OF STORY........ Girl in search of

There is a rather peculiar combination of situations in this story by Dorothy Farnum, written for Betty Blythe, and while it may contain elements of appeal for a certain class of patrons, it is not sufficiently concise or interesting to make the picture anything more than an average offering. The plot embraces a wide variety of ideas which do not bear enough relation to each other to fit well in one story and the director has not been successful in covering up this fault. The plot does not dovetail and the continuity is rambling.

Whether or not the situations are plausible probably doesn't matter a great deal because the people to whom this type of picture will appeal, do not usually look for plausibility nor object to the lack of it. For them it won't matter that the richest man in New York is not shrewd enough to know when he is mixing with crooks or that he takes part in an affair in which a woman auctions herself off to the highest bidder. There isn't any real good excuse for this particular twist and a higher class clientele will undoubtedly object to such a far-fetched and unreasonable method of approaching a climax.

The story's dramatic quality is considerably weakened by such false steps and then a not over judicious direction. Besides not always using good judgment in the handling of situations, Adolphi does not make the best use of the players. Charles Gerrard's character is never given a definite connection with the others and you never can tell whether he is working for himself, the princess or the rich man.

Betty Blythe's admirers will likely be satisfied with the offering and her work is quite satisfactory. She is given capable support by Leslie Austin, who plays the lead, Montague Love, as the rich man, and those mentioned above.

Story: Charmion Winship's father dies leaving her nothing but an unsold patent. Her desire for wealth leads her to New York where she is hired by crooks to pose as a princess who is selling her jewels for relief money. Unknown to her the jewels are stolen goods. Charmion meets Lawrence, the man who once saved her life but must keep up the disguise. Martin, a rich man, and Lawrence fight for Charmion's hand with Lawrence finally victorious and forgiving her when her crook friends are disclosed in their true light.

Will Please Star's Admirers and Probably the Average Audience

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

For the average crowd this may do well enough but it won't stand promises or unusual exploitation to make it a special drawing card. Regardless of some attempts to dress the story up with some lavish scenes, you couldn't honestly bill it as a lavish production and unless you want to disappoint the sensation seekers, you should not play up the title because they may expect something totally different from what they'll get.

In case Betty Blythe is popular with your patrons, you can readily interest them with the announcement of her latest production, "The Darling of the Rich." If you think the theme will appeal to them, talk about the old question of: "Should you marry for love or riches?" See the question answered in 'The Darling of the Rich.'"
Here is a distinguished and remarkable picture with a cast of tremendous drawing power and direction that at once ranks it with Douglas Fairbanks’ “Robin Hood” and “When Knighthood Was In Flower.”

Our advice to every big first run theatre-owner is to have your orchestra leader with you when you screen “The Bohemian Girl.” Your leader will vision at once the remarkable presentation he can help you give this wonderful picture.
Good Action and Thrills in Lumber Camp Story

DETAIL ................Ample
CHARACTER OF STORY......Lumber camp employee is forced to fight jealous associates who attempt to get rid of him
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ..........4,700 feet

There is always an open market for this type of offering and with a story that provides some good live action, “Flames of Passion” stands a very good chance of becoming a satisfying box office attraction. The theme is more or less conventional with the situations embracing some familiar angles and an atmosphere that has been a popular element in more than one recent production. Lumber camp stories are coming into prominence with forest fire climaxes doing a big business in the thrill market.

The story has been given a rather careful production and the direction, on the whole, is quite satisfactory. G. H. Moody loses no time in getting into the action and after establishing a premise and acquainting the spectator with the locale, he proceeds to get things started. He tells you all you need to know without going into unnecessary detail and once you learn that hero George Larkin has an enemy in the camp, you can know what to expect. A near-by competitor has bribed the superintendent to prevent hero’s company from getting its logs down the river in time to fulfill a contract. The effort of the villain to spoil the plan offers a thrill when he starts a log train on a runaway ride down the mountain in an attempt to wreck it. Hero’s intervention is another thrill.

Those who like fist fights for their action will have a good one coming to them in the battle between hero and villain, fought on the logs in the river. There is still another live fistic encounter between hero, the girl’s father and the villain which precedes the forest fire climax. The latter has been very well done and is always thoroughly realistic. The rescue is a long drawn out because it is hardly possible that any of those trapped in the flaming forest would survive as long as they do. Nevertheless there is a good thrill in this and it does bring the story to a fairly smashing climax. A bit of suspense is also found in the incident in which the girl is caught on a log that is headed for the saw. There is the usual love interest developed in the regulation fashion with the ultimate happy ending.

George Larkin is particularly capable of the hero role and does very good work. Ruth Stonehouse makes an appropriate lead and the cast is adequate with one or two possible exceptions. The director has allowed some slight overacting.

Satisfying Box Office Number For Many Theaters

Because of the good action and the variety of it as well as the thrills and suspense, “Flames of Passion” will be a very suitable attraction for many houses so it all depends upon the desires of your clientele. If you know they want action and thrills and won’t object to a slightly familiar plot, you can do a first rate business with this latest state rights offering.

There is plenty for you to talk about and a trailer of one of the fights, a rescue stunt, or the forest fire shots, should easily serve to bring them back when you show the picture. The title may not be sufficient to indicate the character of story, so play it up with catchlines, stills, and with readers in the space accorded you in your local papers. George Larkin’s name can be used and they may remember Ruth Stonehouse although she has not done very much of late.
CALEB DEMING, a sturdy blacksmith in the little village of Alden, wanted a boy who would be straight and strong and a man among men.

His son, Amos, however, was born a cripple, paralyzed in his right arm. Deming's disappointment was so great that he became very much embittered against his son. Amos, however, was endowed with a keen spiritual insight and a capacity for love which he exercised on all about him, particularly the children of the town, for whom he made toys.

Emily Preston, the girl next door, had been ostracized by the villagers for the sins of her brother. The gossips made life unbearable for Emily, and after a fight with one of the village gossips she planned to leave town. Amos sought to befriend her and was repulsed several times. Amos's great spirituality, however, and the unselfish force of his love finally caused a change of heart, and she decided to remain. Amos's father learned of his son's friendship for Emily and disowned him.

In the meantime, Preston endeavored to obtain justice at the hands of Dodd, his former partner, the owner of a huge lumber camp. Dodd instructed Krieg, a powerful, unscrupulous lumberjack, to cut timber on Preston's land. Krieg bore a secret grudge against Dodd and endeavored to use Preston as a tool for gaining his revenge on Dodd. Preston, however, refused to have anything to do with Krieg. Krieg was caught spiking Dodd's timber, and realizing that Dodd had learned of his enmity, he killed him. Preston was accused, tried, and sentenced to death.

Krieg took refuge in Emily Preston's house and forced her to hide him until dark, when he could escape. He was a prey to superstitious fears. He planned to kill Emily before leaving, but a demonstration, which he took to be an omen of evil, prevented him. That night he left with the threat that if she told on him he would return and kill her. At the suggestion of Amos, she testified before the court and saved Preston, although she knew she was taking her life in her hands.
A few nights later Krieg returned for his revenge upon the girl. Little Connie, an orphan whom Emily had adopted, ran to Amos for help. Terror-stricken, Emily barred the windows and locked the door, but Krieg burst through the window and entered the room.

Emily fought desperately and managed to elude him for a few minutes. Relentlessly, he closed in on her, and his writhing, clutching fingers were about her throat when Amos entered the room. Amos threw himself between the girl and Krieg. A terrific battle ensued, but Amos was a child in the hands of the powerful Krieg.

Krieg seized Amos by his paralyzed arm and twisted it. With a sickening blow and kick Krieg threw the boy in the corner and turned again to attack Emily. Nothing but a miracle could save her.

Amos saw the girl he loved being strangled to death at the hands of the maniac Krieg, and he made a superhuman effort to crawl to his feet and reach him. As he struggled to his feet a look of joy spread over his face. 'He could use his right arm! He was no longer a helpless cripple! With both arms outstretched he advanced on Krieg. Krieg, startled by Amos's cry, turned and beheld a strong, vigorous youth in place of the once frail weakling.

It was too much for his ignorant brain to comprehend. His fears and superstitions overcame him and he frothed at the mouth like a wild beast. With a shriek of terror he ran frantically for the door and into the arms of the villagers, who had been aroused by Connie.

As Amos stood in the doorway with the light shining out behind him, a hush fell upon the group gathered without, as they gazed on what seemed to be a veritable miracle. The tears came to old Caleb Deming's eyes as he gathered his son in his arms and begged forgiveness. The great force of Amos's love had brought about a change in the hearts of villagers, and gained for him the heart of Emily.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...........5,810 feet

"Second Fiddle" contains an idea that has not been used extensively for screen plots so it should carry a good appeal for the average picture audience. And it has been rather capably handled by Frank Tuttle who is also responsible for the story. He has supplied a coherent and smooth continuity and tells the story in a straightforward fashion and usually reaches con-cclusions without wasting too much footage in doing so.

Production values are up to standard and the injection of proper rural atmosphere makes the feature attractive from a pictorial standpoint.

The plot is rather after the style of a serial with the villain pursued in each episode, being captured and escaping again in the next. Through this method of development Tuttle succeeds in sustaining the interest very well and those who go in for thrills of a serial order will find some to their liking in "Second Fiddle." There is the attack of the villain upon his daughter, his capture by hero and later his escape from jail and another attack upon hero's sweetheart with the event-tual rescue in which hero comes into the honor due him. All these bits are played with the sort of stress peculiar to this type of drama. There are close-ups of villain approaching his victim and the usual touches that help to supply the thrills.

Things are not always convincing, such, for instance, as the bit in which hero explains his inability to hold the villain because the gun was not loaded. The willingness of the father to immediately brand his son a liar is not a convincing twist but, of course, it serves as a stepping stone to still greater honor for hero when he finally clears himself and is acknowledged as the true hero of the family.

Glenn Hunter does very good work in the picture, and Mary Astor, who will be remembered for her appearance in the two reel Triart productions of last year, is very pretty and appealing. Others in the cast are capable. They are William Nally, Leslie Stowe, Mary Foy.

Story: Herb Bradley hands his brother Jim an unloaded revolver to hold off the desperate Cragg who has killed his daughter. How Herb makes it appear that Jim was a coward and events so shape themselves as to cause Jim to believe that he has lost the love of his sweetheart, Polly, is followed by Polly's rescue by Jim and the latter's capture of Cragg.

Has Elements That Will Appeal To a Good Majority

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you know your folks like the type of dramatic entertainment that "Second Fiddle" offers you can be quite sure they'll go out satisfied because it contains effective thrills, enough action, a first rate atmosphere and a cast that does very good work. In case you played Glenn Hunter in "The Cradle Buster" sometime ago, you might recall that and tell them he is the star of "Second Fiddle."

The title is a good one and suggests plenty of exploration angles and stunt advertising that should easily attract the attention of your patrons. Mary Astor is a pretty heroine whose photo will attract attention in the lobby. They may remember her from her Triart pictures, such as "The Beggar Maid." Catchlines will give an adequate idea of the story if you want to let them know what it is about.
Thrilling and Realistic Record of Wild Animals at Home

Eugene H. Roth presents
“HUNTING BIG GAME IN AFRICA”

DIRECTOR ...................... H. A. Snow
AUTHOR ........................ Real narrative
SCENARIO BY ..................... The same CAMERAMAN ..................... Sidney Snow

AS A WHOLE...... Unusually absorbing and interesting pictures of Africa’s wild beasts taken in their native haunts

STORY........ Photographic record of trip into untraversed places of Africa

DIRECTION ...... A particularly well composed narrative picture, probably the best of the kind yet made

PHOTOGRAPHY ............. Very good LIGHTINGS ................. Natural PLAYERS ..................... Natives, beasts and explorers EXTERIORS ................... Mighty interesting
INTERIORS .................... None
DETAIL ................. Splendid descriptive sub-titles

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... A trip through densest Africa

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 10,000 feet

This latest photographic record of an African exploring expedition is probably the most authentic and realistic that has ever been obtained. The Snow African expedition was organized by the African Expedition of Oakland, California, and left San Francisco in 1919, returning early in 1922, after a trip around the world, totaling 80,000 miles. Before going into detail it might be well to make a note of some interesting facts connected with the taking of these unusual pictures. In Africa alone the expedition traveled 60,000 miles, exposed 125,000 feet of negative film and made more than 4,000 still pictures. All photographic developing was carried on at night, the temperature of the day being tense enough to melt the film the minute it touched the water. The tour was conducted by H. A. Snow and his son, Sidney Snow, cameraman.

The picture offers the most interesting and spectacular views of wild animal life, with the creatures cornered and photographed in their native haunts, very often through the use of the telescopic lens which permits of more intimate views, close-ups in particular. Besides the actual scenes of the animal herds consisting of every variety that you have ever heard of, and twice as many as you never heard of, the expedition pictures contain many delightful views of the African country. There are also glimpses into the tribal life as found in the camps along the line of travel.

Early in the picture there is a sequence which differs slightly from the rest of the offering, but it is decidedly a very interesting feature of “Hunting Big Game in Africa.” Incidentally it will probably tell the average audience more than it ever dreamed about in connection with the precious diamond. The views of the mine and the conditions under which the natives work are intensely interesting as is the process through which the stones go prior to their actual appearance. The sub-titles in this, as well as throughout the picture, give very interesting data.

The introduction of the “flivver” into big game hunting is another new angle and the fight between the wart hog and the Ford offers a humorous touch as do the matrimonial customs of the native tribes, the pictures of which tend to indicate where the modern dance ideas originated. There are numerous thrilling shots of animal captures such as the whaling scenes, the lion hunt, the charge of the rhino into the face of the camera, and the capture of the elephants. There are many other equally thrilling hits—too many to record in detail here. The picture is a very fine entertainment of its kind.

Very Worth While Possibilities in This Exploration Novelty

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There is a very definite attraction in “Hunting Big Game in Africa.” It is essentially a novelty but also extremely valuable as an educational subject. A mighty large percentage of your folks will never get any nearer to Africa than they are to your theater and this is one very good reason for their seeing the picture. Appeal especially to those interested in zoological subjects but the film will also appeal to everyone who likes an entertainment of an unusual character. And they certainly get that in “Hunting Big Game in Africa.”

Present facts in connection with the expedition and get your folks interested well in advance. There is plenty of material for you to work with as far as exploitation is concerned and you might recall the Paul Rainey expedition of a few years ago with promises of newer and better pictures in this H. A. Snow expedition.
A Fairly Successful Attempt At a Slap-Stick Comedy of Feature Length

Lupino Lane in “A FRIENDLY HUSBAND”
Fox
DIRECTOR ......................... Jack Blystone
AUTHOR ............................ Jack Blystone
SCENARIO BY ....................... Jack Blystone
CAMERAMAN ........................ Jay Turner
AS A WHOLE .... A slap-stick comedy in five reels that holds the interest and contains more laughs than you might imagine STORY .... A fairly well connected plot with some new gags and some of the old ones well done DIRECTION .... Makes a good attempt considering

SUPPORT ........ Adequate; no one well known
EXTERIORS ....................... Suitable
INTERIORS ....................... Few
DETAIL ........ Ralph Spence’s titles more subdued

CHARACTER OF STORY .... Based on the familiar mother-in-law angle with the husband finally asserting his rights
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,527 feet

The director had more than an ordinary task on his hands when it came to making “A Friendly Husband” because it isn’t a very simple matter to make a five reel slap-stick comedy and get it over. But, on the whole, this Lupino Lane feature comedy does offer a pretty good humorous entertainment and for those who like this type of comedy, “A Friendly Husband” will probably send them into roars of laughter at frequent intervals.

There is fairly conservative plot that is one reason for a nicely sustained interest. Of course the usual humorous incident is used to a large extent to round out the situation and gather in the laughs. These are of a more or less familiar order and although many of the stunts have been used before there are also some first rate new gags and the old ones have been done over with some new touches. The idea of the mechanical contrivance operating on push buttons has been used in various forms but its association with a camping outfit is undoubtedly new. Folks will get a good laugh out of the camp wagon which Lane attaches to his Ford and brings home as a surprise for “wifie.” The mother-in-law angle is quite old stuff but it isn’t greatly overdone.

Lupino Lane works hard to put the picture over and the many admirers of slap-stick comedians will surely enjoy his stunts in this. His athletic ability is also given good opportunity for display. The director has made the mistake of repeating the gags as is so often the case in this sort of a picture. Lane’s attempt to get the Ford into the garage and the continual closing of the doors as he is about to drive in is very much overdone as is the incident of the suitcase when Lane tries to pack his “duds” in preparation for the vacation.

They get quite a good deal of fun out of the camping sequence in which Lane plays porter for the wife’s family. The bit where Lane goes hunting and the squirrel he’s aiming at is calmly sitting on his hat, offers a good laugh. The “cute” little animal that gets into the leg of Lane’s trousers is sufficient to knock the family over when he gets back to camp. They never fail to bring in this gag showing the comedian wriggling around with some moveable object causing him great distress. But the audience usually gets a laugh out of it so it’s evidently all right.

Has Enough Laughs To Make It Satisfy If They Want This Type Of Comedy

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Many exhibitors cater to a crowd that can never get too much of slap-stick comedy. For them “A Friendly Husband” will surely go big. They’ll have a lot of fun at the showing. In case you have been playing the recent Lupino Lane two reel comedies and they have liked them, you can count on satisfying them with Lane’s first feature comedy.

You might make it plain that it is a feature and it would probably be easy to get them interested if you could secure a trailer showing the unique camping outfit. They’ll want to know more about it. The title isn’t enough to let them know what sort of a picture this is so play it up with catchlines and display plenty of stills in the lobby unless you know they are familiar with the star and know what to expect.
Short Stuff

"Border Law"—Range Rider—Pathé
Type of production....................................................2 reel western

Texas Rangers and friendly Mexican Rurales cooperate in "Border Law" to round-up a trio of gun runners. Maloney is the bashful lover of the Ranger Captain's daughter. A supposed artist seeks lodging at the Captain's house and the girl, seeing in him her opportunity to make Maloney propose, takes him as a boarder. This gives the artist, really the chief of the gun runners, a chance to obtain needed information. The bashful lover, however, learns the true situation, and after a good chase through the mountains in which the girl is kidnapped and rescued, and the gun runners captured, he overcomes his bashfulness enough to make the desired offer. Pauline Curley is the girl and the cast includes Pedro Valenzuela, Tommy Grimes and Bud Osborne.

"No Luck"—Hamilton—Educational
Type of production....................................................2 reel comedy

There is some very funny stuff in Lloyd Hamilton's latest. The ladylike comedian is first seen trying his luck as a fisherman. The fish bite everything imaginable but the bait, finally jumping inside his shirt and biting him. Slow motion photography is introduced with exceedingly funny effect when the sweet boy is induced to smoke one of the girl's father's cigars and he floats away on the wings of tobacco. Several other good gags are introduced when he attends a society function in opera hat and rubber gloves that stick to his hands in spite of his efforts to free himself. The subject is well made and the laughs frequent.

"A Fool For Luck"—Universal
Type of production.....................................................1 reel comedy

The old stand-by, "April Fools Day" is used as the basis of this one reeler, directed by Scott Darling and starring Lewis Sargent, the champ messenger of the Western Union. While not hilarious, the fun is wholesome and Sargent's followers will be well pleased. Sargent is determined not to be fooled but the harder he tries the more luck is against him. On the way to the office he sees a pocketbook with a string on it. But they can't fool him. He hides in a doorway and sees another messenger come along and pick up the bag just as the owner whose knitting is on the other end of the string comes up and gives the finder a reward.

Screen Snapshots No. 17—Pathé
Type of production.....................................................1 reel fan magazine

Among the picture favorites caught at an actor's fund benefit are Mary Miles Minter, William Farnum, William Russell, Viola Dana, Enid Bennett, Conrad Nagel, Bebe Daniels and many others. Lillian and Dorothy Gish bid each other goodbye as Lillian sails for Europe. Wesley Barry and Marie Prevost have some fun in the studio. A very funny shot shows Ben Turpin and Charlie Murray at typewriters writing a world-beating scenario.

"Casey Jones, Jr."—Jack White—Educational
Type of production.....................................................2 reel comedy

Released under the brand name of "Mermaid," this is one of the best comedies that Lige Conley has appeared in some time. Directed by Del Lord, it is a railroad story that combines laughs with some good stunts. As assistant to the president of the railroad, Casey Jones, Jr., is sent to speed up The Speed-Ball, Celeryville's month late train. All is going reasonably well when Mexican Pete and his bandits board the train and steal the safe. A good effect is used here when the colored porter's eye-balls begin to swell from fright, finally becoming small balloons. Casey rides a bicycle over the roofs of the moving train and captures the bandits and the money. The cast includes Peg O'Neill, Violet Oliver, Jack Lloyd and Spencer Bell.

"Sting 'Em Sweet"—Century—Universal
Type of production.....................................................2 reel comedy

Brownie, the dog, and little Jack Morgan are the chief fun-makers in this one, written and directed by Raymaker. The opening shots showing Brownie giving Jack a shampoo are very "cute." Sister has two beaus and Jackie has a lovely time playing tricks on both of them. He slits pepper on one's bouquet of flowers, and then buys a box of bees which he presents to the company. The rest of the action consists of a grand scramble to avoid being stung.

Pathé Review No. 3
Type of production.....................................................1 reel magazine

This is a particularly interesting issue, containing material of varied subjects. Opening with some "living paintings," which are followed by street scenes in India, the New York Aquarium is visited and some queer fish filmed. These are seen to have almost human faces particularly the "boob faced" trigger fish, who try to swallow a black spot on the outside of the tank. Following this is a very cute cartoon subject in silhouette, after the manner of Tony Sarg, which under the title of "The Merrie Huntsman," depicts the adventures of a hunter in his efforts to capture some playful animals.

"Be Yourself"—Christie—Educational
Type of production.....................................................2 reel comedy

Two reels of very good entertainment are to be found in this Christie comedy, which Neal Burns and Charlotte Merriam help materially to put over, aided by a large cast. Particular mention should be given Babe London who, as the fat little factory girl, has quite a few laughs to her credit. Neal is the happy-go-lucky son of a manufacturer who puts him to work in the factory to bring him down to earth. He becomes the champion of the factory girls and they strike for a raise. After many complications he presents his new sweetheart to his dad, only to find that she has been put to work so that he would fall in love with her. The comedy has been directed by Al Christie from a story by Robert Hall.
"Prickly Conscience"—Bruce—Educational
Type of production...............1 reel scenic novelty
This one of the Bruce Wilderness Tales uses the flight of a young tramp who thinks he is pursued to bring out the beauties of the country through which he travels. There are several shots of exceeding beauty, and the photography throughout is splendid. The young man finally returns to his home town only to find that he is not being sought at all.

"Royal Chinook"—Kiser—Pathé
Type of production...............1 reel industrial
This is another of the Oregon Trail Series made by Kiser showing the industries of the Northwest and it depicts the life-history of Columbia River salmon in clear and interesting fashion. The photography is good and the picture will undoubtedly interest. The manner in which the salmon are caught for canning as well as the way in which the young are conserved is shown in detail. A good short reel.

Protection

Something to think about. Big operators of large chains;\nfirst run and others want it. Some getting it. Jensen & Von\nHerberg reported to be getting four months from some distributors. Ruben & Finkenstein reported wanting six months. Others\nhave been after it. Say they can't operate without it. That\nthey pay the bulk of the money for big pictures. And the\nneighborhood houses clean up. Because those houses don't\nseem to pay what the first runs do; and the folks won't come down\ntown, preferring to pay the lower prices in their home theater.

All of which may be true. And there isn't any doubt that\nthose difficulties exist. But you can't run the picture business for first\nruns alone. It just can't be done. First runs give a\nquick clean up and ready money in big gobs to a distributor. But except in unusual cases what production can live on first\nruns alone? The very big unusual ones—yes. The rest. No.\nAnd emphatically no.

What of exploitation; what of advertising; what of national\nadvertising? Is any one insane enough to figure that this\nproduces first run business alone? Forget it. If there is any\nsense in national advertising it is to awaken interest in home\nfolks for their neighborhood houses. And what would happen if\nthis "protection" was extended to six months generally? Who\nwould remember the pictures that came out six months back?\nWho can remember those that came out last August? Try and\ndo it—and get a headache.

Incidentally, what would happen if this “protection” idea spread? What do you think would happen among the second run and neighborhood operators? Will they be expected to sit back and laugh? Maybe. But more likely you will find them organizing combinations to offset the moves. And the most logical of all happenings subsequently would be booking combinations. And what a nice, messy sort of thing that would be?

Gentlemen, once again—what are you going to do about it?

OODLES OF MONEY

Scads of it. Warner’s bite off a quarter million for David Belasco. And Marcus Loew telegraphs a half million to Jackie Coogan.

Let’s see: was somebody saying something about “hard times”?

Where are they?

CRANDALL’S WISDOM

Speaking of “hard times” had a fine chat with Harry Crandall. Know Harry? Has the distinction of having been hit harder during 1922 than any exhibitor in the world. When the Knickerbocker collapsed—and there was a tremendous calamity—most of his houses were closed about seven weeks. And for a time afterwards you couldn’t expect much business from him. But he stuck to the job. Got a few more grey hairs. A few more lines about his eyes. And what’s the result?

Today Harry Crandall is one of the real optimists in the business. Pulled through. But still a-going. And he says this: “Every time you tell an exhibitor things aren’t so good what happens? He leans back and says, ‘Well, the other fellow is having the same trouble I have.’ But if you tell him you’re doing fine, and business is good if he isn’t getting what he should he’ll plug in and work and find out why. So the answer—don’t ever tell them business isn’t good. It isn’t good business. Few exhibitors work as hard as they should.”

Golly, Harry, but you said a lot.

R. H. AND BABY PEGGY

Cochran. Universal. Has a hobby—Baby Peggy, the diminutive star of one of their comedy companies. Regular little vamp. Sure has vamped Cochran. Every time they get a print in. Out it goes to New Rochelle. And all the friends of the family are called in. To see how Baby Peggy does it. And R. H. stops thinking about his new house. And all other things.

It’s great to have a hobby of a six year old star.

WATCH THIS ONE

JUST A SUGGESTION

When the late lamented Frank Bacon was alive a lot of offers reached John Golden to picturec “Lightnin.” With Bacon in his famous role. Deaf ears. Nothing happened. Then Frank Bacon was called home. And as picture material “Lightnin” is now worth about eight cents on the dollar. Or less.

Which suggests this: why not have David Warfield make “The Music Master.” Or one of his other big successes right now. When to be released is another story. Quite another story. And so with other big stage successes. So that the future will not be robbed.

JACKIE’S INCOME

Jackie’s pictures get a lot of money. And Jackie’s father is trusting Jackie’s share. And Jackie earns a bit more. Every time he offers a suggestion the company can use he gets 50 cents. And when they were making “Oliver Twist” he earned $50 this way. And this is his own money and he can do with it as he pleases.

Incidentally how many people know that Jackie’s father formerly had an act in vaudeville?

A WALLOP
Regular one. In Elmer Clifton’s “Down to the Sea in ships”—say; why will they stick these long titles on? There ain’t one theater front out of 50 that can handle such a title decently. But there’s a wallop in it. Big whale overturns small boat. Loaded with sailors. Real stuff. Way out in the ocean. No phoney tank stuff. And sharks sailing all around. Boy; this acting business may be all right. But Raymond McKeen won’t make another whaling picture for some time. He had enough with this one. Just need a good 24 sheet; a lot of prints and trailers. Of that whale stunt. To get this one over right.

THEM PRESS AGENTS
Carl Laemmle says he isn’t going to make many pictures that cost over $100,000. But the publicity boys send out a ice yarn. That “The Hunchback of Notre Dame” will cost a million. Atta boy’s.

Releases Switched
Al Lichtman will release “Poor Men’s Wives” next instead of “Are You a Failure?” The latter picture will be available in March. Before leaving the coast for New York, Gasnier practically finished the editing of “Poor Men’s Wives.”

American Legion Get Historic Film
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Indianapolis—The Film Service Division of the American Legion has acquired from S. H. Boynton, of Chicago, all rights to “The Man Without a Country.”

Lautem Not Pathe Salesman
According to Lewis Innerarity of Pathe, a man named Charles Lautem is representing himself in the Maryland and Virginia territory as a Pathe salesman, and is offering Pathe releases at low rentals. Innerarity states there is no such salesman in the employ of the company.

SKELETON RATTLING
And Jack Meador turns the limelight on the skeletons. And sends out a pretty yarn about Frankie Bailey’s legs. There are only three of us who remember her when she was with Weber & Fields. Joe Plunkett included. Wonder if we’ll see what’s left of them? In “The Famous Mrs. Fair.” Oh, by the way, there’s another oldtimer in the cast—Lydia Yeamans Titus.

GIRLS, A TREAT IS COMING
They say over at Inspiration that Dick Barthelmess will knock Valentino dead when the girls see Barthelmess as the handsome Latin in “The Bright Shawl” all dressed up n’ everything.

Court. Dean Fred E. Belton of the University of Washington faculty and Miss Bertha Hegman, public school teacher, the plaintiffs, ask for $500 each, which they claim to have invested in stock in the theater at 1305
E. 45th St., upon the assurance of Blaine and Gellerman, that it would be redeemed upon 30 days notice, and which he now claims it is impossible to do. These complaints follow several made last week. The Seattle Title Trust Co., is suing the theater company and Samuel and Mary Elizathabeth Fried, who leased the ground on which the theater stands, for foreclosure of $55,000 mortgage. The Lawyers Agree

Hitch in Standard Contract oned Out—Ready for Consideration of Exhibitors

The committee of attorneys representing the distributors who are members of the Hays organization, have agreed in a contract on the features that think should be embodied in the revised standard contract.

It is understood that in a few days a revised contract that this committee has prepared will be submitted to Will Hays and that the latter will then consult with the various exhibitors who have been a party to the conferences. The recent conferences the attorneys have worked out favorably in that the objections to our clauses which existed in one letter have been amicably arranged.

It is hoped that there will be no delay for the framing of two contracts and that one standardized form will be satisfactory to the M. P. T. O., New York, the T. O. C. C., and national M. P. T. O. as well.

THE FLAME OF LIFE
Universal-Jewel—5700 Feet

A vivid and vital picture which Universal offers in "The Flame of Life," an adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's story, "That Last of the Lowries," vivid in its dramatic sweep of realism, and the picturesque scenes of England's mining districts of 1879. A humorous, yet passionate, romantic appeal in its charming romance and the spirited note which runs throughout despite the cruel song of vengeance which dominates the rugged tale. There is something of a love story in this production. The progress of the story stands out, the acting is excellent. Of the story, as typified by Mrs. Eager's performance, the acting is truely

Plan 20 Features

Lesser-Ramish Enterprises Now Consolidated in Principal Pictures—Irving Lesser Back

Irving M. Lesser returned to New York yesterday from Los Angeles with the announcement that all of the Lesser-Ramish enterprises on the coast had been consolidated in one company, Principal Pictures Corp. While West Coast Theaters, Inc., will continue as such, Principal Pictures will be the main unit with Sol Lesser, president, Irving Lesser and Adolph Ramish, vice-presidents; Mike Rosenberg, secretary and Adolph Ramish, treasurer.

Principal Pictures have plans under way for the production of 20 features. Production will be centered in the Vidor studio, which, as noted, Principal has purchased. That deal was followed by the acquisition of 30 acres adjoining the plant on Santa Monica Blvd. for the construction of outdoor sets. The plans include three Harold Bell Wright stories, one of them "The Recreation of Brian Kent," "The Meanest Man in the World," a series of four Irving Cummings Prod., the first to be "East Side, West Side," a series of four from the newly formed Sac-cramento Pictures Corp., the first to be "Temporary Marriage," starring Mildred Davis, three from a producer, whose name cannot be given as yet, and four more adapted from stage plays or successful novels.

Lesser plans to remain in New York personally in charge of distribution. He has taken over larger offices on the 10th floor of the State Bldg.

Rialto

The second and fourth movements from the Fourth Symphony and Riesenfeld's Classical Jazz open the program, followed by the weekly magazine and the regular Finon song from the Music Box Revue, in "The Mirror." Dance, a music film, "Dear Old Pal of Mine" is next, sung by Thomas Cowan, baritone A Gypsy Dance by the Serova Dancers and Will Rogers in "Fruits of Faith" follow the feature, Mary Miles Minter in "Drunks of Fate ."

Strand

The Mark Strand Topical Review is the first number. A prelude to the feature, W. Griffith's "One Exciting Night," rendered by the Strand Orchestra is next. An organ solo finishes.

At Other Houses

"The Third Alarm" is in its second week at the Astor, the Criterion still houses "Adam and Eva indefinately, "Hunting Big Game in Africa" continues on at the Lyric, and "When Knight Was in Flower" is held for a second week at the Rivoli.

THE NEWS OF THE WORLD
Newspaper Opinions

“Gimmie”—Goldwyn Capiol

DAILY NEWS—We greatly admired the work of Miss Chadwick; she’s really awfully good. Then we liked Henry Wadsworth small bit as a male housekeeper, but we did not like the Mr. Hughes who doesn’t have much of a chance as the girl’s guardian, and Caswell Fardine, who makes the most of the musician’s role.

MORNING WORLD—We are just about convinced, however, that Mr. Hughes is more than a little bit insincere in these “pictures of life.” Rather, we imagine, he puts his heel on his real thought: “This will make a picture play.”

This motion picture is extremely well photographed and is acted perfectly by Miss Chadwick and Mr. Glass. It is titled brilliantly by Mr. Hughes.

TIMES—Rupert Hughes seems to have had a line in view when he started his latest photoplay “Gimmie.” It * Capitol this week, but he didn’t how very close to it as he went along. Helene Chadwick, * * * succeeds in vitalizing her role, despite the incredible things she is called upon to do. Kate Lester is also good, as usual.

TRIBUNE—It is a nice, friendly comedy that even Rupert Hughes might be proud of. We think next to “Hold Your Horses” it is the most entertaining of all the Hughes pictures.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Capiol’s “Gimmie” is a simple, well-plotted picture. Rupert Hughes photo-play a delightful story of the newly-weds’ problems. It is well cast and pictured.

HERALD—* * * a dignified, intelligent, and well-modulated production, and reflects much credit on the Hughes-Miller team.

EVENING WORLD—“Gimmie” is not as good as some things Hughes has done, nor is it as bad. Not by a long shot.

TELEGRAPH—With unerring aim, Rupert Hughes has taken the popular story that is warm human quality and its genial comedy edges.

MAIL—But the real theme of the play is less modern, being nothing more than the old story of a wife’s difficulties in extracting money from her husband. With so slender a plot it is not surprising that the film draws a good many of its 10,000 feet or so.

GLOBE—The majority of theatergoers will find Rupert Hughes’ latest cinema effort interesting, and therefore entertaining.

SUN—* * * very pleasant and alluring comedy.

EVENING POST—New Rupert Hughes moving picture has many interesting features.

Earnings Held Up

Famous Players Financial Condition
Excellent—$1,000,000 Note Wiped Out

Auditors of Famous Players are now at work on the company's annual statement, which will be ready for some weeks, in view of the reports yet to be made by a large percentage of the 145 odd subsidiaries operated by the parent company.

It is expected that the earnings for 1922 will be about a par with those of 1921. There is a possibility that the figures may drop below those of 1921 in view of the fact that the business slump extended into the first two months of this year. This earnings at the end of the third quarter of 1922 were about $2,800,000 and while this figure would perhaps, indicate a drop from the approximate $4,000,000 total of 1921, the returns for the last three months of 1922 are expected to swell the earnings close to the 1921 total.

Distinctive Productions have plans under way for 12 features two of which,
"Backbone" and "The Ragged Edge" are now in. While Arthur S.
Friend yesterday was non-committal
so far as other vehicles are concerned, it is understood he has practically closed to a well known distributor in a few days, distribution may be arranged for. It is understood that at least two important distributors have made bids for the series.

Important Decision

Rendered Relative to Foreign Market—Says Case May Be Appealed

A decision of importance, especially foreign market, and foreign day when a Supreme Court court, before Justice
Black, awarded Max Glucksman a verdict of $5,000 against Gillespie Bros. It is understood the case will be appealed.

The case involved the questions of damages that may be recovered by claiming that his rights had been infringed and made valueless by pirated copies appearing in the territory for which he claimed exclusive rights.

It appears that Gillespie purchased from Select Pictures the exclusive right to 19 pictures for the territory of Brazil and that Gillespie Bros. also acted as agents for Cine-mastografica Sud Americana who purchased the rights to exhibit the same pictures in the territory of Argentina and Chile. It is alleged the royalty provided for in the contract between Select and Cinemastografica Sud Americana was not paid and for that reason Select

Selling Points

For Production—Ragland on Coast for Asso. Exhibitors

John C. Ragland of Associated Exhibitors is en route to Hollywood where he will confer with producers with regard to correspondence that has been passing for several months.
It is expected he will remain indefinitely. Ragland will establish headquarters in Hollywood and will devote the bulk of his time to watching productions being made for his organization, primarily with a view of seeing to it that essentials to the sale of a picture be given room in the productions.

Associated Exhibitors have several units making pictures for release through that organization, including Douglas McLean, Madge Bellamy, Florence Vidor and Lach Baird.

The idea of having a representative at Hollywood for the purpose of having in production such ideas as will aid in selling the picture is being carried out by several companies, notably Famous Players.

Newspaper Opinions
"The Marriage Chance"—Amer.
Reles.—Cameo TRIBUNE—The story is terrible, but the direction is amusing.

MORNING TELEGRAPH— *
Freak film conceived and executed by Hampton Del Ruth. In fact, such a mixture that you've a little bit of everything and not much of anything.

AMERICAN—The acting is hopeful, and the possibilities for either epique, melodrama or comedy—separately—are good, but, as a coherent feature play, it should have been released as a disconnected two-reel serial.

MORNING WORLD— *
A gorgeous light comedy picture.  * "The Marriage Chance" is an audacious, extraordinary play which whizzes on with the pace of a Kausas tornado. Nor is it any less incorrigible.
Anything is likely to happen in it.

MAIL—It is a curious and extraordinary mixture of broad comedy, drama and sheen melodramas, so lacking in continuity as to be not a little confusing.

GLOBE— * "The Marriage Chance" is not such a bad product on the film mark.
It has a great deal of comedy and side show, which are excellent in themselves, and the dream, to those Frankly minded, offers food for reflection. A good cast helps this sketch immensely.

is pointed out that the fact that Famous Players had arranged with A. Lynch to actively take over the management of the Famous Players chain, is in it a very definite indication that company feels it can operate the chain on a successful financial basis, after Lynch's interest had been taken care of. When the annual report appears, one of the interesting angles will probably be the statement of the $1,000,000 note held by the name of the Amusement Enterprised Corp., as a result of the consummation of the Lynch deal. Famous Players officials scout the report arising in the Evening Post that 1922 statement would prove unreliable, and that a new stock issue would be necessary for financing purposes.

It was recalled that every year $500,000 in preferred stock is retired for amortization purposes, and the point was made that any consideration of comparative financial statements must be made with that fact in mind.

Two Problems
Radio and Basketball Giving Small Town Exhibitors Trouble
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Crookston, Minn.—C. L. Miller, New Grand, writing to Theodore Hays, of Finklestein & Ruben, says the radio and basketball are knocking blazes out of business. In part he writes:

"I believe that it is almost time to get out of the picture business, although I don't know what else to do. But it is a sure thing that people are losing their interest in pictures. It's about time that the big picture men cut out the 90 per cent bull and the 10 per cent picture and get down to giving the public something for their money. Good pictures still have a drawing power, but the trouble is there is too much Gold Leaf publicity spent on pictures, and then when you see them they are disappointing."

Columbus, Ind.—Frank Rembusch, who operates two houses here, says the craze over basketball in this section of the country has cut receipts 25 per cent.

May Work in West
According to Louis Lee Arms, American representative of Graham-Wilcox Prod., "Chu Chin Chow" which the company has purchased may be made in Hollywood. When Charles Wilcox arrives the end of the month from London, he will bring with him two Mac Marsh subjects, "Flames of Passion" and "Paddy-the-Next-Best-Thing."

In the Courts
A default judgment for $2,555 was filed in the Supreme Court in a suit of the Arrow Film Corp. against Llewellyn H. Allen of 130 West 46th St. on four trade acceptances.

In the suit of Eugene Spitz against Ivan Abramson and Graphic Films, over "Mother Eternal," Supreme Court Justice Tierney signed an order directing the Garfield National Bank to pay $1,482 out of a fund of more than $2,000 on hand, to Abramson for payments made and bills due. The income from the film is being deposited in the bank.

In the suit of Doubleday Page & Co. against Vitagraph for the cancellation of the contract to make films of the O. Henry stories, on the ground that Vitagraph is in default, Supreme Court Justice Platzer has decided against Vitagraph. He also denies Vitagraph's plea for an injunction restraining the publishers from contracting with another producing company for the filming of the stories.

A default judgment for $2,062 has been filed in the Supreme Court against Francis X. Bushman in favor of Suzanne Devoyod of the Comedie Francaise in Paris. She alleged that she sent $3,120 to Bushman on his agreement to come to Paris and take part in a film she was making but he failed to come and returned only $1,540 of the money. A letter from Bushman to the plaintiff, filled with the papers explaining that the Collector of Internal Revenue wouldn't let him leave the United States until he had paid $10,000 back taxes, and he couldn't raise the money, because his funds were tied up in alimony proceedings.

The estate of Harold A. Lockwood, who died Oct. 19, 1918, has been appraised at $32,552, which is divided equally among his mother, his son, Harold, and Gladys W. Lyle of Los Angeles. He had $22,017 in cash and $4,865 in Liberty bonds.

cancelled the contract. However, it is claimed, before the cancellation Glucksmann obtained from Select positive prints on their contract for Brazil and in violation of their contract shipped those positive prints to Chile and Argentina where they came into possession of Cinematografica Sud America, which exhibited the same in that territory. In the meantime and after the cancellation of the contract with Cinematografica Sud America, it appears Select sold to Max Glucksmann the rights to exhibit the same pictures in Argentina and Chile which had been exhibited by Cinematografica Sud America previously had. When Glucksmann found that the pictures which he had purchased from Select were being exhibited by others an investigation was made by him through his office here in New York and he claims these facts were unearthed, namely: that Glucksmann had shipped unauthorized copies into Glucksmann's territory.

In June, 1920, an action was begun by Glucksmann against Gillespie Bros. The case was tried by Allan Deutsch, of Rosett & Deutsch. The defendants were represented by Satterlee, Canfield & Stone.

Louis Broch of the Sheenbeek organization acted as an expert for Glucksmann.

Film Revival Tonight

There will be a revival of a number of old films at a special showing at the Selwyn tonight in order to show how the industry has advanced. Among the pictures shown will be "The Great Train Robbery," a Pickford release, various strips of colored films, and then a new Teleview demonstration.

Complains of Bad Prints

Frank Rembusch, in a letter to this office, encloses a letter sent to him by Frank Horn, manager of the American theater at Columbus, Ind., embodying a complaint against the condition of the prints sent to the American. Horn says not only were hundreds of feet missing, but the titles were too short and the film so rainy that the entire subject was valueless.

ess agents any more than we can use the stuff they send us to advertise.

While I ain't got any newspapers in any of my towns, I am glad of it. I couldn't do anything of the trash sent to me so that it won't kick on the publicity, but the big newspapers are terrible.

When Universal salesman came rough Pneumonia and got me to sell my pictures to him as the only told that they were worth rich Marcus Loew was and how much they would pay me. He didn't tell me that out the million guys that didn't have a nickel. Well, I bought the Elite theater out of Pneumonia and turned it from a stable to a temple of movies and changed the whole interior. It got me out the stalls, I didn't need them, there was too many in the business as it was. We boardeed up the red boxes and mangers and put in chairs. I ing paper bills from the ceiling—in fact I had a lot of money evolution under with Pathe weekly, because I heard it aed the Strand a week. Well advertised it. I put out two one sheets in the theater and I painted one fixed up for my own. That is put the other one sheet.

I well packed the house. It was a successful opening. I got eighty-one seats in the theater and it was eighty tickets. I say it in the other seat so I could say it was sold out. Well, I imagine because I felt it when the print goes in and I it's a one seeler and no drama in it.

The audience went away sore as hell.

I made a speech and said that the other movies must get a dust in the express traffic and that seemed to satisfy the audience for I heard one of them say that if other spools was like this they don't think God they was lost.

What the Mail Brought

Well, the news gets spread around the town that a live guy was in the business at Pneumonia and pretty well salesman started in and come in and talk about it. I got more mail in one week than the Pneumonia office ever handled in two years.

Well, I got eighty-one seats in the theater and it was eighty tickets. I say it in the other seat so I could say it was sold out. Well, I imagine because I felt it when the print goes in and I it's a one seeler and no drama in it.

"I came to New York to get about thirty feature suppers to run me a couple of months, as I can't depend on show getting in, in time, I missed three holidays and I went up and one show I missed was to play in "42nd Street," and make one dollar in it. I was going to tie up with a fertilizer company to spread fertilizer all over the street, in front of the theater and going out and renting a skunk to turn loose in the lobby. The skunk didn't get in and I was sunk for six bunks beside the skunk using his digital all over the lobby.

HUNTING BIG GAME

IN AFRICA

WITH GUN AND CAMERA

By H. A. SNOW

SWEEPS INTO PHENOMENAL

SUCCESS OVERNIGHT

What the Foremost Critics Say About It:

"In 'Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera,' H. A. Snow poked his camera right up under the noses of the wildest animals of the African jungles and came away with pictures of the whites of the beasts' eyes. This is an extraordinary film."—Quinn Martin, N. Y. World.

"Most satisfying pictures of wild animal life yet taken."—Don Allen, Eve. World.

"By all means see this picture and take the children, for if you don't they'll never forgive you, if they ever find out about this show."—Daily News.

"All the excitement, thrills and chills of 'Hunting Big Game in Africa' are there. No one between the ages of seven and seventy should miss this picture."—N. Y. Eve. Post.

"A marvelous panorama of wild life."—Evening Mail.

"No zoo in the world is able to produce as large a number of wild animals as these pictures show."—Loxella C. Parsons, Morning Telegraph.

"A vivid record of the thrills and chills of the jungle."—Rose Pelswick in N. Y. American.

"In the midst of most exciting adventures one suddenly realizes that during all this hazard the camera was there bravely cranking, cranking, cranking."—N. Y. Eve. Journal.

"'Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera' has virtually swept the town off its feet. The press went wild over the picture and stated it was the biggest entertainment in New York."—Variety of January 15th.

Order Modified

Valentino Wins Point Before Appellate Division—New Order Likely

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday ordered the injunction secured by Famous Players against Rodolph Valentino modified in three instances as follows:

In paragraph one of the words "of the district" eliminated.

In paragraph two the words "or rendering any services for himself or on his own account" eliminated.

It was taken for granted yesterday that these revisions meant that Valentino could go to work for interests aside from Famous Players provided he did not attempt to go into pictures or on the speaking stage, as long as the Famous contract existed.

As a result of the decision it is understood that a new order will be filed and when this is argued it is understood that Famous Players will make an effort to include in the injunction a clause preventing Valen- tin from appearing publicly in dances.

It is understood that under the decision Valentino can make phonograph records, and do any of a number of things other than appear publicly. The dancing point promises to be a strong one and much stress will be laid upon this. It is said that Valentino has offered $5,000 a week to the Keith circuit to do a dancing act in a theater.

At Famous Players the reading of the decision was made. Arthur Butler Graham, counsel for Valentino was out of the city yesterday, but at his office it was stated no one cared to make any comment in his absence.

Efforts towards patching up the difficulties between Valentino and Famous Players have been recently by interested friends of both Valentino and Adolph Zukor, but to date they have failed of consumma-

The Public and "Millions"

The following communication has been received from Pat Dowling, of The Christie Film Co., Hollywood:

"Dear Danny:

"Your editorial the other day on 'more pictures at lesser cost,' was a great thing, but didn't go far enough. I wish you could say something some day on the subject of 'less holiering from the industry to the public about money.'

"The Los Angeles papers have been flooded the last few weeks with studio stories about the millions to be spent by companies and to be earned by stars this year. Sometimes the figures are exaggerated, sometimes they are not. But in either instance, I believe publicity given to large figures has an awful kick back."

"The public is getting damn sick of having 'millions flung in their faces by moving picture interests. And yet some of our biggest companies go right on announcing 'million dollar quotas,' 'million dollar salaries,' 'million dollar contracts' and what nots.

"What is the use of continually shaming the public that ours is the fourth greatest industry, when figures recently given out in New York and printed in the leading dailies, motion picture products are not even listed in FIRST TEN?"

"The public has come to believe that every one connected with pictures is fabulously rich. You would be surprised to know how many times every day our comparatively small company is solicited for donations. The solicitors expect to get thousands.

"I believe there are certain people in Los Angeles who think that Will Hays and his big hearted bosses should build parks and community centers and playgrounds in Hollywood out of their 'fat purses' and fix the rotten streets and put in bus lines and new trolley service and perhaps build hillside homes for everyone who wants to live in the film capital.

"The public has naturally received these ideas from newspaper publicity concerning money. Every time they pay fifty cents to get into a theater they have an idea that about forty-nine cents of that is going right into the pocket of the star and the company producing the picture.

"It seems that we have tried our best to kill and cook our own goose in this way. Big figures may flatter the vanity of a few short sighted officials. It is a cinch they don't kid any exhibitors any more. And you can bet your life the time is some when they don't kid the public but simply do it what the well known red flag does to the bull."

Satisfying Light Entertainment With Numerous Pleasing Bits

"GIMME"
Rupert Hughes Prod.—Goldwyn

DIRECTOR ....................................Rupert Hughes AUTHORS .............................Rupert and Adelaide Hughes SCENARIO BY ...........................Rupert Hughes
CAMERAMAN ..............................John Meskill

AS A WHOLE.....A pleasing entertainment of the light variety; an enjoyable picture that the majority will like

STORY......Nothing very much to it but a lot of good incident and pertinent detail makes it attractive

DIRECTION.....Usually good; although occasionally choppy; production values high

PHOTOGRAPHY .................................Splendid
LIGHTINGS ......................................Excellent
PLAYERS......Helene Chadwick and Gaston Glass well suited to principal roles; others Kate Lester, Eleanor Boardman, David Imboden and H. B. Walthall

EXTERIORS ......................Very pretty garden shots
INTERIORS .................................Good DETAIL......All right; one or two sub-titles too "pointed."

CHARACTER OF STORY...........Business girl who marries wealthy fellow goes back to work to assert her independence

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION............5,769 feet

"Gimme," the latest Rupert Hughes screen effort, is an exposition of the modern woman, "in all her glory" and the pictures makes it very plain that she is here to stay so where they need to be convinced on this point, very likely Hughes' picture will go a long way toward getting them interested in the idea. If "Gimme" does nothing else, it certainly makes plain the position of the business woman of today and her attitude toward husbands and matrimony in general.

Rupert Hughes and his wife have supplied some interesting detail that will undoubtedly make the picture thoroughly attractive to a large majority of picture goers and although there is no very weighty material and some of the situations are slightly exaggerated, the idea contains a splendid quantity of audience appeal. These newlywed comedy dramas seem to "take" with the average public about as well as anything the screen offers. They never tire of the domestic trials and tribulations of the pretty heroine and her new, good looking husband. And they couldn’t ask for a better couple than Helene Chadwick and Gaston Glass, the newlyweds of "Gimme."

Besides the actual pleasure and entertainment to be found in the picture, there is some more or less convincing reasoning which may lead to heated debates where the spectators happen to find the theme "hitting home." There is a lot that can be said for and against the Hughes' idea of the modern woman, nevertheless. From a production standpoint, everything has been very well taken care of, and, as usual with the Rupert Hughes features, the picture contains plenty of pictorial appeal. One or two of the sub-titles might be modified to appear less "pointed."

Helene Chadwick is particularly appealing in this and she seems to get a lot of pleasure out of bringing friend husband, Gaston Glass, around to her way of thinking regarding a 50-50 sharing basis for husband and wife. Glass does good work also.

Story: Fanny Daniels, an interior decorator, borrows $500 from Lambert, her employer, who is in love with her, to buy her trousseau. Her marriage to the wealthy Clinton Ferris does not prove entirely successful and Fanny gets her job back. Lambert renewes his attentions and threatens to tell Ferris of the loan. In the home of Miss Wainwright, which Fanny is to redecorate, Lambert makes another plea and the two are discovered by Ferris. Miss Wainwright explains matters, Ferris learns that the loan bought Fanny's wardrobe, and a reunion follows with a 50-50 sharing basis as the understanding between husband and wife.

Material In This Will Appeal To Many
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors who cater to a crowd that prefers light, pleasing entertainments, will do well to secure "Gimme." It contains a lot of interesting angles on present day living that should make it particularly attractive. The title is unusually strong and should be sufficient to arouse their curiosity. They’ll all know what to expect since the recent popularity of the newly coined word.

A teaser campaign should prove effective exploitation. Use throw-aways employing the word "Gimme" with another such as "Gimme a dime," "Gimme a new hat," following it up with the announcement of the picture. Use Rupert Hughes' name and let them know Helene Chadwick and Gaston Glass handle the principal parts.
Fairly Interesting Picture Interrupted By Spooky Sequence

Hampton Del Ruth Prod.
"THE MARRIAGE CHANCE"
American Releasing Corp.

DIRECTOR .................... Hampton Del Ruth AUTHOR ....................... Hampton Del Ruth
SCENARIO BY ................ Not credited
CAMERAMAN ................... Dal Clawson

AS A WHOLE....... Rather interesting picture except that mystery episode is a trifle too gruesome despite dream ending

STORY.......Has some good romantic sequences and has been given a first rate production

DIRECTION.....Good, on the whole, though injects a little too much unpleasant detail in one sequence

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Very good
LIGHTINGS ................... All right
PLAYERS.....Alta Allen gives a pleasing performance and at times photographs very well; Milton Sills adequate; Henry B. Walthall, Tully Marshall and Irene Rich suitable

EXTERIORS .................. Few
INTERIORS ................... Appropriate
DETAIL ....................... Suffices

CHARACTER OF STORY.....Girl faints during her marriage ceremony and vision results in the marriage of sister whom she had persuaded against it

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,840 feet

The important feature of this Hampton Del Ruth production is the surprise ending upon which the climax hinges, a sequence which, in itself, consists of some rather unpleasant detail and incidents which may thrill those who don't object to their thrills being derived from fairly gruesome business. Of course it is all passed off in the dream ending but for the time being the atmosphere is thoroughly capable of supplying some very realistic chills for the more sensitive ones.

Will Do If They Don't Mind a Few Chill-Provoking Thrills

If you don't think they'll object to the mystery sequence and its somewhat unpleasant incidents, you will probably be able to please them with "The Marriage Chance." There are those who like thrills of this more or less sensational order so for them the feature will offer a first rate entertainment.

The cast is good and there are sufficient names that are well known to get them interested, such as Milton Sills, Henry B. Walthall, Tully Marshall, Irene Rich and Mitchell Lewis. The title is a good one and can be played up with catchlines and your usual announcements should be enough to take care of it. The picture does not warrant unusual exploitation or promises but should get over with the average audience.

Weak Story Material But Production Values Are High

"DRUMS OF FATE"
Paramount

DIRECTOR .................... Charles Maigne
AUTHOR ....................... Stephen F. Whitman
SCENARIO BY ................ Will M. Ritchey
CAMERAMAN .................. James Howe
AS A WHOLE............. Uneventful except for some fairly exciting African uprisings STORY........... Romance of the Enoch Arden variety with colorful atmosphere and adventure thrown in DIRECTION...... All very fine as far as production, photography and handling players is concerned but material made it stop there

PHOTOGRAPHY ................ First rate
LIGHTINGS ................. Good
PLAYERS...... Mary Miles Minter seldom convincing in emotional roles; Maurice B. Flynn a worth while hero with George Fawcett in a role that keeps him in the background; others Casson Ferguson, Bertram Grassby and Robert Cain

EXTERIORS............. All right though may not be the average conception of an African jungle

INTERIORS ................... Good
DETAIL ......................... Adequate

CHARACTER OF STORY........ Believing her husband dead, girl marries musician out of pity, returning to the former upon musician’s death

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION........ 5,716 feet

It really does seem an unfortunate piece of business that Miss Minter could not have been allowed to live happily ever after with her explorer husband since it had taken her so long to make up her mind in regard to a husband. The opening shot shows her entertaining the unlucky suitors, probably two dozen of them, and then came hero Maurice Flynn from out of darkest Africa and won the fair heroine. But that was only the very first few feet of “Drums of Fate,” with much uncertainty and unhappiness destined to fall on the shoulders of the pretty young wife. The picture is almost silly in its sincerity and it doesn’t seem at all possible that the young woman, so deeply mourning her husband’s death, could be goaded into marrying the crippled musician out of pity, even considering the very obvious sort of union that it was. Nor can you believe that it made the young artist happy when his bride’s affection was restrained to a kiss on his forehead.

Seriously, Stephen Whitman’s novel, “Sacrifice,” offers quite weak material for the screen and not at all an appropriate story for Miss Miles Minter since it requires considerable emotional work on her part and she is not well suited to this type of role. The situations are slight and the development depends upon coincidence and illogical twists that could never make the story a good entertainment. It moves along slowly and without much change of tempo except for the African uprising which is realistically staged and offers some excitement even though the jungle looks very much like other California woodlands.

Charles Maigne has given the story a splendid production with plenty of scenic investiture and a generally pleasing atmosphere. The Venice scene is very pretty, as are numerous other sets. The photography is excellent and the supporting cast first rate. Maurice B. Flynn is always a likeable hero and does very good work in this. George Fawcett’s role is unworthy of him.

Story: Carol Dolliver marries Larry Teck and they are quite happy until Larry is called back to Africa where he is captured by natives and reported dead. Sometime later Carol’s guardian encourages her to marry David, his crippled musical protege. Larry returns but, finding Carol married and believing her happy with David, again goes back to Africa. After David’s death Carol goes in search of Larry, risks her life among the natives, but is repaid by the reunion which follows when she finds Larry in a native camp.

Atmosphere May Appeal to Them But Don’t Promise a Lively Offering

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Where they want something a little unusual in the way of atmosphere, you may be able to satisfy them with “Drums of Fate,” or if they prefer a story somewhat unusual and won’t mind that it does not contain forceful situations. Very likely the presentation which you accord the picture will have a lot to do with getting it over so if you can secure the right musical score and proper effects to accompany the picture, it will make a better impression.

You know best what appeals to your clientele and whether or not they will like a picture such as “Drums of Fate.” Mary Miles Minter is the featured player so if she has a following you might use her name and those of her supporting cast. Paramount’s press sheet is complete with suggestions for exploitation if you want to make a fuss about the showing.
Good Production Rather Wasted On Undeserving Material

"WHILE PARIS SLEEPS"
Maurice Tourneur Prod.—Hodkinson
DIRECTOR ................. Maurice Tourneur
AUTHOR .................. Pan
SCENARIO BY ............. Not credited
CAMERAMAN .............. Rene Guissart
AS A WHOLE.............. Very good production accorded commonplace theme that has some gruesome twists

STORY.............. Not particularly attractive material although there is much interesting detail in its presentation DIRECTION........... Provides thrills of a rather unpleasant nature; production values are high
PHOTOGRAPHY .......... Good
LIGHTINGS ................. Usually good PLAYERS.............. Lon Chaney miscast; Mildred Manning and Jack Gilbert suitable; others Harden
Kirkland, Jack MacDonald and F. Farrell MacDonald
EXTERIORS .............. Show careful detail
INTERIORS ................ Fair
DETAIL ................. Good but occasionally unpleasant
CHARACTER OF STORY .... Sculptor, jealous of model’s suitor, plans with madman to kill the latter; repents in time to save man’s life

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...4,850 feet

The Hodkinson office is unable to state just how long ago Maurice Tourneur made this picture, an adaptation of Pan’s "The Glory of Love," but it is rather safe to draw your own conclusions if for no other reason than the fact that Lon Chaney is very badly cast. It is quite apparent that Tourneur made the picture before Chaney came to the fore as a "man of a thousand faces," for instead of having him play the part of the madman who models the crimes of the time in wax and occasionally shows his art of displaying torture through living models, they have Chaney cast as a sculptor suffering from an unrequited love for his model. Just to think of what Chaney could have done with the madman character certainly detracts greatly from the role he does portray, a part that is really obscure in comparison with the importance of the other.

Other than the interesting detail and good production which Tourneur has accorded the story, there is little in "While Paris Sleeps" to make it generally attractive. The theme, in the main, is the very time worn situation in which a rich father implores the girl in love with his son, to prove her devotion by giving him up. Regardless of the logic of it, the girl makes the sacrifice that is as old as the pictures and there is a subsequent reunion. Injected into this is a rather unwholesome twist that introduces a sequence of some fairly hair-raising scenes, tending to remind one of the once famous Eden Musee where the most famous criminals and their fiendish acts could be found duplicated in wax.

The idea of the madman presenting living models in his pet torturing device is the most gruesome bit and the shots of Jack Gilbert shown smouldering on the steps charged with electric current are far from what the average public expects in their screen entertainment. Very likely some of this will be edited before the picture goes out for general distribution.

It is a quaint Paris that Tourneur presents and the atmosphere is quite appealing with some of the street scenes and an inn on the outskirts providing some rather pleasing touches. Mildred Manning is the girl. She does satisfactory work and the cast, on the whole, is adequate. The Jack Gilbert in the picture is John Gilbert, Fox star for the past year.

Story: To please her lover’s father, Bebe pretends to favor the sculptor Santados, who because of his jealousy had contrived to have Marionette, a madman, get rid of the lover. At the last minute Santados weakens and the lover is saved from a death of torture and there is a happy reunion of the pair.

Will Appeal to Sensation Seekers. Not For a Family Clientele

This is one that you had better see for yourself and decide what you can do with it. Where they like sensational subjects the picture can be used and will undoubtedly satisfy them, but it is decidedly unfit for family consumption and will not appeal to those who object to gruesome or unpleasant things. If you cater to a regular patronage you know pretty well what they want and if the more or less sensational attractions do not appeal to them, this one will hardly do.

Many will probably come in if you want to exploit the picture on the strength of Chaney’s name but they will surely wonder why he has been so miscast. In view of the disappointment they are due for it may not be advisable to get them in through playing up Chaney. On the other hand it will go big with sensation seekers who will find a thrill in the “Chamber of Horrors” sequence.
Not At All the Right Vehicle for Jones Nor a Good Entertainment

Charles Jones in
"THE FOOTLIGHT RANGER"
Fox

DIRECTOR ......................... Scott Dunlap
AUTHOR ............................. Dorothy Yost SCENARIO BY ........................ Dorothy Yost
CAMERAMAN ........................ Dev Dennings
AS A WHOLE...........A very tame offering for this star, wholly unlike what they expect from him STORY..............Gives Jones quite a vacation; poor drama that isn't always wholesome either DIRECTION.........Fair; didn't do anything that would lift material out of the ordinary class
PHOTOGRAPHY ................. All right
LIGHTINGS ................. Adequate
STAR............Does well enough but belongs in western dramas SUPPORT........A satisfactory supporting company includes Fritz Brunette, Lillian Langdon and Henry Barrows
EXTERIORS .............. Suitable
INTERIORS .............. All right
DETAIL ................. Ample
CHARACTER OF STORY.......Ranger, in love with actress, follows her to New York where he saves her from attack by her manager
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......4,729 feet

Wherever the Fox scenario department saw possibilities in this story as a vehicle for Charles Jones isn't at all obvious, not so much that Jones doesn't handle the role he is given satisfactorily, but that the whole atmosphere and plot does not suit his personality nor is it the thing he does best. Folks have come to look for live westerns with plenty of good action as the Charles Jones features, but they are due for a disappointment in "The Footlight Ranger."
The role of Bill Moreland gives the star very little real opportunities and hardly any chance for his typical line of action. There is a fight or two but very tame affairs in comparison with what you usually get from Jones. The idea of a regular cowboy hero following an actress around with nothing particularly exciting happening makes a slow-moving and rather dull picture and even when the girl becomes the subject of the manager's unwelcome attentions and Jones is kept busy protecting her, things are not over interesting and the story drags along to an equally tame finish. There is no suspense nor attempt to build toward the climax.

And the situations are not what might be called altogether wholesome. They make it very plain what the manager's intentions are toward the girl he plans to star in a Broadway show and the private dining room sequence at the notorious inn isn't exactly what folks will want their young daughters to see. All of which emphasizes the fact that the story is wholly inappropriate and unsuited to Jones, from whom his admirers have come to expect clean, wholesome western entertainments.

It is very amusing to read the synopsis contained in the Fox press sheet and compare it with the story as it appears on the screen. Evidently it was written before the picture was made, or else the one that wrote it took a poor guess at what the picture contained. Some of the posters included on the press sheet also indicate incidents that never occur, such, for instance, as the fire at the oil field. There is no such sequence in the picture. Jones does good work, but it is hard to figure him in a picture of this kind.

Story: Bill Moreland meets Janet Ainslee, a stranded actress, and by selling his dogs secures money to pay her way back to New York. Later Bill goes to the city and again meets Janet, who is about to be starred on Broadway in a show backed by David Marsh, whose attentions to Janet are unwelcome. How Bill saves Janet and they go back west together completes it.

Will Disappoint Star's Admirers Who Expect Action

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Probably Jones' admirers will accept it without much fuss but they are sure to wonder why he was ever given such an ill-suited story as this one. It all depends upon how well they like the star. Of course if you don't have to worry about regular patronage, you can use your own judgment. Probably the story would just appeal to your folks. You know them best.

But make it clear just what sort of a story this is and you won't make it very clear if you use the variety of stills and posters suggested in the Fox press sheet. They look more like the usual Jones offering. Also do not reprint the synopsis as printed in the press sheet. It is not the story as it appears on the screen.
Sea Picture With Action and Thrills Offers Good Entertainment

"ALL THE BROTHERS WERE VALIANT"
Metro

DIRECTOR .................. Irvin Willat
AUTHOR ................... Ben Ames Williams
SCENARIO BY ............. Julien Josephson
CAMERAMAN ................. Robert Kurrle
AS A WHOLE............ Virile sea adventure picture which offers fine thrills, unusual action and splendid atmosphere

STORY...... Of the Jack London type with strong situations and many worthwhile moments DIRECTION....... First rate; provides fine atmosphere and action aboard whaling vessel has a wallop

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Excellent
LIGHTINGS ................. Good

PLAYERS...... A splendid cast with fine co-operation among the players; Malcolm McGregor comes up front with fine dramatic performance; Lon Chaney good, as usual, and Billie Dove a pleasing heroine

EXTERIORS .................. Beautiful water shots
INTERIORS ................... Few

DETAIL ......................... Suitable

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Young sea captain proves himself the master when he quells mutiny among his men, aided by brother previously a traitor

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... 6,265 feet

There is a big majority of picture patrons that favor virile sea stories of the Jack London—"Sea Wolf" variety. And they couldn’t ask for anything better than Ben Ames Williams' "All the Brothers Were Valiant," a delightful, adventurous tale of the water that contains all the elements of popular appeal consistent with the type of entertainment which it offers. The picture is a first rate entertainment of its kind and should please a great many.

Besides a pleasing romantic angle, the many fine bits of action and some worthwhile thrills, as well as slight comic relief, the story contains one particularly notable bit of character development in the person of Captain Joel Shore. In this connection especially, Director Willat has shown considerable skill. From the outset the spectator realizes that the youth is destined to be the hero of the story, but Willat's deft handling of the character does not hint as to how it will be brought about, nor do you know whether Joel is strictly a weakening or just habitually reticent. Of course, much credit is due Malcolm McGregor, who comes well to the fore for his work in the role of Joel Shore. McGregor makes the character real and there is plenty of force in his portrayal.

Irvin Willat has injected delightful atmosphere and the scenes aboard the whaling vessel are indeed pleasing. And the last two reels contain sufficient action to thoroughly make up for a rather slow beginning. There is real action in the mutiny sequence, and the attempted rescue of Mark Shore by his brother Joel in the shark infested waters, and earlier in the picture the killing of a whale are also fine. The interest is well sustained and with the exception of being just a trifle slow in getting started, the story moves along at a good pace all the way.

Billie Dove photographs very well and is a pleasing heroine. Lon Chaney gives his usual splendid performance as Mark Shore and Robert McKim is the heavy. The cast, on the whole, is quite satisfactory.

Story: The whaling vessel returns without its captain, Mark Shore. Joel, a younger brother, is made captain and his bride sails with him. They find Mark, who explains how he had been ill with fever and nursed by a native girl. Mark incites the crew to mutiny when Joel refuses to return to the island where Mark had hidden valuable pearls belonging to traders. How Mark eventually comes to Joel's rescue and order is preserved is followed by Mark's death in the sea.

Will Please a Big Majority and Will Stand Some Promises
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Here is a good strong sea story with adventure, action, thrills and romance, that should go big with your audience. If you know they are particularly fond of this type of entertainment, it should be worth your while to make an extra fuss about the showing and let them know what "All the Brothers Were Valiant" is all about. The title itself isn't sufficient to indicate the type of story it is, so use plenty of stills in the lobby and whatever exploitation you think necessary to acquaint them with the picture.

You can promise that Irvin Willat has supplied a fine production and use the name of the author. Of course Lon Chaney's name is another asset and others who deserve mention are Malcolm McGregor, Billie Dove and Robert McKim. The picture is worth your effort to get it over and get your folks in.
Herbert Bradley arrived home from college, handsome, polished, and possessing all the social graces. His awkward brother, Jim, who had always been regarded as a "Second Fiddle," was relegated to the background.

Herbert immediately took possession of Jim's room and threw out all his belongings, to which Jim said nothing.

Jim permitted his automobile to be monopolized by the egotistical Herbert, who utilized it to take Jim's sweetheart driving.

Finally, Herbert tried to steal Jim's sweetheart.

BUT—the worm turned!

Just how Jim finally asserts himself and proves his manhood in a crucial test, and wins the girl of his dreams, is told in this enthralling and gripping film drama.
MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "Second Fiddle" may be put down as a likely attraction.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD: This is a feature that should please every class of patrons. It has heart interest, thrilling suspense, and Glenn Hunter in a most appealing role. It is a superior attraction that promises satisfaction to the box-office.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: There is no doubt in our minds that it will be well received wherever shown.

MORNING TELEGRAPH: Glenn Hunter does his usual splendid work as Jim Bradley, the "second fiddle." He is an actor who possesses unusual charm, rare intelligence and an acute sense of comedy.

EXHIBITOR HERALD: "Second Fiddle" has the appeal of a well-told story, natural and picturesque New England scenery, and it will please the majority of picture-goers.

FILM DAILY: Has elements that will appeal to a good majority. Contains effective thrills, enough action, a first-rate atmosphere and a cast that does very good work.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: "Second Fiddle" is so well handled, and so appealing in its humanness, that it is a thoroughly pleasing offering. Glenn Hunter does good work; the same is true of Mary Astor.

Mary Carr in Another “Mother” Role That Doesn’t Approach the Others

"THE CUSTARD CUP"

Fox

DIRECTOR .................. Herbert Brennon
AUTHOR ............... Florence Bingham Livingston
SCENARIO BY .......... G. Marion Burton
CAMERAMAN .................. Tom Malloy

AS A WHOLE . . . . . . . Mostly human interest stuff with some good characterizations but little plot

STORY . . . . . . . . . Made up of good incident and detail but not particularly strong in situations

DIRECTION . . . . . Brings out characterizations effectively and offers one good thrill; occasionally drugg

PHOTOGRAPHY ..................... Good
LIGHTINGS ........................ All right

PLAYERS . . . . . . . . Mary Carr featured in one of her typical “mother” roles; Miriam Battista handles an important part very well; others adequate

EXTERIORS .................. Suitable
INTERIORS .................. Appropriate

DETAIL .................. Occasionally overdone

CHARACTER OF STORY . . . Kind-hearted woman of the tenements is implicated in counterfeit scheme but saved by secret service man

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ............. 6,166 feet

For those who like plenty of human interest in their entertainment, “The Custard Cup,” the first of the new series of Fox specials, will undoubtedly prove satisfying. It does not contain a very prominent or weighty plot nor any particularly outstanding situations. Instead it is composed of incidents of the human interest variety with some rather effective characterizations. The action is very slight and with the exception of an excursion boat fire and the last reel raid on the counterfeiting den, “The Custard Cup” doesn’t boast of thrills.

Will Probably Please an Average Crowd and Admirers of Sentiment

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Where they like heart interest and human interest stuff you can rely on “The Custard Cup” to satisfy them. They will like Mary Carr and her devotion to the three little children whom she has adopted to take the place of her own that died and they will be delighted with the fighting little Lettie which Miriam Battista makes very real and convincing. But for those who are more critical you may have difficulty pleasing them with this one since it lacks strong situations and suspense.

You can talk about the excursion boat fire if you want to attract them by promises of thrills but don’t go too strong on this angle for the fire is the only real bit of action in the picture. Of course your big talking point is the name of Mary Carr, the famed mother of “Over the Hill” and “Silver Wings.” Her admirers will surely want to see the picture.
THE GHOST PATROL"
Universal

DIRECTOR ................. Nat Ross
AUTHOR ..................... Sinclair Lewis
SCENARIO BY ................ Raymond Schrock
CAMERAMAN ................ Ben Reynolds

AS A WHOLE...... A satisfying short entertainment pleasingly portrayed by a capable cast and nicely produced.

STORY........ Contains interesting atmosphere and situations that have been rather carefully handled.

DIRECTION...... All right; sustains interest very well and tells story smoothly.

PHOTOGRAPHY ................. Good
LIGHTINGS ...................... First rate PLAYERS....... Bessie Love an appealing heroine and Ralph Graves tries very hard but is not especially well suited; George Nichols very good, also Geo. Williams and Max Davidson

EXTERIORS .................. Settings, but realistic
INTERIORS ................. Suitable
DETAIL ....................... Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Daughter of delicatessen keeper is happy with boy she loves after father's objections are overcome.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 4,228 feet

Besides an appealing romance there is some effective heart interest touches in "The Ghost Patrol," a story by Sinclair Lewis, in which Universal is featuring Bessie Love and Ralph Graves. The idea of the parental objection to a daughter's love match has served as the basic situation of many screen plays in the past but this time it is worked in, in connection with interesting by-plot that includes some effective heart interest.

Director Ross has provided a satisfying production, injected a good deal of pleasing atmosphere and handled the players to good advantage. The down-town district known as "Little Hell" is nicely pictured and while the scenes are apparently studio affairs they are quite real looking and the photography and lightings have been given considerable careful attention, especially in the street scenes.

The story unfolds smoothly and Ross has succeeded in sustaining the interest satisfactorily. Besides the romance of the delicatessen proprietor's daughter and the rowdy who has reformed there is a pleasing sequence devoted to Don Dorgan, the policeman, who for years has patrolled "Little Hell" and kept order through his kindly manner rather than by domineering them. There are some fine heart interest bits in connection with the enforced retirement of Dorgan by the new police chief and his subsequent secret patrols when he dodges the officer who has replaced him. The twist which comes at the end, with Dorgan re-instated and made captain, will probably not be as much of a surprise as it is intended to be. The audience rather expects this to happen in the natural course of events adding to the happy ending.

Bessie Love is thoroughly appealing as the girl who finally braces her father's anger and goes to her lover even though it means that she cannot go back to her father. Ralph Graves works hard as the lover but he is not particularly well cast since the part requires considerable emotional acting and Graves isn't able to carry over convincingly. Character bits that are interesting are contributed by George Nichols, George Williams and Max Davidson.

Story: Kugler refuses to allow his daughter Effie to marry Terry Rafferty, one of the idlers of "Little Hell," although Terry was on the way to reforming. In despair Terry gets drunk and assaults the political boss and is sent to jail for a year. Upon his release Terry is slugged by one of the boss men. Dorgan, the policeman, friend of both Effie and Terry, brings word of the accident to Effie and upon Terry's recovery there is an all-around reconciliation.

Title Can Be Exploited and Use Names of Featured Players
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The average audience will like "The Ghost Patrol" because it contains elements of appeal that usually attract the majority of picture goers and it is short, and to the point. For those who like romantic stories "The Ghost Patrol" will prove particularly interesting. It has exploitation angles that can be taken advantage of such as the names of the players including Bessie Love and Ralph Graves, who are featured, and also George Nichols and Geo. B. Williams who offer thoroughly worth while characterizations.

Play up the title with catchlines and tell them about the policeman who refused to be retired. Universal's press sheet offers interesting suggestions for stunt advertising that should easily attract the attention of your people.
Interesting and Novel Offering Dealing With South Sea Island People

"HEAD HUNTERS OF THE SOUTH SEAS" Associated Exhibitors

DIRECTOR ......................... Martin Johnson
AUTHOR ........................... Real narrative
EDITED AND TITLED BY........... Arthur Hoerl
CAMERAMAN ........................ Martin Johnson
AS A WHOLE ................. A novel entertainment that will appeal to those who like something a little different STORY .......... Deals with customs and habits of natives in cannibal islands of the South Seas DIRECTION ........ Includes much interesting detail in connection with island inhabitants

PHOTOGRAPHY .................... Very good
LIGHTINGS .......................... Good
PLAYERS .............. Martin Johnson, Mrs. Johnson and the natives EXTERIORS ........ Reasons picturesque views
INTERIORS .................. None
DETAIL .................. Pleasing
CHARACTER OF STORY .......... Explorations in jungle lands
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,000 feet

There is much that is interesting and enlightening in this latest edition of Martin Johnson's jungle adventures and while "Head Hunters of the South Seas" does not contain as many thrilling bits as his "Among the Cannibals of the South Sea Islands," there is probably more interesting detail and intimate views of the habits and customs of these savage people in this picture than in the other. The offering is a pleasing variation from the regular routine screen entertainment and should prove popular where they welcome an occasional change.

In "Head Hunters of the South Seas" Mr. Johnson and his plucky little wife return to the land of Malekula where the Johnsons met with hostility upon their last visit and narrowly escaped with their lives. Chief Nagapate seems inclined to be more friendly this time and Johnson secured some interesting results when he showed the natives motion pictures of themselves which he had taken during his last visit. Despite the difficulty of securing the pictures at night without proper lighting facilities, the pictures are fairly clear and the effect of "seeing themselves as others see them" is an interesting touch. The last seen of Chief Nagapate he is pushing off in a small craft thoroughly satisfied with an umbrella presented to him by Mrs. Johnson.

The travelers leave Malekula and arrive at the island of Santo, which is inhabited by strange diminutive people who had to be dragged out of their jungle haunts to pose before the camera. They live in the trees and are about as close a relation to the monkey as any human that you have ever seen. Their maneuvers in the trees, at a distance, would lead you to believe they were monkeys, although they probably are not quite as agile as the pictures would have you think. It is obvious that these scenes are run at a much faster speed to give you that impression.

Many of the close-ups of the natives are of particular interest and the exaggerated headdresses will prove most interesting. Besides pictures of the island people, Johnson has also secured many very beautiful views of the tropical islands that include a scene of a volcano eruption and one picture which Johnson claims to be the first photographic record of an earthquake. There are also many very attractive water views that gives the offering considerable pictorial value.

Should Be an Agreeable Variation for Your Program

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors who like to vary their entertainment will find a very pleasing and novel offering in "Head Hunters of the South Seas," another expedition into the tropical islands by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, who have previously secured many unusual pictures of the South Sea tribes. You can make promises for the novelty of the picture and get them interested by catchlines such as: "In Head Hunters of the South Seas" you will see how a tribe of cannibals acted when they saw their first motion picture, a picture of themselves."

If your folks saw the last Johnson picture, "Among the Cannibals of the South Sea Islands," they will undoubtedly be interested in the latest adventure and your lobby can easily be dressed up to attract their attention. Besides the novelty value of the offering, talk about its pictorial appeal and of course it is educational, as well.
Short Stuff

"Fighting Blood"—George O'Hara—F. B. O.
Type of production ..................... 2 reel comedy drama

A brand new series that looks like ready money and lots of it in the box office. H. C. Witwer, the noted slang writer whose contributions to Collier's Weekly and other publications have made his name a household word is the author, and the first of the series of two reels based upon the Witwer stories were given a preview last week. In many instances the productions savors somewhat of the famous and very popular series called "The Leather Pushers" released by Universal. There is a considerable difference between these productions, however. This series shows a large variety of young folks and the types especially are very well selected. Production values are unusual for two reelers and while the fighting and boxing episodes appear in each of the two reels there is not as much of the actual fighting or the exhibition of the naked body as in the earlier sequences of "The Leather Pushers." There is a lot of comedy introduced and if the remainder of the series live up to what developed in the first three stories they are going to prove a mighty good bet.

Clara Horton plays opposite the star and Mal St. Clair directed. Some exceptionally good camera work appears for which Lee Garmes is given the credit. Nearly all of the stories dwell upon instances in the development of the career of "Six Cylinder Smith" a nom-de-plume taken by a former dispenser of soda water. The love interest is very well carried out and as a whole the series should prove one of the best bets of the season for short stuff.

"Mr. Hypno"—Hal Roach—Pathe
Type of production ..................... 1 reel comedy

In this week's release, Paul Parrott is seen as a hypnotist. His youthful assistant, Jobyna Ralston, tries her best to make the performance go over well but in spite of their combined efforts the audience is getting suspicious. A hypnotist "professor" whom Paul owes for a course of lessons is excluded in the audience and takes this chance to get even. The offering is a bit ahead of the usual run of this series, but depends chiefly upon slapstick for its humor.

"By Lantern Light"—Bruce—Educational
Type of production ..................... 1 reel scenic-drama

This, one of Robert C. Bruce's new series of Wilderness Tales, is one of the finest short reel scenic seen this season. It combines the exquisite background of the Oregon sea coast with its rocky cliffs and caverns with an appealing tale of two little boys who, caught in a cave by the incoming tide, are hunted for during the entire night by their anxious family. Artistic in the extreme are some of the shots which give silhouette-like effects to the figures caught in the waning light. The sea shots have a haunting beauty that will not be quickly forgotten. This is a short reel that can be played up as well as the feature with which it is used in conjunction, with the full assurance that it will please a critical audience. The photography, for which John M. Lemond is given credit, is among the best yet done in this type of production, but besides the beauty of the scenery which in itself is enough to hold the attention, the little story is very well done and holds the attention closely.

"Moonblind"—Bruce—Educational
Type of production ..................... 1 reel scenic-drama

"Moonblind" is the first of a new series of Bruce Wilderness Tales, released by Educational, and the beauty of the mountain tops in the opening shots is enough to make one gasp. Giant mountains with peaks in the clouds, snow covered ravines, and grass covered hills are the background against which the little drama is enacted. The story is simple but delivered forcefully. Two prospectors are searching for gold. One, bothered by his partner calls "moonblindness," ties a handkerchief over his eyes. His partner slips down a cliff and injures his legs and the blind partner finally crawls down the cliff and reaches him, only to drag him around all through the night in an effort to find their camp. The suspense is held exceedingly well. Dawn finds them both exhausted but his prayer for help is answered by means of the sun shining on a tin pan which a nearby sheepman sees. He is rescued only to find that it was all a dream and his partner is perfectly well.

"Keep 'Em Home"—Carter DeHaven—F. B. O.
Type of production ..................... 2 reel comedy

Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven are supplying the short reel comedy market with some first rate humorous subjects that should be popular with exhibitors. The type of comedy which they present is of the domestic order, and contains a good deal that make the pictures appealing to the average audience. They usually consist of "knocks" at the usual squabbles of a young married couple and in "Keep 'Em Home" the idea is readily guessed from the title. The young wife doubts the absence of her husband with the unsatisfactory business cause the trouble. The wife's plan to make hubby jealous and her subsequent suspicion when she discovers powder on his coat sleeve lead to complications that offer pleasing comedy entertainment and will be liked by a big majority.

care of The Film Daily
"The picture opens with views of life at a seaside resort near Paris and we see Miss Vidor aquaplaning, swimming and indulging in other red-blooded sports. The action shifts to America and then quickly to the South Seas. The fights which David Butler puts up during the 'shanghaiing' moments are real stuff. The island life is well pictured and there are a number of amusing situations here.

"The chase of two ships through the seas is a bit of excitement. Miss Vidor and Mr. Butler do most of the work in the picture and do it well. The supporting cast is adequate. The photography is clear and artistic, while the subtitles are snappy and excellently worded."

Motion Picture News

"The picture is so good to look at and made up of such a variety of interesting scenes that will please, that the more or less stereotyped plot will not detract as much from the feature's entertainment value as it might under a less careful production. King Vidor has secured numerous pleasing locations that have been artistically photographed and the atmosphere throughout is one of pictorial appeal. Florence Vidor's ... pleasing personality and ability to hold her audience regardless of what she has to do, is another redeeming feature for Henry C. Rowland's theme."

"Florence Vidor has always been one of this reviewer's screen favorites. She soothes the eye and satisfies the intelligence. Ear rings, negligence and exaggerated eyelids have not figured unduly in her success. And so it is easy to be entertained when Miss Vidor fills the camera eye. 'Conquering the Woman' is entertaining, sprightly and well cast."

The Morning Telegraph

"Florence Vidor in 'Conquering the Woman' is a good, entertaining feature, built along a theme that is familiar, but which is, at the same time, thoroughly pleasing in its unfoldment and picturization. David Butler plays the hero role and is well cast. The picture was directed by King Vidor from a story by Henry C. Rowland. Six reels.

"This newest Florence Vidor feature should not fail to register pleasantly with any audience. There is a genuine, pleasing vein to the story which makes the picture satisfying entertainment of a light, easy-to-follow variety.

"Miss Vidor is appealing and winsome at all times and in selecting David Butler to play opposite her, in the role of the hero, Director Vidor made a particularly effective choice. In this story the two make a great combination."

Walker Suing

Directed to File New Claim In Suit Against M. P. T. O. For Fees

Supreme Court Justice Wagner has signed an order directing State Senator James J. Walker to file a new claim in his suit against members of the M. P. T. O. of A., to recover $5,262 alleged to be due. Senator Walker brought his action last summer and named as defend-ants Sydney S. Cohen, William A. True, Edward Fay, Marcus Loew, Samuel I. Berman, Charles L. O'Reilly, John Mannheimer, William D. Burbank and William A. Steffes.

The complaint alleged that Senator Walker was hired as national counsel for the Illinois Association at $1,000 a month and expenses in August, 1920, and performed his services until May 10 last, when his employment was terminated. He wants $5,262 for each month from November, 1921, to last May, and $262 disbursements.

Gilbert & Gilbert as attorneys for True, Burbank and Steffes, asked that Senator Walker be compelled to file a new complaint on the ground that he alleged that he was employed by the defendants and "others," and he failed to name the "others" as defendants also. Justice Walker upheld this contention.

which, through box office approval, indicate the type of entertainment desired. But often this is momentary; a whim to be appeased. Then some of these very pictures drop off in certain neighborhoods. For no apparent reason whatsoever. And no one seems to know why. Which leads up to the petty and important—who has the vision? And why is it not placed in operation? Because once this question is intelligently answered it might be simple to figure out a lot of the “whys” and “wherefores” that hit this business. Every once in awhile.

BIG DEAL PENDING
A little bird drops an idea. That there is a mighty big deal pending. And there should be some interesting developments during the next few days. Meanwhile the lawyers are busy scratching out, and inserting in. Clauses.

CLEM’S HIT
Clem Deneker. Pneumonia, Nev. That’s his moniker. And the celebrated exhibitor. Whose hard luck stories have created universal sympathy for him. Told his troubles to the AMPA. And “drew” the biggest house ever attending their famous and select Thursday luncheons. Clem was a real knockout. He’s visiting the local show palaces and his opinions of Broadway shows, and management, will, as usual, appear exclusively in THE FILM DAILY— Advt.

GEMS
When Robert Bruce made his first series of “Wilderness Tales,” among those who raved over them was yours truly. Saw the second series a few days ago. And boy, they are there. Probably “By Lantern Light” is the best all around for entertainment and artistic effects. But “Moonblind” runs close, and “Jenkins and the Mutt” has some fine shots and some wonderful tinting. These fit in every program. From Brooklyn to Buenos Aires.

Go on, Bruce. Make some more.

A RASPBERRY
Says the Honorable Richard A. Rowland. Of First National. According to the New York World:

The popular girl of pictures will not be the pretty, doll faced type. She will be the ordinary appearing young woman who plays the leading role in melodrama, because melodrama is going to be the principal screen fare, and in this form of picture facial beauty does not count for much. In almost every case out West the studios are getting ready for a series of these plays.

When RA reaches Hollywood. Next time. What a reception he will have from the doll faced lot? Whose numbers are muddled. And whose doll expressions. Have put many houses in the “red.”

IMPORTANT—PROBABLY TRUE
Sub franchise holders of First National may be happy from now on. Just maybe. For ’tis said that Katherine MacDonald’s contract will not be renewed. And the lady of ice plans retirement from the screen. For marriage. Yes, boys, 1923 does look better.

SALESMANSHIP
This yarn comes from out Denver way. Where Harry Nolan holds forth. And just a few miles from Clem Deneker’s abode of pleasure:

Jack Lannon, old time liquor dispenser, up in Butte. Saw dust, back room, piano player, girls and everything. Regular place. The boys came from miles around. All the wise crackers. Everybody happy. Mr. Volstead popped up; stopped all the mirth and gaiety. Too bad. Jack had a lot of kule. Somebody promoted him into bank robbing. Sold him an independent exchange. Explained how soft it was, etc. After awhile Jack discovered “Not so good.” The customers didn’t crave his product. Assortment bad, but had one good one. Says Jack:

In the Courts
The suit of Benjamin P. Schulberg against United Artists, D. W. Griffith, Douglas and Mary Pickford Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin, has been discontinued by Supreme Court Justice Gage at the request of O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll for the defendant, because it has been settled.

Perl S. Parish got an attachment in the Supreme Court against the property of the Sterling Pictures Corp., in a suit for services, in which she claims $2,000. The attachment was served on the property of the defendant, but an order has been filed discharging the attachment because the defendant put up a bond of $2,250.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has upheld a ruling of the lower court that a balance of $136 in the Equitable Trust Co., to the credit of Mme. Valentine Perret, wife of Leonce Perret, must be applied on the payment of a judgment obtained against Mme. Perret by Rita Vinay. The papers show that this sum is the balance of $18,000 paid to Mme. Perret as agent for her husband by Pathé for the film, "Twisted Man," most of which fund she converted into francs and took to France with her. She alleged that the money belongs to her husband although it stands in her name.

The Vision

it wouldn't be surprising if Elmer Pearson was made "Mister President." Which would mean a well earned reward. To a man who puts day and night work in on a schedule. And who works in his shirt sleeves. And gets results.

THEY ALWAYS COME BACK
Anthony Paul Kelly. Regular writer. Sour and sord. Some time ago, said he would never write another scenario for pictures. After which Cecil DeMille; Jayde Williams; David Griffith and a few other master minds. Decided to worry along. But for a time they considered suicide. As the only way out. After Tony's explosion.

And then. After they changed their minds. With the coming of the dawn. As the title writers put it. Tony proved himself a regular he-man. And changed his mind. And so he's gone to Pittsburgh for atmosphere. For the steel making picture, "White Heat." For Famous.

RENTALS
F. H. Smith. An old timer. Down in Thomasville, Georgia. Is thru. Says high rentals, excessive taxation, and lack of patronage caused him to close. This industry might not be able to stop the taxation stuff. But the other reasons could be remedied. And they should be. This isn't the time to lose one real worker. And down South they say Smith is a real man. And on the level. That's reason enough to keep him in business.

GHOSTS
The Scientific American recently offered $5,000 for a photograph of a ghost. To which Jim Bray. Of the Bray Comedies. Sent a letter offering not one photo. But a whole reel of them. For the five grand. It may only be incidental. But Bray is producing the Heeza Liar Comedies. At the moment. DANNY.

Seeing New York

By Clem Denekinger, Director of the Denekinger Circuit of Theaters and Depots

New York is all right. I was there two days ago and I didn't have to go out of the theater. The weather was nice, and the people were friendly. It seemed like a real city, not a collection of buildings. The only problem was that I didn't have a guide to help me navigate the streets.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Oklahoma City — A restraining order was issued by the District Court restraining a J. H. Cooper, manager of the Criterion, from showing unauthorized Governor J. C. Balent inaugural films, and the International, Universal, Selznick and Pathé from showing the films anywhere in the United States.

The restraining order was based on petition of Dan V. Lackey, who had the only official barbeque pictures made under his personal supervision, and at a cost approximately $30,000. Lackey claims that the pictures belong to the barbeque committee, and if any proceeds are realized from exhibition of the pictures, that they will go to the committee.

Final termination of the matter will be brought out in the courts in the near future.

The Supreme Epic of Kentucky Hills

Intensely dramatic, well directed. Strong heart interest. Different from any other American made production.

EXHIBITORS HERALD
So powerfully portrayed as to make the film an epic of the Blue Ridge. It has every angle of appeal.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW
A powerful picture, makes strong demands upon the emotions. Sounds the depths and the heights. Digs under your skin and stays there.

FILM DAILY
A mighty fine picture and a very powerful dramatic entertainment. Should find a place among the year's best pictures. Don't miss "Driven"!

MORNING TELEGRAPH
A really splendid film. It is gratifying to be able to recommend this as one of the finest we have seen.

SCREEN OPINIONS
It is a wonderful picture—a gripping drama, powerful character study!

MOTION PICTURE NEWS
For gripping situations it has not often been surpassed. Its tension is continuous!

A Charles Brabin Production

UNIVERSAL PICTURES CORPORATION
MORNING WORLD—Laurarte Taylor's scene for her picture screen is one of the most vivid and amusing light comedy performances we can remember, but the transfer of Mr. Mann's play from the stage to the cinema has not been a success. The picture...will amaze Miss Taylor's admirers with its remarkably fine picturing of the actress herself, and her adeptness in stepping so naturally before the camera with Michael under her arm...But somewhere in the making of the picture...King Vidor, or some one, did something, or failed to do something, which reduced the pretty stage play to an uneven, just pretty fair picture stuff. It may not have been Mr. Vidor's fault at all. Possibly the difficulty lay in expressing Peg's mission in Ireland by way of printed dialect subtitles.

AMERICAN—As a picture, it is as enjoyable as it was as a play, due to Miss Taylor's vivacious interpretation.  Miss Taylor, with Mary Pickford's cue, has a delightful screen presence and breezes through her role with a great deal of pleasure and animation.

DAILY NEWS— Miss Laurette Taylor crosses into the movies and pins a star to a tall cloud. We hope that she goes on making pictures, because the cinema needs actresses...Vidor's direction on the whole is pleasing; although here and there it smacks of a little screen knowledge. The whole picture itself is highly literate and perhaps Mr. Vidor was getting everything he could out of it.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Laurette Taylor and "Peg O' My Heart", on view at the Capitol this week, are a combination which should prove mightily potent in any motion picture house lucky enough to secure them. In short, no praise is too high for this "Peg of the screen. She is an artist par excellence.

TELEGRAM—The picturing of J. Hartley Manners' best known play has been skilfully made by King Vidor for Metro.
Coue Picks Short Story

Emile Coue has selected a two-reel educational story, written by Elmore Leffingwell, handling publicity for M. Coue in connection with his visit to this country. M. Coue rejected all scenarios that were based on fiction or romance, and in which he was invited to appear as an actor, and which offered large financial benefits to him personally. He approved the educational script which merely illustrated the outstanding points of his theory as set forth in his lectures, and his personal appearance in this film is limited to an explanation of his beliefs.

The two-reel educational film will be made by Motion Picture Arts, Inc., at its New Rochelle studio and will be distributed by Educational Films, Inc. The proceeds of the film will be applied to founding a Coue Institute in New York City, and M. Coue will derive no personal benefits at all, as has been his policy in the matter of the several books published regarding his work and the conducting of public lectures.

"The cinema," stated M. Coue, "is one of the most important agencies in existence for the wide dissemination of an educational message, on an entertainment basis. As a teacher I desire to have its help, but I have no ambitions as an actor and do not wish to be financially benefited. This educational screen story is the only one I have authorized or will authorize for the present, and the many flattering offers are declined with deep and sincere thanks."

Los Angeles—Sidney Franklin will direct the next Constance Talmadge production.

Two Accused of Theft

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Robert Marley, shipping clerk at the Ince studios, and D. K. Reed, until last October connected with Famous Players, have been arrested and placed in the county jail by Deputy Sheriff J. B. Fox.

Marley is charged with stealing the films and Reed with receiving stolen property. According to Deputy Sheriff Fox, hundreds of pictures were stolen and sold to the Oriental Film Co., with offices in the Stock Exchange building. The films were then sent to Japan, Fox declared, and many productions were shown in the Orient before they were here. The money involved may amount to $100,000.

Reed and Marley are specifically charged with the grand larceny of two films—"Love," and "Skin Deep."

Rival Expos Will Be Held in Chicago

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—Two rival Spring film expos have been scheduled to open here, both to begin March 15. One is to be held in the new Lakeside Exposition building across the street from the National Park Hotel, and the other will be staged in the new Palace of Fine Arts, which will be erected across Lake Michigan from the South Side pier.

The Lakeside Exposition will be opened by the American Film Exposition Co., a division of the Motion Picture News, Los Angeles, and will feature 125 prominent film issues. The Palace of Fine Arts will be the primary feature of the rival exposition, at which two large halls will be converted to theaters, and 150 issues will be on display.

The Lakeside Exposition will run from March 15 to April 1, the Palace of Fine Arts from March 15 to April 30.

The Lakeside Exposition has a double feature each night of two films, and the Palace of Fine Arts will feature three films each night.

Coue, the famous writer of the healing "I, Adonis," will be on hand to help both expositions.

Louisville—Louisville film owners have decided to have a film show in their own city. The new Palace of Fine Arts, which is being erected across the street from the South Side pier, will be used for the purposes of the show.

The Louisville Film Owners Association has arranged to have 150 films on display, and the shows will be open to the public.

The film shows will begin on March 15 and continue until April 15.

company have also secured the world's rights for "Loyalities," the issworthy play, which is playing simultaneously in London and New York.

Stoll's will schedule a number of big pictures for release this year. The Prodigal Son, which will be released on Nov. 18, on which close upon $40,000 has been spent, is now completed and will be due for showing at the end of this month. It is reported that the film length of this picture will be in the neighborhood of 20,000 feet, and will be released in two parts.

The toll's are also producing another herlock Holmes series in addition to the eight or nine reeler of "The Sign of Four," one of the stories which made Sir Conan Doyle famous.

Two other pictures that they will produce are "The Wandering Jew," with Michael Curran in the title role, and "Guy Fawkes" for release on Nov. 5th. All these pictures will be produced on a lavish scale with a view to obtaining an international market.

Gaumont's have equally ambitious plans for the forthcoming year and in particular, following Colonel Bromhead's visit to the United States, their production will be made particularly for the American market. At the present moment they are engaged upon a screen adaptation of "Bonnie Prince Charlie" and their full programme for the year will be announced in the course of the next few days.

Welsh Pearson, who has been responsible for many fine pictures, notably "The Better 'Ole," and "Squibs" has a big subject for release in September. This is none other than "Neil Gwynne," featuring the British star, Betty Balfour. Every endeavor is to be made to make this a worthwhile production, and it should be one of the outstanding releases for 1923. In addition there will be a sequel to "Squibs" entitled "Squibs M. P."

Hepworth's have a number of pictures that are starting immediately upon, as also has Samuelson's, who is offering in the next few weeks his latest picture of "A Royal Divorce."

Ideal's look like being very big in 1923. They have "The Harbour Lights," made by Tom Terriss, and featuring Tom Moore, "Mary Queen of Scots," directed by Dennison Clift, and "This Freedom," also directed by Clift. There will also be a series of "Scarlet Pimpernel" pictures, from the well known novels by Baroness Orczy, and a number of others.

British production in 1923 looks to have a bigger year than ever in its history, and as producers in this country are alive to the value of an international market, it would seem that they should find their way to the screens of the world.

Progress Buys "Shopgirl" Progress Pictures, Inc., of San Francisco, has purchased "Only a Shopgirl" for California, Nevada, Arizona and Hawaii.

Newspaper Opinions

"Omar the Tentmaker"—First Nat'l Strand

TRIBUTE—There are plenty of beautiful color and atmosphere which belong to such a play, but which could not be adequately represented on the stage, is reproduced in the film. "Omar the Tentmaker," the title role, in the stage success, is supported by an excellent cast.

SUN—It is an excellent picture of its kind. Composed as it is of spectacle, melodrama, and many scenes of real poetic beauty, "Omar" probably offers more entertainment as a picture than as a play. If you enjoy a spectacular show, here is the very play for you. If such things bore you, however, stay away, because it is a conventional, though good, opera of the stage. The story is played by Noah Beery and "* * *

GLOBE—James Young has done a good job of direction. Richard Walton Tully has provided an effective setting. There is nothing new, however, in design or scenery. "* * *" The acting is satisfactory and even. Mr. Post is too old, of course, to be a comedy youth, but he makes up for it in the latter part of the picture.

EVE WORLD—It is a beautiful theme, beautifully done in the way that Richard Walton Tully knows so well. With good Walton Tully knows so well. With good photography, an interesting story, excellent casts and rather remarkable photography, "Omar the Tentmaker" should impress you.

TELGRAM—The final last act of "Omar the Tentmaker" is marked by the subtle and unexpected entry of Richard Walton Tully into the field of the treatment. The picture proves but the start is not similar to anything else, and the final recognition as a cinema artist of more consummate ability cannot be withheld from him now.

DAILY NEWS—It is beautifully set and photographed, its moments of suspense and drama are thrilling. The exception, is that Mr. Post's performance is not up to his previous level. One exception is well cast. The acting is a feature of the story, and with one exception it is all well cast. The acting is a feature of the story, and with one exception it is all well cast.

"Robin Hood" opens at the Capitol Sunday.

Tully in Charge

Tully National Production Activities

in California

One of the matters under discussion at the recent executive committee meeting of First National was the appointment of Richard Walton

Tully as production chief on the west coast with the final word over the artistic merits of all pictures made there for release through the circuit.

At First National yesterday there was no comment made on the report that Tully would be given this post.

It is understood that the matter is now in the hands of the various lawyers, and that its final disposition is a matter of days only.

Coast reports yesterday indicated that Tully and Guy Bates Post had come to a parting of the ways because of Tully's failure to publicize an announce Post's financial interest in the various pictures in which he appeared. At Tully's office, it was stated that the fact had not been rounded out, and it was not known whether Post would appear in

"Triby." James Young will finish his first picture for First National in time to direct "Triby." Tully leaves for the coast in a few weeks.

San Francisco, secretary of the T. O.

C. C. yesterday instructed his Gainsboro, J. Jame and Sol Raizes not to participate in the deliberations of the joint arbitration board which met in the F. I. L. M. Club rooms yesterday. Moros delivered a letter to the F. I. L. M. Club members in which he said the T. O. C. C. considered it a breach of promise in view of the arrangements under which they have been operating since Dec.

14, 1921. He said that the rider inserted in contracts by some members of the exchange's organization voted the right of arbitration in the F. I. L. M. Club as seen fit by that organization, and that the T. O. C. C.

was left out of the deliberations entirely. Moros added that so far as the T. O. C. C. was concerned, the matter ended there.

Borza Guest of First National

Frank Borza, who, as noted, is scheduled to make a series for First National, was the guest of honor of that organization at a dinner yesterday at the Ritz. Arthur Jacobs, in charge of the Borza productions, was a guest of honor. Robert Lieber, president of First National, welcomed

Borza to the organization, and stressed the importance of good material and the proper selection of a good director. Mr. Lieber, as general manager of First National, said he was as much impressed with Borza the man as Borza the director, and Borza made a few remarks admitting he could not make a speech, and proving it. Harry Reichenbach and C. L. Yearsey also spoke and a letter from gang Deneko, the famous pneumonia, Nevada, exhibitor, to Jacobs, was read to the gathering of editors and publishers of fan and trade press present.

Immediately after the lunch Jacobs left for the Coast. Borza will follow in a few days. The first Borza production will be based on

"Terwilliger," written several years ago by Tristan Tupper. The title will be changed for the screen version.

THIS TRADE MARK MERITS

POLICY

Independent Pictures Corporation is committed to the policy of straight-from-the-shoersen methods... We have eliminated the well known practice of having an "asking price," a "bartering price" and a "taking price."

We are merchandising film productions under the same business policies and principles which prevail in other stable industries.

The triangle which we have adopted for our Trade Mark is symbolical in that its three points represent the Producer, the Distributor and the Independent buyer in the field.

Our pricing policy absolutely guarantees each a square deal and an equitable share in the profits of this business of marketing film in which each must be recognized as equally important factors.

YOUR IMPLICIT CONFIDENCE

PRODUCT

We are offering Independent buyers:
Twelve completed feature productions of which “Flames of Passion” is the first to be released. Read the reviews on this picture. We'll stand pat on their verdict.

A series of big special productions, the first of which is now in the initial stages of production.

Twelve smashing Nick Carter thrillers.

Twelve D. W. Griffith Revivals starring such renowned artists as Lilian Gish, Blanche Sweet, Mae Marsh, Henry Walthall, Jack Pickford and Harry Carey.

Additional product will be announced in the near future.

Bear in mind that Independent Pictures Corporation will strictly adhere to its policy of a fair, definite price; terms of a most satisfactory character; always a square deal.

Carl Laemmle Thinks Admissions

Too High—Cuts In Price of Detroit House

Carl Laemmle, in a statement

ch which he predicts will cause a storm of criticism, suggests that exhibitors

y a cut in admission as a stimulant for business. Here are his reasons:

"The Central, in Detroit, has tiluted its attendance by four through ting its admission price in half.

ormerly the admission price was ty cents. It was cut to ten cents. Immediately four times as any customers entered the theater.

hibitor to do, and it may not be. I don't tend to know the individual problems of is that the exhibitor who is losing money or who is not making what he should now, hop to it and do something radical in order to improve his business.

Big Deal Put Through

On Coast By Lesser

Secures T. & D. Houses and Franchise in First National—Becomes One of Most Important Factors in Exhibiting

Field—Heavily Interested in Production

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

San Francisco—Sol Lesser and Abe Gore, representing West

Coast Theaters, Inc., have bought out all of the Turner and Dahnken holdings in Northern and Southern California as well as the First National franchise in this region and in New York State.

The deal also includes the Educational franchise and is said to involve about $3,000,000.

This will give Lesser and his associates all the territory of the First National, and makes him the owner of probably the largest individual holding in the organization.

This will also give the West Coast

Theaters, Inc., practically control of California, with about 150 days booking, including first runs in all important cities in North and South

California.

Lesser, who has been active in producing, is expected to continue in that field as well. The deal, however, makes him powerful as an exhibitor, comparing with Loew and Famous Players. The difference is that he is local in operations, his territory covering about 1,000 miles along the California coast.

Irving M. Lesser stated yesterday that the acquisition of the T. and

D. holdings by Lesser, Gore Bros.

and Adolph Ramish, involves nine

Northern California theaters: each known as the T. and D., and located in Oakland, Berkeley, Richmond,

Watsonville, Salinas, Stockton, Sacramento and San Jose, and also the Tivoli in San Francisco; the First National franchise in Northern California, which gives West Coast control over California, Nevada, Arizona and the Hawaiian; the Educational franchise in the same territory and the control of the Turner, Dahn-ken and Langley circuit in Southern California, in which West Coast has been interested. This chain includes five theaters in Los Angeles, three in Pasadena, two in Glendale and one each in Huntington Park, Taf and several other towns. There are 14 all told.

On the other hand, members of the T. O. C. made statements about the high-handed actions of the F. L. M. Club and stated they would have nothing to do with the exchanges.

It was said for them that most exhibitors had booked up product for two months ahead and could afford to stop business with exchanges until "they saw the light of reason." The exhibitor opinion also seemed to be that one or two weeks without any new business would bring about a decided change in the attitude of the distributors.

Los Angeles—West Coast Theaters

Advises Price Cut
“Bel Air,” The Detroit theater mentioned is a house of $551 seats. During a ten weeks period a year ago, it was doing about $450 a week at an admission of twenty cents. During a similar period recently it ran its business up to $900 a week with a ten cents admission price. In other words, cutting the price in half, doubled the gross receipts and attracted four times as many patrons.

“I know of another theater which increased its business $200 a week by cutting its admission prices, and of others which built up better business by similar means. I am not at liberty to point out the names of these houses. It is of particular note that the patrons who formerly were regular attendants at these houses before prices went up several years ago, and who dropped ou out with the price boost, have made their reappearance as steady customers with the price reduction.

Fairbanks on Hays

The Associated Press, reprinting an interview from the Los Angeles Times yesterday quoted Douglas Fairbanks as follows:

"Mr. Hays has nothing whatever to do with the art or morals of the motion picture industry. He is simply the hired intermediary of ‘Fair.’ He has done wonderful work in straightening out the censorship tangle, but that, and only that, is his function.

"When Mr. Hays was here last month he told the public he ought to be informed that ‘moral uplift’ was not his role. I admire his ability and admire him as a man, but believe his true status should be made known.

The Hays office refused to com-

Distributors refused to discuss coast deal yesterday for publicidad.

Late yesterday there were reports that a new coast deal has been definitely closed, although sources from which this original, admitted that a transition was under way. Irving L. stated, however, that he had received a number of confirmatory telegrams from the coast and that there could be no doubt about the consummation of the contract.

The DAIL

In the Courts

A suit for $2,415 has been filed in the Supreme Court by the Powers Theatre Co. of New York against Jacob R. Strauss and Charles Presbrey for work, labor and services.

The suit of Herbert Raylison against Oliver Prod., for breach of contract of employment, has been restored to the Supreme Court calendar for trial on Jan. 29. It was stated that the case would not be defended.

A default judgment for $1,415 has been filed in the trial in which Jacob H. Meyers against the Clark-Cornellus Corp. on drafts drawn on the Cosmopolitan Film Co., was endorsed to the plaintiff but not paid.

A jury before Supreme Court Justice Plattek gave a verdict for Samuel M. F. E. Ward against Patrick A. Powers, which with interest made a judgment for $5,931. Ward claimed that he was the owner of 312 shares of stock of the Powers Film Products, Inc., worth $6,000, which Powers refused to deliver to him and sued for that sum.

Justice E. J. Gavegan, of the N. Y. Supreme Court, has signed an order approving a bond of $250 as security for cost in a proceeding brought by John Rounan against C. L. Chester, the C. L. Chester Prod., and the Chester Picture Corp.

Rounan is seeking a temporary injunction to restrain the Chester Picture Corp., from producing, leasing or distributing any prints, negative or pictures of the chimpanzee known as "Snooky," either under the title of "The Jungle Romeo," or the "Blue Beard of the Jungle," or in any picture form.

Los Angeles—Justice Frank S. Forbes has assessed Artists’ Booking Exchange, through John Lancaster, its general manager, costs of $937.50, the amount of a commission asserted to be due them for obtaining a position for Hackathorne in “Human Hearts” in 1921.

According to the complaint Hackathorne entered into a verbal agreement with it to pay a commission of 5% of his salary on any position obtained by him through the agency. It developed that Hackathorne previously had signed an agreement with Robertson and Webb, for management of his affairs. When notified by Lancaster that a part had been obtained for him at Universal, the former was referred to Clifford Robertson as his agent. Subsequently Robertson succeeded in obtaining the part for his client.

Lancaster claimed that he had never received notice from Hackathorne to the effect that he had turned over his affairs to Robertson and Webb.

Los Angeles—Universal will release a series of “Andy Gump” two reelers to be produced by Samuel Van Ronkel. It is understood the contract continues for five years and was closed last November.

P. B. O. Signs Witwer

P. A. Powers has signed H. C. Witwer to write a new series of stories for production and has also contracted with the author for the next five years, with the exception of those stories already contracted for.

Four New Exchanges

Second National has arranged with four new exchanges for the distribution of its product. These are Strand Film Service, Washington; Standard Film Exchange, Pittsburgh; Greenland-Griffith Film Exchange, Cleveland; and Hartford Pictures, Inc., Chicago. Dale Hanshaw is now on the road for the company.

Want Jersey Closed Sundays

The Society for Prevention of Crime and the American Legion, to which this column intends to launch a statewide campaign to enforce the Sunday closing law in Jersey. It will be started with several meetings throughout the state this Sunday and will be followed up along other lines as soon as the organization can obtain more funds.

Bache Canadian District Manager

Floyd M. Brockell has appointed Louis Bache, Washington branch manager, as district manager for First National in Canada. Vincent McBee has resigned.

Walter E. Lusk, as noted, is Washington manager and G. W. Erdmann made manager in Cleveland. C. E. Nesbitt is Chicago manager permanently.

May Control Future Output

Although no definite understanding has been reached by First National and Richard Walton Tully, regarding the latter’s desire to control the organization on production matters, it is true that a plan is under discussion whereby Tully will supervise as film made in the future under contracts yet to be executed. If the arrangement is made, Tully will not interfere in any way with producers making pictures for the circuit.

KNOW EVERY DAY ALL THE NEWS OF THE PICTURE BUSINESS
Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Bonns Busy Again

Chicago — Another Goldwyn picture has come in for some nationwide exploitation at the hands of Eddie Bonns, who was aided by Walter D. Nealand, Goldwynner in Chicago.

Three men were selected as president, vice president and secretary-treasurer, and papers of incorporation of The Anti-Time League filed with the secretary of state for Illinois. The purpose of the League was declared to be the doing away with the various forms of begging prevalent in Chicago—commercial, household and sidewalk begging—and the tipping nuisance. Hat-check girls and boys are under the taboo.

The Examiner-Herald published a two-column story on the incorporation of the League and it was sent out over news wires. The Herald-Examiner ran an interview with Sam Shurman, president of the League, then head of the Goldwyn sales force in Chicago, since promoted to be resident manager of the Milwaukee exchange.

A Men's Fashion Show

Memphis — Taking a tip from previous successes in other cities, H. B. Clarke, of the Strand, decided on a men's fashion show in connection with the engagement of "A Tailor Made Man." His first step was to tie up with Phil A. Halls, the most exclusive men's furnishing store in Memphis. The store supplied all the clothing for the fashion show, put in a cooperative display a week in advance and mentioned the fashion show and picture in all their newspaper ads. For models Clarke got four young men who were prominent church and concert singers and formed a quartette.

This quartette gave two performances daily, at 4:00 and at 8:45. Dressed in the latest fashions, they came on the stage one at a time, singing the verse of some popular number. All would join in for the chorus. When they were all assembled they gave several popular selections.

The lobby display was a special set representing the show window of a tailor shop. The foreground was a cut-out of Charles Ray in a natty business suit. On one side, Ray was in his shirt sleeves at a press table, and on the other side, Ray in evening clothes. A cut-out of the girl was looking up at the cut-out of Ray, in front of the set and on each side stood cheap looking tailor's dummies out of compo board and painted. One had a sign reading $2.98 and the other $5.60. A large banner was across the front of the lobby.

Old Vehicles on Parade

San Francisco — An "old vehicle contest," in which prizes were awarded to persons submitting the quaintest antique carriages, constituted an exploitation tieup for "Quincy Adams Sawyer" when it played at Loew's Warfield. Stories in newspaper and columns of the contestants and their vehicles drew a great deal of interest to the stunt, and a parade of the eighteen vehicles through the city put a fine finish to it.

Most of the contestants were girls, and some of the coaches that they had discovered two or three years ago. The oldest vehicles were photographed with the girls submitting them, and the Bulletin published a new photograph every day. For the best vehicle, a prize of $25 was awarded, with a second prize of $15, and a third of $10. Other rewards consisted of season tickets to the Warfield, with a number of tickets entitling the holder to see "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

An "Anti-Flirt" Campaign

All kinds of space was accorded a special "anti-flirt campaign" by Marc Lachmann of Universal on behalf of "The Flirt." A meeting was held in the Biltmore. Five persons using the names of the characters from Booth Tarkington's story, called a meeting to order with James Madison presiding, while representatives and reviewers from all New York newspapers were present. Photographers snapped flashlights. Two more meetings were held and the same representatives were present with other follow-up stories executed. It was not long before Boston, Philadelphia and other cities started their own crusade with local enthusiasts for the movement interested. Buffalo came out with a three column headline proclaiming the debut of the event with 200 members enlisted right off the jump.

In an N. E. A. feature, which ran in 680 newspapers from coast to coast, both sides of the flirty situation was brought out with James Madison's version and that of an average one by a New York business girl. K. C. B., Lucy Lowell and others contributed syndicate details for editorial space in their many newspapers. Special tack cards were posted all over the city bearing the organization's insignia, a lizard pierced by a hat-pin illustrated by a drawing of the various modes of flirtations. Prior to the opening of "The Flirt" at the Rialto, the Crusade was tied up with the showing by daily newspapers ads.

Lachmann's stunt was put over partly after gruelling work on his part drilling his "crusaders" in how they should act and conduct their meetings. A group of highly intelligent actors and actresses were engaged for the stunt.

Artistic and Spectacular Version of Hall Caine Novel That Merits High Praise

Maurice Tourneur Prod.
"THE CHRISTIAN"
Goldwyn

DIRECTOR ..................... Maurice Tourneur
AUTHOR ...................... Sir Hall Caine
SCENARIO BY .............. Paul Bern
CAMERAMAN ................. Charles Van Enger

AS A WHOLE . . . Magnificent production that has many angles of appeal; a highly artistic and worth while picture STORY . . . A splendid rendition of the famed novel, beautifully told and with much sincerity in its theme DIRECTION . . . Excellent, on the whole; a few slightly irritating bits that can be remedied, however; done on a big scale, lavish and mighty artistic

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. The very best LIGHTINGS .................. Many gorgeous effects PLAYERS . . . Phyllis Haver the real surprise of the company in a short but impressive performance; Mae Busch very real and pleasing as the heroine and Richard Dix does fine work at first but runs into overacting toward the close

EXTERIORS . . . Unusually fine shots of London INTERIORS . . . Appropriate and good to look at

DETAIL . . . Generally very well taken care of

CHARACTER OF STORY . . . Minister of Church of England breaks cloister vows to return to woman he loves who he believes is destined to lose her soul

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION . . . About 8,500 feet

The very fine effort of Maurice Tourneur who produced "The Christian," for Goldwyn, results in a picture that is truly a work while achievement in every sense of the word. The story has been gorgeously mounted but at the same time retains the dignity and solemnity that the atmosphere requires. To the public at large "The Christian" will undoubtedly prove one of the outstanding attractions of the year. It deserves that place because Sir Hall Caine's novel has been given a careful and complete presentation.

On the other hand there are points during the run of the picture that stand out as being wrong when they are compared with other instances of fine judgment and consideration shown throughout the rest of the offering. There are, for instance, the mighty unusual and inspiring shots of London at night—many particularly worth while and beautiful views and right on top of this fine reality you are asked to accept some very obvious studio sets as representing a London back street. The shock is too great and the difference creates the wrong impression. These shots referred to, however, can readily be eliminated without the least interference with the continuity. With the exception of these incidentals, production values are of the highest type. There are numerous gorgeous locations, scene upon scene in which the lighting effects alone are a marvel of photography and artistry.

Then comes Tourneur's attention to the story itself. He has developed it logically and evenly. Although at times it is just a trifle too arbitrary, the sequences dovetail nicely and the interest is well sustained at all times. He builds toward the climax surely and with an accumulative interest that ends with the riot of the mob incited by the priest's enemy and is followed by the tranquil reunion of the lovers. The ending, however, is weak and it is a poor review, in comparison with the other fine points in the production. Just one shot of the priest recovered, and happy with his bride, would be sufficient. The draggy, ineffective sequence that follows the riot are out of place and not at all the right finale. To have the hero live is what the public usually demands, and that can be arranged even though the really logical conclusion would be his death in the arms of the girl he fought to save. Richard Dix, in the famed role of the priest, gives a performance that varies. At first he promises to really hit the high spots, with a portrayal that is conservative and sincere but later on Dix runs into overacting and forgets all about repressing and sincerity. In the course of a day, in one sequence, he shows a heard that would have taken a week at least to grow.

Mae Busch is very real and appealing as the girl. Her work is convincing and always pleasing but the outstanding bit, and a surprise for those who recognize the Sennett bathing girl, is the playing of Phyllis Haver. She does a genuinely fine piece of dramatic portrayal in the role of the unwed mother who kisses her baby goodbye and gives it into the care of the orphanage before she dies. Miss Haver registers a real "choke in the throat" in this scene. The others in the cast are quite adequate, including Cyril Chadwick, Mahlon Hamilton, Joseph Dowling, Claude Gillingwater and Gareth Hughes.

Needs Some Change But Should Prove a Fine Attraction

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

With some changes that are obviously necessary without suggestion, "The Christian" should prove a worthy addition to the list of the "best pictures." For those who crave artistic production and unusual atmosphere and backgrounds, the offering can be highly recommended, and where they want a story with a moral—they couldn't ask for anything more indicative of it than Hall Caine's "The Christian." But don't give them the impression that it is a preachment. Tourneur has steered well clear of that.

Of course the novel is thoroughly well known. You shouldn't have to acquaint them with the story any further than the mention of the title, but where they need to be reminded, the Goldwyn posters indicate clearly the nature of the theme. For the purpose of clarifying it for those who may not know that the "priest" in the play is of the Church of England, it would be well to make this fact known definitely at the first introduction of hero in his clerical attire. Otherwise it is liable to cause some dissension where they know that the Roman priest is bound to celibacy.

Gerald Dix, who Tourneur has the most to do with in his portrayal. He is the one who deserves for his work on the picture and let them know it is Goldwyn's most pretentious release of the season. Promise them really delightful London locations and splendid pictorial values. The picture has that. Of the players, Richard Dix, Mae Busch and Phyllis Haver. There are others in the cast known to your folks but these are the most prominent. When the picture comes to you, in a corrected form, it should be well worth your while making a big fuss about the showing.
More Small Town Stuff With Usual “Main St.” Propaganda

“DOLLAR DEVILS”

Victor Schertzinger Prod.—Hodkinson

DIRECTOR ...................... Victor Schertzinger
AUTHOR ....................... Victor Schertzinger
SCENARIO BY .................. Louis Stevens
CAMERAMAN ................... John S. Stumar

AS A WHOLE...... An average attraction; doesn’t boast of anything new in story but there is good incident and interesting bits

STORY...... Given a satisfying production and good small town atmosphere usually appeals

DIRECTION...... Never for a moment succeeds in keeping the ending from you; anti-climax loses interest toward close

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. All right

LIGHTINGS ..................... Good

PLAYERS—Cullen Landis a first rate hero and Joseph Dowling gives a good performance; others May Wallace, Eva Novak, Hallam Cooley and Lydia Knott

EXTERIORS ..................... Right

INTERIORS ..................... Suitable

DETAIL ........................ Suffices

CHARACTER OF STORY ........ Small town hero “puts it all over” city slicker who tries to fleece the town folk

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5,600 feet

Victor Schertzinger didn’t have to think very hard to concoct this plot of the ever popular oil stock skin game nor did he change the atmosphere at all. It is the usual small town location with the city slicker selling the people the idea that their land holds a wealth of oil and the people’s salvation is once more the town boob. “Dollar Devils” is really very old stuff and it runs true to form all the way through with Schertzinger never making any strenuous effort to keep you from guessing what the conclusion will be.

Of course you expect hero to really strike oil—and he does. Probably the author-director does strike a new note in the anti-climax he tacks on; the wells go dry and the town once more lapses into peaceful tranquility, just a little more prosperous from the profits of the wells while they lasted.

Although there is no originality in the plot itself, the story has been rather well handled and there is plenty of interesting detail and individually good bits that help to relieve the terrors. The town and the people offer particularly effective detail and the director brings out the peace and easy living in splendid contrast with the excitement and confusion when the city fellow starts selling his stock. Joseph Dowling, as the most popular person on Main Street, offers a fine character bit that is particularly interesting and one of the picture’s best features.

Of course there is the usual romance with hero’s sweetheart “falling” for the newcomer and the subsequent marriage of hero to the gorl’s more wholesome sister. But even this isn’t a surprise. They don’t emphasize the domesticity of the stay-at-home girl for nothing. You know very well that she will figure in the happy ending. The picture is well made, the locations are fine and the photography is always good.

The cast does very well with Cullen Landis a convincing and sincere hero and Eva Novak as the girl he marries. Ney Farrell, the college bred sister, neither screens nor acts well. Hallam Cooley is the typical “slicker.”

Story: Bruce Merlin insists that there is oil in Hemling so he starts selling stock to the inhabitants. Jim Biggers, in love with Helen Andrews who recently returned from college with high toned notions, tries to convince Helen’s father that Merlin is a fraud. Helen attributes the accusation to jealousy. Later Jim proves he is right and Bruce leaves town, Helen going with him. How Jim strikes oil, the wells go dry and Jim marries Helen’s sister completes it.

All Right If They Don’t Object to a Familiar and Transparent Plot

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If they won’t object to a plot that they can see through from the very start, and the fact that the situations are all very commonplace, you have a chance with this one. The good incident and first rate atmosphere does make up, in a measure, for the trite things and where you know this line of small town stuff appeals to them, it should be an equally safe bet.

The title might be effectively exploited and it suggests plenty of ideas for stunt advertising. Let them know it is a Victor Schertzinger production and you can use the names of the players such as Joseph Dowling, Eva Novak and Cullen Landis. Catchlines will do for an idea of the story, such as “Are you in search of the mighty dollar? The people in Hemling didn’t care about money but see how they got it any way—and then lost it. It happens in ‘Dollar Devils.’ Victor Schertzinger’s latest production.”

EXTERIORS .......... Pretty country club views
INTERIORS ......................... Suitable
DETAIL .............................. A lot of sub-titles CHARACTER OF STORY .......... Daughter with father of moderate circumstances makes a splurge with inherited money only to learn that it was a fraud

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 5,995 feet

Katherine MacDonald is well past the stage where she can play the pretty ingenuous and convince her audience. Nor does she succeed in putting the role of Priscilla Hobbs over in her latest release "Money, Money, Money," a story of a small town girl who was bored by the modern circumstances of her old fashioned parents and whose desire for the luxuries of life almost ruined her father financially. The star just doesn't fit in with these surroundings and it is almost ridiculous to try and place her in a vehicle which is far from suited to either her personality or ability.

Nor has Tom Forman used his best judgment in the picture's direction. He allows too many sentimental bits between the father and daughter. It looks a trifle silly to see a man fondling and calling his daughter "baby" and treating her like one when she's a mature woman. It doesn't "belong" and they are likely to get a laugh out of it that isn't intended. Katherine MacDonald makes an attractive society belle or the wife of screen brokers, lawyers and doctors, but she's far from her right place as the young country girl.

There are some obviously poor bits in the picture that may even attract the attention of the casual observer. For instance, when the Hobbs' take advantage of their newly acquired fortune and move into a house in the residential district, they later show old Hobbs in the sitting room of the old home. But they don't explain whether or not Hobbs is maintaining two es-establishments—both the old and the new. In the last reel, after Priscilla and the man who is to save her father's business, have ridden all night through a raging storm in an open car, they appear in the same clothes bone dry and none the worse for the journey.
There are other bits of detail that Forman has slipped up on.

The moral of the story is that money causes unhappiness to those who have it and also to those who do not possess it. But whether or not they'll believe it from this is a grave question. Charles Clary over-works his eyebrows for expression and Jack Daugherty is not the hero he promises to be. The cast is adequate.

Story: Priscilla Hobbs' immediately begins to spend her newly inherited fortune only to learn later that it was a scheme of her father's enemy, Carter, to ruin them. How Priscilla learns that money is not everything and saves her father by her quick action, and later marries the son of a rich man, completes the story.

All Right If They Are Not Particular Or Like Star Real Well

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This one is all wrong from a viewpoint of the star.
She is miscast and her director has done nothing to counteract the inappropriateness of the story. In fact he has made it worse by stressing things that should have been passed over lightly and emphasizing incidents that should have been omitted. However, if they like Katherine MacDonald well enough to accept her regardless of what she has to do, you can show it to them.

The star tries very hard to convince and her work itself is thoroughly satisfying. The country club sequences will undoubtedly appeal and possibly you can interest them with the title used in connection with catchlines that explain those who have money are unhappy and those who haven't it are unhappy. Ask them to figure it out and then come in to see the picture.
Richard Harding Davis' Story a Good Vehicle for Rawlinson

EXTERIORS .................. All right
INTERIORS .................. Appropriate
DETAIL ..................... All right
CHARACTER OF STORY.... Candidate for mayor loses support of his backer at the last minute on evidence of fellow whose girl he stole
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... 4,417 feet

Richard Harding Davis' story offers Herbert Rawlinson one of the best vehicles he has had lately and Rawlinson does better work and manages to forget most of his tricks of overacting—all of which contributes to a satisfying entertainment in his most recent release, "The Scarlet Car." Davis' material makes a first rate screen vehicle aside from its suitability to Rawlinson. It contains a satisfying variety of entertaining elements that have been nicely worked together and well blended together.

While some of the situations are not strictly new, especially the idea of the election candidate who runs for mayor on one ticket and accepts graft from the opposing party to put through certain franchises for them as soon as he is elected. This angle isn't new but it has been worked in with plenty of original byplot that makes it wholly interesting and there is also some first rate comedy business that heads off any attempt to make it appear too serious or dramatic. The material has been used to very good advantage by Stuart Paton and there is one bit that he saves from becoming too far-fetched by supplying a comic touch.

One of the most interesting of the characters is that of Beans Bradley, played by Tom O'Brien. Beans is a typical Bowery boy who isn't going to see his "goil" copped by a rich "guy." O'Brien supplies most of the laughs but his character doesn't run quite true to form when he allows Rawlinson to give him a beating.

The piece also contains some first rate action which, although not terribly exciting, supplies the essential variation. The picture, on the whole, offers a good lively entertainment that will likely be accorded a favorable reception by the majority of audiences.

STORY: Bill Winthrop's father is supporting Ernest Peabody, candidate for mayor. Bill doesn't like Peabody, one reason being that Peabody is engaged to the girl Bill loves. Bill encounters Beans Bradley, who promises that he has enough "on" Peabody to expose him and spoil his chances of election. After some complications Beans tells Bill that Peabody has betrayed his (Beans') girl and that he has also accepted graft from the opposite party. Bill follows Peabody out into the country and Peabody makes a hasty retreat while Bill wins the girl and Beans gets his sweetheart back.

Will Suit Those Who Like a Good Lively Story

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Herbert Rawlinson's following will have a good one coming to them in "The Scarlet Car." It's more the sort of thing that suits Rawlinson and he does better work here than he has in his last two pictures. Of course let them know that it is a Richard Harding Davis story and in case they may remember a picture that Universal made several years ago under the same name, say that this is an entirely new picture.

You can promise a good variety of entertaining elements and catchlines will do to give them an idea of what it is all about if you think they'll want to know. Say: "He almost became mayor but then something happened. See what it was. Herbert Rawlinson upset the candidate's plans. His latest picture at the blank theater offers a good entertainment. See 'The Scarlet Car!'"
"DOLLAR DEVILS" is a production that is better than 80% of the pictures released today. It is one of those clean, wholesome, intensely interesting and well made pictures that break box-office records, build patronage and go such a long way in increasing theatre prestige.

Every first run theatre in the country needs such a feature as "DOLLAR DEVILS". Ask for a screening at once.
Action and Thrills After the Fashion of a Serial

CAMERAMEN ...................... Wm. Thornley and Robert DeGrasse

AS A WHOLE......Average western with plenty of helter skelter action; will please where they are not critical

STORY......A commonplace plot built up with fairly good by-plot and incident; a confusing climax

DIRECTION......Ordinary; provides good atmosphere but hasn't given story coherent or logical development

PHOTOGRAPHY .................... All right
LIGHTINGS ........................ All right
STAR......A slightly different western role for him but gives him plenty to do

SUPPORT........Marguerite Clayton adequate as lead; others Fred Stanton, Jack Curtis, Joseph Harris and Charles Le Moyne

EXTERIORS ........................ Good
INTERIORS ........................ Not many DETAIL ......................... Cutting frequently bad

CHARACTER OF STORY......Man in search of a man who framed him for murder meets former sweetheart and saves her from man who turns out to be the one he is looking for

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION......About 6,000 feet

Very likely Harry Carey's latest picture will prove sure-fire entertainment for some audiences because it contains a typical old-fashioned western melodrama plot with all the intrigue, fighting and thrills of the 10-20-30 order—the kind that still does big business in certain communities. For them "Canyon of the Fools" will supply the right entertainment. But if you haven't that class of patronage the picture will require further consideration.

In the first place Richard Matthews Hallett hasn't included any situations in his story that haven't already been used dozens of time, nor is the atmosphere at all new. Then Val Paul's direction doesn't save it. He doesn't tell the story in coherent fashion and toward the close the action is of such a helter skelter variety that it is almost impossible to tell who is ahead—whether hero and his band is overcoming villain and his crowd or vice versa. Bad cutting in this sequence is also responsible for the confusion in the mind of the spectator. Just why they thought it necessary to have a storm in the climax is hard to tell. It doesn't make things any more exciting and the rain is far from realistic. It just looks as though they were using a sprinkling pot in front of the camera. Of course it is possible for it to be raining with the sun shining, but it is hardly likely that, with such a downpour, the horses hoofs would raise such a cloud of smoke.

The plot is of the serial order with hero knocked out in every reel and coming back stronger than ever in the next. Toward the close, when they attempt to get things going faster for the climax, the action gets beyond you and it is mostly a matter of waiting for the last shot to see who wins, in case there is any doubt in your mind. The flood offers a fair thrill.

Harry Carey hasn't the sentimental cowboy hero role in this but he is kept hard at it tracking down the man who framed him for a murder and saving the life of the girl he loves. Marguerite Clayton does well as the girl. The others are well suited.

Story: Bob arrives in "Canyon of the Fools" on the trail of a man who framed him. He meets his former sweetheart, May, who is also at the place to marry Harper, a prospector. Harper does not come to meet her. Bob is made deputy sheriff and sent out to the mining district to bring in a thief. Harper turns out to be both the thief and Bob's man. Bob marries May.

All Right If They Are Not Too Critical Or If They Like Carey

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Where they want good fast action and won't mind if they can't always follow it, "Canyon of the Fools" is your picture. And this isn't to say that it hasn't a chance because there is a crowd that will be thoroughly well satisfied with just such action as this picture contains. They like the serial type of thrills and action and that is what this one, based on a Saturday Evening Post story, resembles mostly. It is a series of captures and escapes with hero, of course, coming out victor in the end.

Harry Carey has a loyal following and they'll undoubtedly be satisfied with his latest attraction. You might say that it is a little different from his more recent releases and catchlines will give a further idea. Say: "In search of the man who framed him for murder, Carey finds his man in 'Canyon of the Fools' and also wins back the girl he loves." If they are acquainted with Marguerite Clayton use her name also.

Berger picture does not succeed in getting the spectator’s undivided attention at the start.
The picture bears every evidence of having been severely cut to fit the American program, and while the cutting has been carefully done and there are no very noticeable interruptions in the continuity, still the little breaks are obvious all through, some more so than others. There are one or two bad bits of cutting where they have clipped the film right in the middle of the scene. For instance where Richelieu is seated at a desk on which a kitten is walking around, the kitten suddenly disappears. However, this is not a frequent occurrence and considering the vast amount of eliminations, the work has been carefully done.

There are numerous sub-titles, long and explanatory which make up for much of the detail omitted, and through this means the story maintains a satisfactory coherence, even though it jumps over some sequences more rapidly than it should to be satisfactorily con-

“Milady” contains some first rate dramatic touches, and its tragic ending is probably the most distinctive feature of it. There are also some effective action sequences, such as the escape of Milady de Winter from the tower in which she is imprisoned. Berger has provided an artistic production that shows exceeding care in connection with its settings, costuming and general atmosphere. The players are handled to good advantage at all times, and while there are no particularly outstanding performances, the cast is well balanced and quite capable. These French players have not the assurance of our own artists, but one thing they do possess is grace and they wear costumes very well.

Will do Nicely Where They Like Historical Costume Plays

Box Offices Analysis for the Exhibitor

It is up to the individual exhibitor to decide whether or not his particular clientele will favor “Milady.” If you cater to a better class audience and one that will be interested in a well made production that shows a serious effort to be something worth while, you may fell quite sure of interesting them with “Milady.”
Where they favor historical spectacles it should be simple to get them in. There is sufficient to talk about.
Say it is a sequence of Dumas’ “The Three Musketesers” and promise a pleasing atmosphere.

Where they liked “The Three Musketeers,” it should be easy to judge this one. You can decide for yourself whether or not you care to announce the origin of the production. The names alone will not mean very much to your crowd, so the title will have to be used with catchlines or other explanation. None of the players are known, but you might make the most of the author’s name.
Evening Mail says: "Here is a really fine picture. In fact, so good that if France sends over any more of the same excellence the Germans will lose their prestige in production. Audiences who want to know what became of D'Artagnan and his gallant companions who swore 'all for one and one for all' will revel in this picture."

New York American says: "Those interested in 'what happened after that,' when the final curtain fell on 'The Three Musketeers,' can have their curiosity satisfied in 'Milady' at the Cameo. It is the sequel to Dumas' greatest romance. An absorbed version of the adventure of Milady de Winter and her vicious partnership with Cardinal Richelieu. A diverting, attractive, artistic picture. Spectators will revel in the chivalric acts of D'Artagnan and his celebrated trio."

New York Globe says: "No difference in technical standards can take away from 'Milady' the spirit of romance and adventure put into it by virtue of uncommonly fine acting. This picture doesn't have to trade under the publicity of 'The Three Musketeers.' 'Milady' will win the approval of audiences on its own merits."

Evening Telegram says: "'Milady' is a complete story, splendidly told; a great romantic thriller and in no way dependent upon a previous knowledge of 'The Three Musketeers.' It is filled with thrills and spectacular moments throughout."

New York Evening Post says: "'Milady' is filled with many stirring scenes and it tells its story in an absorbing way."
Here is a smashing eight-reel romantic melodrama that we brought into New York absolutely unannounced, opening it with a minimum of advertising at the Cameo Theatre and receiving the best notices given to any picture on Broadway in six months. The reviews average bigger and better than those accorded any super-special in the fall and winter seasons.

New York Times says: "A motion picture of remarkable quality yesterday entered what one who enjoyed it keenly must hope will be a fully successful week at the Cameo. It is called 'Milady' and is a successor if not exactly a sequel to 'The Three Musketeers.' The film is one of the most absorbing, and, in its separate scenes, one of the most finished pieces of dramatic cinematography that has brightened Broadway for a long time. It is closer to Dumas and to the France he wrote of than 'The Three Musketeers.' This is not said in disparagement of 'The Three Musketeers.' It was a magnificent work of its kind. But 'Milady' is something different and differently eloquent. It is a fine and effective work. Its scenes are dramatically compelling, especially the scenes of the execution of the evil Milady. This sequence is one of the most stirring things ever put upon the motion picture screen."

New York Sun says: "This picture can stir your pulses with its authentic settings and chivalrous conduct, when it tells you what becomes of the dauntless musketeers after they had wiped up most of France."

New York Tribune says: "'Milady' is one of the pictures which should not be missed. Put it on your list. Well acted, exceptionally so, with a great D'Artagnan and a still greater Milady, the woman of the fleur-de-lys."

Evening World says: "If you like the romance of the days when D'Artagnan was in style, you will revel in this picture 'Milady,' from one of Dumas' best stories."

New York Telegraph says: "Romance is not dead. It lives and breathes again in 'Milady.' The producers have adhered to actual historical facts and have not distorted the story in an effort to achieve a happy ending."

New York World says: "On the powdered, white shoulder of the leading woman in 'Milady' there is a fleur-de-lys. The brand of the wanton. What more could be asked? It is a story of conspiracy passion and love."

DETAIL ......................... Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Arabian exercises will power to influence crippled girl to walk and reverses power when she repulses him

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 4,337 feet

The picture is quite short and then Director Fleming has managed to sustain the interest surprisingly well in view of a scarcity of incident and by-plot. The opening scenes appeal largely to the eye and you are promised an interesting romance which is immediately interrupted by a pretty fair thrill; the heroine is permanently injured when thrown from a horse which she has wagered she will tame. The subsequent procedure is seldom convincing and the piece threatens to "flop" for a bit, but evidently the film editor has saved it by immediately getting into the oriental episode where the climax is reached.

Dorothy Dalton does good work as the girl in love with an English officer stationed in Cairo, but the real acting of the film is contributed by Jose Ruben as the suave Arabian doctor, whose will causes people to do as he wishes them to do. This angle bears slightly on the current Coue theory of auto-suggestion—that certain ills may be cured by one's own will. The direct climax, however, has served previously in pictures and crippled heroes and heroines have found the use of their limbs in a moment when they least expected it. In this instance the girl jumps from her wheel chair to save her lover from death at the hands of a native.

The picture contains a good amount of pictorial appeal. The settings are attractive and the acting, on the whole, well done. The photography throughout is also excellent. Certainly "Dark Secrets" is not long enough to bore anyone even if it doesn't happen to appeal to them particularly.

Story: Ruth Rutherford releases Lord Wallington from their engagement when she is crippled. Later she goes to Wallington in Cairo after hearing he is drinking himself to death. Dr. Ali, an enemy of Wallington's, operates upon Ruth and is successful. He demands payment—the usual kind. She refuses and Ali is killed by Wallington's servant.

May Please Some and Has Angles That Can Be Exploited

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you don't think they will be disappointed you might easily arouse their curiosity to see this one by mentioning the fact that it touches on the Coue theory of autosuggestion. The topic is open to so much discussion at this time that it should be simple to get them interested through this channel, or if you prefer to stick to names, of course the star's will be given the most prominence. Her admirers may not be satisfied with what she is given to do but with them "Dark Secrets" will undoubtedly get over.

Where they like thrill you might mention the spill when the heroine is thrown from her horse and injured; where she is attacked by the doctor who has cured her and her final miraculous recovery when she rushes to the rescue of her lover. Paramount's press sheet has ample suggestions for further exploitation.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Child left in care of pawnshop keeper learns her father came between her benefactor and his wife

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 4,871 feet

Not long ago Shirley Mason's sister, Viola Daná, appeared in a picture that was very much like this one. Metro released it under the name of "The Five Dollar Baby" and although it differed somewhat in plot it had the same basic theme as "Pawn Ticket 210." There is much in this picture that will appeal to the average audience and the element of human interest which it contains is sufficiently strong to make it particularly popular with women patrons.

Shirley is given into the keeping of a pawnbroker whose wife has just deserted him. He lavishes his love on the child and the prologue ends with her grown up. This consumes the first reel of the picture and establishes a definite premise and gets the attention clearly centered upon Shirley and her benefactor, Uncle Harris, as she calls him. Then Dunlap proceeds to develop the story in a smooth, consistent fashion that accumulates interest as it goes along. The director has succeeded in injecting force into the dramatic moments and with the exception of the way he has handled the ending, his efforts have been worth while. The conclusion does drag slightly, however, and it takes too long to reach the inevitable happy finale. Since you know it is bound to come, it doesn't prove quite as effective as it might if they had used less footage to get to it.

The climax has been nicely reached and it isn't likely that many in the audience will think out a solution to the plot as it really happens. In this respect Dunlap has certainly kept things from becoming obvious before the right time and the surprise that it offers is the real thing.

Shirley Mason has a role particularly well suited to her personality and it allows her the sort of emotional playing that she seems to like. Robert Agnew in the lead does good work and the supporting cast includes Fred Warren, as the pawnshop keeper, also Irene Hunt, Jacob Abrams and Dorothy Manners.

Story: A woman places her child in the custody of Harris Levi, pawnbroker, who gives her pawn ticket 210 as a receipt. Fifteen years later the woman presents the receipt and asks for her daughter. Levi takes her to the home of his rich friend, Mr. Strong, where the girl is living. Levi then learns that Strong is the woman's husband and that the wife who deserted Levi years before was the cause of their separation. Levi denounces his friend but there is a reconciliation brought about through the girl's effort.

Get Your Women Patrons Interested in This. They'll Like It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This picture can be recommended for most any audience. It is a first rate dramatic offering that has a pleasing star, a first rate romantic twist, strong dramatic situations and a surprise climax that should make it a thoroughly satisfying entertainment. You can arouse their interest by telling them of the woman who pawned her baby, or if you prefer to put it another way you might ask: "What did 'Pawn Ticket 210' represent? You'll be surprised if you come to the blank theater and find out."

Shirley Mason's admirers can be appealed to particularly and you can promise them they'll like her work in this. Your women patrons will like the picture especially well, so you might direct most of your publicity to them. Play up the title with the star's name also.

CHARACTER OF STORY .... Husband, jealous of wife's career, leaves her but later is reunited
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 6,228 feet

All the incident, coincidence and inconsistencies of meller are prominent in this latest Thomas H. Ince production, a typical Ince entertainment of its kind. "What a Wife Learned" doesn't give out any startling information or disclosures such as the title might suggest. In fact at the end it isn't apparent that the wife knows any more than she did in the opening reel when she was a school teacher. If she is any wiser, she doesn't show it. A much better title would have been "What a Husband Couldn't Learn," for certainly the husband of pretty Sheila Dorne, novelist and playwright, is certainly a stupid young man and he is made quite inconsistent at several times throughout the progress of the story. However, he and his pretty young writer-wife worry along through six reels of misunderstandings until Director Wray decides to reunite them to "live happy ever after."

Beyond the continual eruptions in the domestic life of the cattle rancher and his pretty wife, there is little of interest in the picture. It is an arbitrary plot that doesn't get far as entertainment, nor does Wray's direction sustain the interest satisfactorily, although it would have been difficult to do very much better with such poor situations. The spectator gets more or less peeved at being taken into the confidence of the couple's marital difficulties to such an extent that it lasts for the six reels. Each succeeding episode is a repetition of the last—Jim and Sheila continuing their incompatibility.

Eventually the plot promises to develop into the old eternal triangle and it probably would have only the dam breaks and the usual thing happens; the husband saves the life of the other man, who in gratitude tells the husband that his wife really loves him. Funny how screen husbands always believe this when coming from the other man, but their wives can't tell it to them. All the hokum in this runs true to form so if folks don't mind having everything all figured out for them, and like a story that doesn't require any thought on their part, they'll be suited with "What a Wife Learned."

Milton Sills gives up the hero role to John Bowers, the very stupid husband. Bowers does his best to get the part over, but it isn't a very nice part to have to make convincing. Sills takes the "other man" role and works it out satisfactorily enough. Marguerite De La Motte is a pretty Sheila. Production is all right except for the miniatures used for the dam. Photography is also first rate.

Very Commonplace But Still the Type That Suits a Good Many

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There is a good market for this picture because a great many folks like these domestic dramas with meller attachments to give it the spice. They'll gasp when hero nearly loses his life while working, as a riveter, on a new building. There's a real thrill in it for the moment. You can talk about the idea of a woman who tries to choose between marriage and a career and of the difficulties presented when she tries to do both. Perhaps you could get them interested by playing up this angle. Your women, particularly, can be appealed to. They'll like Marguerite De La Motte. She's very good to look at.

Milton Sills' admirers will come in to see him and you can also use John Bowers' name. Say it is a Thomas H. Ince production, but if Ince's "The Hottentot" precedes this one don't talk too much about this one. The former is so very much better they'll expect a repeater.
A Play of Hollywood and Its People That Should Attract the Public

SCENARIO BY ............... Colin Campbell and Geo. Bertholon
CAMERAMAN ........ Dal Clawson and Chas. Haskins
AS A WHOLE ........ Very likely to please a majority, the "fan" crowd particularly, since it deals with Hollywood and its people

DIRECTION ...... All right on the whole; studio bits will go big; climax offers a bit of meller

LIGHTINGS .................... Good

STAR.............. Thoroughly pleasing and convincing; rather a too patient sufferer, however

SUPPORT........... Quite well suited; includes Bruce McRae, Kenneth Harlan, and Otis Harlan

EXTERIORS ..................... Good

INTERIORS ................. Appropriate

DETAIL ....................... Adequate

CHARACTER OF STORY ........ Motion picture actress marries drinker who eventually dies, leaving her free to marry man who really loves her

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 5,977 feet

It would seem that this latest production starring Dorothy Phillips would be a mighty attractive feature for the average picture audience because it is a decided novelty in that it deals with Hollywood, the home of motion pictures, and its people; and the public is only too anxious to know the more intimate details of both the making of pictures and the personal affairs of those who make them. "The World's a Stage" gives them a fine insight into both and at the same time it looks like a first rate piece of propaganda since the heroine is all that a good true wife should be and the tendency is to show that the private lives of the Hollywood players are very much like those of other people.

The opening reel secures the spectator's interest and development is such that it maintains the same tempo throughout and finally culminates in a melodramatic climax that precedes the final happy ending in which the patient and enduring young wife is happy with the man who has long been in love with her. Incidental to the plot there are some bits that will certainly appeal to the average audience. They show the interior of the studio and the spectator gets a pretty fair idea of how they "shoot" a set. These are the points that will make the feature appeal and you can count on Dorothy Phillips pleasing them.

The star is thoroughly convincing and sincere in her portrayal of the young actress who suffers the neglect and abuse of a drinking husband because she loves him and thinks he needs her. Kenneth Harlan hasn't a particularly pleasant role but he does good work. Harlan is certainly an unworthy husband in the role of Wallace Foster; Bruce McRae is the other man who restrains his love for Foster's wife because he knows she still loves Wallace. Otis Harlan and Jack MacDonald try to ring a humorous touch now and then with their home-brewing facilities. MacDonald would have gotten along much better without the Keystone beard, however.

Story: Jo Bishop gains fame in the "movies." She marries Wallace Foster while John Brand, also in love with her, remains a true friend. Wallace drinks heavily, mistreats and neglects Jo who strives in vain to be happy with Wallace. Eventually he accuses her of being in love with Brand and while trying to take her away, their machine goes off an open bridge. Wallace dying as a result and Jo is happy later with Brand.

Propaganda In This That Should Do Some Good

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors will undoubtedly find that their folks will particularly relish this story of motion picture people, their work and their private lives. The public is always on the alert for "inside information" and you can count on them liking the things that happen in "The World's a Stage." Let them know it is a story of moving picture people, how they live and how they work. That should be enough to get them interested.

Of course, use Dorothy Phillips' name and let them know that she plays the part of a motion picture actress who suffers the neglect and abuse of her husband rather than divorce him and be happy with the man that really loves and respects her. It might help the industry in general to use the propaganda that this offers, in the right way—to assure folks that Hollywood is not as it has sometimes been painted.

Viola Dana Should Please As Hoop-Skirted Flapper

Viola Dana in
"CRINOLINE AND ROMANCE"
Metro

DIRECTOR ..................Harry Beaumont
AUTHOR .....................Bernard McConville
SCENARIO BY ...............Bernard McConville
CAMERAMAN .................John Arnold
AS A WHOLE..............Pleasing comedy-drama that should go over well

STORY......Good entertainment with a little pathos and plenty of laughs. Plot a trifle far-fetched

DIRECTION......Very good; first few reels could be peppe up a little

PHOTOGRAPHY ...................Good
LIGHTINGS .......................Satisfactory

STAR.......Very pleasing in quaint role of hoop-skirted girl of 1923

SUPPORT......Claude Gillingwater does very good work; John Bowers and Allen Forrest leading men; others adequate but unimportant

EXTERIORS...........Suitable, some very pretty shots

INTERIORS ......................Good
DETAIL .................Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY......Girl kept in seclusion by grandfather runs away to fashionable aunt. Becomes a flapper but later returns to grandfather and marries

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...About 6,000 feet

Viola Dana's latest Metro release should prove an entertaining offering for the average audience. It combines comedy that at times borders on the farcical with pathetic touches that get over in good shape and there is some sure fire comedy stuff that will bring spontaneous laughter.

The plot centers around a situation which is fairly different. The star's admirers will undoubtedly be pleased with her characterization as the sweet, hoop-skirted Southern girl who has never been allowed to go outside of the beautiful valley in which her grandfather has reared her. The fact that this is a trifle far-fetched will not bother your folks overmuch if they do not take it too seriously, nor will the fact that she changes her manerisms with her clothes. They may wonder a trifle at the finish, however, whether she stays in crinolines the rest of her life or goes back to flapper fashions.

Some exceedingly funny complications ensue in the last reel when both lovers from the city fallow Viola to her little valley and the old Colonel with true Southern hospitality entertains them. Most humorous is the sequence in which both suitors take Viola riding. A bee-sting makes her mule run away and both lovers in their excitement mount the same horse. They finally rescue her only to drop her in an effort to carry her. This is the sort of thing Miss Dana does very well, and the situation is built up until laugh after laugh results.

Claude Gillingwater is excellent as the old Colonel, and John Bowers and Allen Forrest do good work as the lovers. The cast also includes Betty Francisco, Mildred June, Lillian Lawrence, Gertrude Short, Lillian Leighton and others.

Story: Emmy Lou, reared in seclusion and hoop-skirts in a deserted Southern valley by her grandfather, Col. Cavanaugh, runs away to a fashionable aunt and scores a hit with all the men, particularly Davis Jordan and Augustus Biddle. To make friends with the girls she bobs her hair and wears short skirts but returns to her granddaddy in crinoline as he is about to kill himself. Followed by Jordan and Biddle she cannot decide which she loves best until the Colonel stages a duel between the boys. The pistols aren't loaded—but Emmy doesn't know it and thus makes Jordan her choice.

Pleasant Little Comedy-Drama That Should Go Over If Exploited

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Crinoline and Romance" will undoubtedly satisfy your audience, particularly if Viola Dana is a favorite. The title will probably interest the girls and women and you can promise an interesting little story with some good laughs. You can interest them by telling them that the hoop-skirted maid becomes a bobbed-haired flapper and then goes back to crinoline. Catch-lines could be used to good advantage and you can tell them that in spite of a long-sleeved bathing suit, she beats them all in swimming. You can play up the star's name and tell them about the supporting cast.

“Peg O' the Movies”—Century—Universal
Type of production........................................2 reel kid comedy

Those who have been anxious to see Baby Peggy will be glad to see this one which is the first of a series of six two-reelers featuring the tiny star that Century is releasing. The plot is light and should of course not be taken seriously, but Peggy is there in fifty different ways. The women folk will just love her. She is first seen traveling to Universal City in a hammock slung under a freight car from which she emerges dressed like a little Bill Hart. The first thing she does is throw a brick at what she thinks is a thief, thus spoiling a perfectly good scene that a director is making. After many troubles she finally gets her "chance" and telling the director "you ain't seen nothing yet," proceeds to go all the vamps of moviedom one better in the famous "Foot There Was." If they like Baby Peggy—and how can they help it—go ahead with this.

“Hearts of Oak”—Timber Tales—Universal
Type of production........................................2 reel drama

“Hearts of Oak,” another of the Timber Tale series featuring Roy Stewart, has been directed by Duke Worne from a scenario by Harvey Gates. There is plenty of thrill in this little two-reeler and the action doesn't stop for a minute. Joseph Girard is in the cast and Vera Reynolds is the girl. This time Stewart as the ever-busy official of the Government Forestry Service in addition to putting out a small-sized forest fire, fighting several lumber thieves and rescuing the girl from a runaway lumber flat-car, wins a wife in the bargain.

Starland Review No. 19—Film Booking Office
Type of production........................................1 reel novelty

There are a number of interesting glimpses of stage performers in this latest review that will make it a good number for houses where the people have a chance to know the players presented, through either vaudeville or legitimate shows that play the town. It includes Sally, the monkey featured in Ziegfeld Follies; Mosconi brothers, members of the dancing family; Henry Hull and John Willard, star and author respectively of "The Cat and the Canary"; the Bennett sisters, dancers in the Boardwalk, a Broadway restaurant; also the Du Val sisters of "The Hotel Mouse" and the McCarthy sisters of "The Music Box Review"; a scene from "The Love Child" and interesting views of W. T. Benda, creator of the famous Benda masks.

“A Tough Winter”—Hal Roach—Pathe
Type of production........................................2 reel comedy

Snub Pollard with Marie Mosquini, directed by Charles Parrott, tries very hard to make this comedy a winner. In the first reel Snub's difficulties with a straw hat and palm beach suit in the midst of a terrible blizzard serves as a peg on which to hang the different gags. He finally adopts a new girl, Marie Mosquini, and her little brother, and plays Santa Claus by dropping down the chimney with a bag of firecrackers. A mean landlord seeking rent complications matters and the trio take a train to Florida. But by mistake the train goes to Iceland and the second reel, in an effort to travesty "Nanook," has some really funny stuff.

“Smoked Out”—Range Rider—Pathé
Type of production........................................2 reel western

Written and directed by Ford Beebe and the hero, Leo Maloney, "Smoked Out" offers good entertainment for those who like this sort of stuff. The chase, generally used to good advantage in other offerings of this series, is eliminated in this one, but there is plenty of fast fighting to make up for it. Maloney, rescuing a man who has been wounded and robbed, takes him back to his aged sick mother who has not seen her son for years. Leaving the sick man in the barn, Maloney goes to the house to explain. The mother is overjoyed to see him, thinking he is his son and he permits her to believe it until she falls asleep. The villain who robbed her son returns to pose as the long lost brother, with an eye on the promising ranch, but after difficulties in which Maloney is found to be an impostor, and the villain sets fire to the barn, the real son is identified by his signature. The cast includes Bud Osborne, Pat Rooney, Ray Meyers and Pauline Curley.

“Fruits of Faith”—Will Rogers—Pathé
Type of production........................................3 reel comedy drama

This three reel Will Rogers picture offers a lot more entertainment and real amusement than many of the so-called features. It is Rogers at his best in the role of a tramp and it is easy to guess the rest if you've once seen Rogers in one of his typical hobo parts. Will is a "son of rest" who gets an inspiration from a traveling person. The preacher's text is "faith" and he promises his hearers that they may have anything they want merely by having faith. Will immediately asks "faith" to send him something to eat. How he gets it, along with many other wishes, is only the beginning of this interesting number. Later on there is considerable sentiment in connection with Will's adoption of a babe he finds in the desert. Irene Rich and a cute baby are Rogers' chief support. "Fruits of Faith" is a thoroughly worth while addition for any program.

“Down in Dixie”—Mutt and Jeff—Fox
Type of production........................................1 reel cartoon

There are a few laughs in this latest Mutt and Jeff, but the material isn't nearly as funny as some of the subjects Fox has previously turned out. Mutt and Jeff invent a machine into which the cotton is thrown direct from the field. The remarkable feature of the machine is that it turns out ready made clothes. There is the usual line of behavior on the part of the little fellow and his big partner but "Down in Dixie" is shy on laughs.

“A Raisin and a Cake of Yeast”—Aesop's Fable—Pathé
Type of production........................................1 reel cartoon

This is a particularly good number of this series, the ideas incorporated being clever and the animation smooth. A little rabbit is chased by furious bloodhounds into a cave. Escaping, he is found by Farmer Al Falta who gives him a drink of his home brew which has such an effect that the rabbit is next seen throwing out of the hounds around his head by his tail. Farmer Al next gives a rooster a drink which blows all his feathers off. Then he takes a drink himself and the "kicks" he gets out of it takes him among the stars. The moral of which is (for some unknown reason), "There is nothing like travel to broaden one."

That Deal

Ten years ago, a young trade paper writer gave Sol Lesser the title of "Little Napoleon." Today, those familiar with his ancient history, might compare him with Alexander who "sighed" because there were no more nations to conquer. And perhaps Lesser hasn't "sighed." Perhaps he is only just beginning.

This is certain. No other move in the picture industry has brought such a feeling as the announcement that Lesser and his associates had taken over the T & D California circuit, which carried with it an 80 per cent interest in the New York franchise of First National.

The West Coast Theaters, with which the T & D will be amalgamated, has developed rapidly under the management of Lesser, Mike and Abe Gore and Adolph Ramish. In distributing circles, the West Coast Theaters organization has received the dignity of being classified among other circuits which pay as little as possible for pictures. By securing T & D and extending their bookings to practically 150 days, for all practical purposes Lesser becomes the boss of the West Coast.

Famous Players have attempted to secure the T & D circuit and franchise, and naturally, First National officials are satisfied. But otherwise the distribution field generally when appraised of the report, used expressions which for various reasons are not presented here.

When, in addition to the exhibition activities of the Lesser group, it is borne in mind that only recently, Lesser announced the enlargement of his production activities, the move becomes

FEWER AND BETTER—YES?
According to the FILM YEAR BOOK (out Wednesday) during 1922 there were 738 features released, and 1,304 one, two and three reels. And you know how many were three reels. All of which substantiates the claims of the optimists—that there are “fewer and better” pictures in the market.

NORTH MEETING SOUTH
Out among the Native Sons of Callyfornia the Northerners and Southerners don’t often mix. You can start any row you want anywhere out there by telling a ‘Frisco chap Los Angeles has it on his town. Or vice versa. Or any other way. But that didn’t stop the hard headed business folk of Sacramento—which is North, so to speak Callyfornia, from investing a lot of money in Hollywood and calling it the Sacramento Pictures Corp. Lambert Hillyer to direct J. G. Hunter—T & D interested and J. C. McCann of Idaho, also a T & D man, in the concern.

WHAT SLIPPED?
A la Finimigan-on again off again, gone again—in relative to the combine theater and office building. To go up on Broadway. In the 40’s. Gentleman interested has seen a lot of people. In a number of companies. Thought the idea was all set. And pretty. Was going to have half a dozen of the big companies co-operate. Show pictures in theater. Use office space in building. All pretty, pretty.

But something seems to have happened. At all events the big companies haven’t lined up as yet. So far as signing the dotted line is concerned. Wonder what slipped?

IT’S SURE TOUGH
Jackie Coogan will have to give up $260,720 of his half million from Metro. To the Government. As taxes. Says the Collector of Internal Revenue in Hollywood.

COMMERCIAL DIRECTORS
How few there are? You can count ‘em. Almost on your fingers—One hand enough. They stand out. But a lot of others. Who think they’re important. Won’t even allow the pictures to be touched. Must be released as made. Well, well. If those self same directors made the kind of pictures that needed no alterations; no cutting; no title changes. It might be different. As it is if their bluff is called—well some young men out Hollywood way might be in difficulties. Mentioning no names—at present.

NO FORGETTING
Marcus Loew is telling this one: When he arrived in ‘Frisco on his last visit there was a big reception. ‘Welcome’ signs all over the place. Hotel filled with ‘em. Up in his room three big trunks. Full of furs. With a ‘welcome’ sign atop. Won’t let him forget he was once in the fur business.

Be Men!

When children put their fingers in each other’s eye and start a neighborhood row because one won’t let another suck his lolly-pop, older, intelligent people smile and say, “Well, they’re only children.”

When men old enough to have their individual businesses row over the sucking of a lolly-pop, they are usually called “damn fools.”

This refers and is intended to refer to the members of the T. O. C. C. and the F. I. L. M. Clubs of New York. It makes little difference who owns the lolly-pop. It makes less difference who refused to let the other fellow take a lick.

For months past, the Arbitration Board of these two organizations in settling film disputes, has been held up by every one in the industry, aware of its operations, as a model upon which exhibitors and exchange men could and should operate. Therefore, when for some silly reason, there is a possibility of this effective and worth-while institution being abolished, it is not only deplorable but disastrous.

Certainly there should be sufficient sanity, sufficient good sense, sufficient business intelligence in these two organizations to block this idiotic movement.

Be Men!
It is especially annoying that a break should come at this time—on the eve of the adoption of a uniform contract—one of the features of which must be an arbitration arrangement to settle disputes without recourse to costly court procedure.

The grown-up men, members of these organizations, if unable to agree on who should lick the lolly-pop, can prove their right to be called business men by throwing away that which is in dispute, and starting anew.

Arbuckle to Direct

Ever Again To Appear On Screen As An Actor—To Start Work Immediately

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Hollywood—In a statement issued yesterday, Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle announced that he would start work immediately with the Reel comedies, Inc., as a director. The statement contained an expression to the effect that he was "done with the ring," and that this was his chance to make good in the right way. He also said that he would work immediately, concluding with the expression "from now on we will not see or hear from me except through the comedies which direct."

As before noted, Famous Players is written off feature comedies in which Arbuckle appears. They will never be released.

Helene Chadwick Seeks Injunction

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Helene Chadwick is taking an injunction to restrain Goldwyn from interfering with her efforts to obtain work from other producers.

Miss Chadwick alleges that Goldwyn permitted her contract to lapse and then maintained that she was ill in their employ. She claims that because of an understanding under which all coast producers operate, that the other producers cannot get work from other producers while still bound by an existing agreement. Her contract, it alleged, was to run for two years.

Reports Will Not Down That Von Herberg Will Be Interested in New Coast Combine

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

San Francisco—J. H. Von Herberg, is here en route to Palm Beach. In film circles the reports continue to circulate that Von Herberg either has, or will have an interest in the new theater combine engineered by the Lesser organization—the T. & D. and West Coast.

Hollywood—The film world here continue to talk of Jensen & Von Herberg being interested in the Lesser combine with T. & D. The fact that Joe Schenck is involved, holding a 20 per cent interest, has caused much comment in view of Schenck's connections with First National and Metro.

No one in authority would discuss the possibility of the Von Herberg affiliation with the Lesser-Gore group yesterday, although well posted film folk insist that it is not only probable, but exceedingly logical.

Gore in Charge at 'Frisco

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Paramount Pictures
Newspaper Opinions

"Poor Men's Wives"—Lichtman

HERALD—"Poor Men's Wives" is destined to do well as a box-office attraction. It is a picture in which women play the heroic roles, and it does so not only with success but with its greatest appeal to the ladies, God bless 'em.

Gasnier directed this picture and handled it well. With every temptation to descend to the sensational, he maintained a semblance of intelligence throughout our viewing.

TIFFANY—The most that can be said for the picture is that occasionally it has the semblance of reality in its minor moments.  * The performance of Barbara La Mar as the poor man's wife, rings true. She can act when they don't make her out Betty Franks, as the rich man's wife, gives the most consistently good performance of the piece.

SUN—There are several highly dramatic situations, and the picture is quite likely to appeal to all who wish they were millionaires. **

EVENING WORLD—  will probably hit the public's fancy and go merrily ping-pong for a long-run long run at the Criterion.  The direction is excellent and the photography leaves but little to desired.

EVENING JOURNAL—On witnessing these seven reels of acting in that manner has done an eminently desirable. The outstanding quality is talented direction. The result is a creation that fans will relish.

TELEGRAM— * a picture you cannot afford to miss.

DAILY NEWS—Mr. Gasnier's best work is done in the courts of Jinn and Jinn. The scene on the roller coaster is delightful, the sensations registered are perfect. In the home, Mr. Gasnier's realism takes the place of preachment which he distributes liberally. His picture is unpretentious but true, hence one admires his courage.  * For us, the hit of the evening was Miss Zsa Zsa Pata.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Melodrama in a Tiffany setting seems to best describe this picture.  * * * Even so, despite the banality of the story, the picture will no doubt attract favorable attention, for it is well directed and well executed, and with elaborate and produced.

TRIBUNE—It ceased to amuse us as soon as it became unimportant. The first part, when the two girls are employed in a gown emporium, the one is model, the other as fitter, seems promising enough.   Barbara La Mar proves that she really can act.

MALL— * Well photographed and well acted, but with so unessential a plot that the film drags until it becomes tedious. It could be cut considerably without loss.

POST—It is a commonplace picture at best, relieved here and there by chances to middling acting; at worse, it illustrates strongly the worst faults of the movies.

GLOBE— * An exceedingly skilful arrangement of what experience seems to have taught cinema producers what the public wants.  It is the sort of thing which makes the film treaters rejoice and the juvenile gibber.

"Nobody's Money"—F. P. L. Rialto

MORNING WORLD—This is really a bright and delightful little comedy, and Mr. Holt comes out as a comedy player who does not flinch at all difficult to make his audience laugh.

AMERICAN—Holt is an unusually good actor, and he is as convincing in a comedy role as he was in the days when he used to lead the Royal North-West Mounted across the border.  * The story was spontaneous in the presentation delightful and the sub-titles clever. And the rest of the cast did its best to make the descriptive adjectives unamusing.

TELEGRAPHICAL—William Le Baron's comedy, "Nobody's Money" has lost none of its value in its trip from stage to screen. The story lends itself admirably to the medium of the silver sheet and will probably make money for all concerned in its production.

EVIE WORLD—We think you'll like Jack Holt in "Nobody's Money." We did, and we're hard to please.

TELEGRAM—In "Nobody's Money," Holt mixes comedy and drama in equal portions with delightful results, tingling the blood line and the funny bone. The new scene-plars is the cowboy agent and is an excellent piece of acting.

MAIL—Jack Holt is one of the fortunate screen stars who seem frequently to be favored with one of those light amusing plays which generally manage to entertain an audience pleasantly despite a number of minor defects.

Such is "Nobody's Money."  * * a mixture of drama and comedy, not without love interest, that assures good-sized audiences throughout the week.

TRIBUNE—It is an amusing story, but after it got away from the second reel it seemed to us rather involved and not so easy to follow.  Everybody does excellent work.

POST—"Nobody's Money" at the Rialto is delightful comedy and keeps one in good humor throughout the film. Then a pleasing discovery has been made. Jack Holt displays a fine comic sense. **

GLOBE—Jack Holt displays considerable ability as a light comedian in the picture at the Rialto. "Nobody's Money." ** *

Leaves Universal to Join Louis B. Mayer—No Successor Determined Yet.
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Irving Thalberg will leave Universal next month to become vice-president of the Louis B. Mayer Prod. Mayer has plans under way for increased production.

Thalberg, who has been director-general at Universal City for some time, will leave the company with the best of wishes. There has been no friction with Carl Laemmle or any other Universal officials.

At Universal, it was pointed out yesterday that Carl Laemmle is now at the studio. It was said no successor had been decided upon as yet.

CRASH!

The storm-driven schooner shuddered sickeningly as it struck the reef. From stem to stern she trembled like a wounded thing. Canvas ripped and timber splintered. High up in her gale-swept rigging the angry cries of the two fighting demons blended in the exulting shrieks of the hungry hurricane. Shot-swift rain and spray tore at their faces. Furious thunder boomed even above the pound of hull-breaking seas. A sudden, blinding, Heaven-rendering flash of lightning revealed the forms of the two men—fighting to the death atop the dizzily swaying mast. They are

Aschers Sell Stock

Expected to Offer From $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 to Public to Bolster Up Business

The Ascher Theater Corp., which concentrates its theater activities essentially in Chicago, has opened offices at 49 Wall St., from where a stock selling campaign is being conducted. It is understood that from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 will be offered to the public.

In the company’s prospectus, the prediction is made that there will be a gigantic merger of theaters throughout the United States similar to the merger effected in the steel industry. The formation of the Ascher Theater Corp. is given as a step in this direction. The following information is gathered from data appearing in the prospectus.

The chain consists of 22 theaters, with a seating capacity of 30,675 and annual admissions totaling about $1,000,000. The properties are as—

Seeing New York

By Clem Deneker
Manager The Deneker Circuit

Since I writ you last, I been to some shows. Maybe you think I ain’t got the opposition these New York managers is got. I think the Hippodrome is about as good a show as there is without movin pictures and it was packed. They only gave one show, though. I stuck after the first show and the lights was turned out on me. That’s had management because the streets was crowded when I went out. I had a bad experience. I read in the papers where there’s a chicken show at Madison square garden, and went there, but it was only barn yard chickens. I wasted a whole afternoon. I spent Friday night at the Rivoli with Dr. Riesenberg and while he had a good show on needle was getting up and going out in the—

Copyright Ruling

Injunction Twice Won By Goldwyn Thrown Out of Circuit Court in Favor of Howells Sales

An important decision, involving the rights of copyright and litigation alleging infringement under the existing copyright laws, was handed down by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second District (New York), on Tuesday, in connection with the suit brought by Goldwyn against Howells Sales Co., Inc., involving “Vendetta” and “Mr. Barnes of New York.”

The circuit court by its opinion reversed the two injunctions obtained through the lower Federal Court on behalf of Goldwyn. The opinion would seem to convey that the mere fact that a motion picture producer has purchased the film rights to a piece of literary material does not of necessity permit him to bring suit charging infringement if another picture appears with a somewhat similar story. Attorneys for Howells Sales, maintain that the ruling makes it necessary for a producer to make legal arrangements with the owner of the copyright so that in the event a second picture appears—

Valentino to Dance

Will Appear in Detroit on Sunday—Interesting Developments Possible

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—It is understood that Rudolph Valentino and his wife, Winifred Hudnut Valentino, will start a week’s dancing engagement at Karl Fischer’s “New Majestic,” a cabaret, beginning Sunday night.

While it was impossible to locate Valentino or his attorney, Arthur B. Field, yesterday, it is understood that the report is authentic.

When Famous Players was asked for a statement with regard to the report, it was stated that “there was no comment to be made.”

Those interested in the Valentino litigation, say some interesting developments may result from the engagement, in view of the injunction now operative against Valentino.

Joseph M. Schenck Buys Majority Interest in United Studio—Mike Levee Remains

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Joseph M. Schenck becomes principal owner of the United Studios by virtue of a deal closed yesterday.

The deal is said to involve $1,500,000. The property is said to be valued at $2,500,000. Mike C. Levee, president of the corporation, is associated with Schenck in acquiring the controlling interest. He will remain as president and general manager, while Schenck will become chairman of the board of directors.

Nick Schenck could not be reached for a statement yesterday. Felix Feist admitted he had heard of the report but had not received confirmation.

EDUCATIONAL FILM EXCHANGES, Inc., E. W. HAMMONS, President
New York City, January 28th, 1928

Mr. E.W. Hammons
Free, Educational Film Exchanges
370 Seventh Avenue
New York City

My Dear Mr. Hammons:

When I learned, after my arrival in America, of the great extent and influence of your cinema, reaching millions of your people every day, I thought to myself that it would be most wonderful thing if the screen could one day be employed to help me spread the message I am trying to carry to all mankind.

It was not my desire or intention to consent to appear in any picture which would be based upon fiction, but when Mr. Elmore Leffingwell, who has directed my publicity, told me that you would be willing to take to the people a true-real educational picture, which would actually impart my message and explain my work, I was immediately impressed that it was my duty to take advantage of such an opportunity. I am aware of your extensive distribution facilities, and I thank you for the fine co-operation you have given in making arrangements to show the picture, "The Message of Emilie Coué", which I sincerely hope will entertain your millions of patrons while still benefiting them by showing how self-suggestion, through conscious auto-suggestion, can help every man, woman and child everywhere.

The proceeds of this motion picture, Mr. Hammons, will go to establish a free clinic, or more properly speaking, institution, near my home in Mormiac, France, where I have great difficulty now in handling the crowds that come to see me. It must be understood that not personally to be the beneficiary of whatever this picture earns; not one cent will come to me. The free institute so badly needed in my home town, will be accessible to millions of people, and if you are in a position to assist in making it possible, it ought to afford you much satisfaction.

Accept my sincere thanks, please, for the great kindness and consideration you have shown my message. You understand and seem to sympathize with me in what I am trying to do, and for the sake of the cause - the spreading of the message, I wish greatest success to the picture in which I appear, trying to explain from the screen to millions I cannot otherwise reach, just what I am explaining from the lecture platform wherever I go.

Sincerely yours,

Copyright Rule

with situations of this nature he can have redress through the courts, on a claim of infringement. The attorneys interpret the decision to mean that the mere copyrighting of a completed picture is not sufficient upon which to base an infringement suit, if the producer bringing the action has not been directly injured or. is not on the right or arranged with the owner of the copyright to assure him protection.

Some time ago David P. Howell purchased a German picture, “Vendetta,” starring Pola Negri. It was shown through the exclusive motion picture rights to “Mr. Barnes of New York” and even admitting that that story and “Vendetta” were alike, Goldwyn arranged to prevent an infringement because the company was not the copyright proprietor, but merely the licensee.

The attorneys claim that Howells were innocent parties in the transaction, and that they had purchased “Vendetta,” not so much for the story as for the drawing power of Pola Negri. Goldwyn, however, claimed that the company had a right to copyright the motion picture rights only, and for that reason could sue alleging an infringement. When the appeal was made by Howell’s, the injunction was vacated on the ground that Goldwyn did not own the copy- right, and for that reason could not sue under the copyright law.

Goldwyn then again revived the action, this time, making John F. Stephens, owner of the copyright of “Mr. Barnes of New York,” a party defendant, as a co-plaintiff in the action against Howells. The lower court granted a second injunction and again Howell’s appealed. In this action, Howell’s brought up practically the same points that came up in the first action and, in addition, maintained there was no cause for the suit on the ground that Stephens, as copyright proprietor, had assigned all damages that may accrue to him to Goldwyn.

On Tuesday the circuit court reversed the lower court and dismissed the entire case on the ground that Stephens was not suing as copyright proprietor, but had merely assigned his claim to Goldwyn, for the purpose of litigation, and also on the ground that Goldwyn was not the holder of the copyright.

I don’t think theaters with these foreign names have got much appeal to me and I told him that and he agreed with me. I told him if he wanted to change the name to the Elite, which is the name of mine which I originated, that I wouldn’t go any more. Now about the Rivoli show. I think his orchestra is cheating on him, for I noticed that sometimes the drums wouldn’t play, and then the violinist would stop for a minute and then the trombone would stop for a few minutes. I didn’t want to say anything to him, because I didn’t like to see anyone lose his job. Personally I think New York is over- crowded at times, and is interested in a bedtime. I was overtaxed at Dandreff and took out two rows. That’s what I think about New York.

I have hit one or two posts here like what I got in front my theaters. There don’t seem to be anywhere for people who drive around, to hitch, while they see shows and a lot of good customers is lost.

Well I am leaving New York next Monday. I got enough good stories to last me two months. Before I go if any of the publicity men would like to give me the circular letters I get, I can take some time when I am down here and save them postage. I know they put them written two years ahead.

I hoped to meet Will Hays before I went away, but I guess he is pretty hard to get at. I got a lot of people all lined up with him if any trouble comes. I may go in to producing on my own hook. I got a good story.

I met Marcus Loew and he’s going to take me to some of his only thing locations at 59th and 86th streets. Well tell you after I get back. Also saw the Russian players at the Astor lobby and think they’re great.

Your’s Cleen.

Of Uniform Contract Adopted Yesterday—Big Step Towards Business-Like Procedure

Probably the most business-like move made within the industry to bring about a better commercial relationship between buyer and seller, became effective yesterday when representatives of the T. O. C. C. signed with representatives of the various firms to bring into effect the existence of a uniform contract.

Because of its importance, the full text of the uniform contract will be found elsewhere in this issue.

The chief feature of this, according to well posted film men, is the adoption of the contract is "a step in the right direction." The contract is too long and undeniably could be improved," said one of the post producers yesterday, "but it is far better than anything we have ever had. During the next six months or year, there is every reason to believe that the men who framed this will get together and improve it. It shows we are getting somewhere in a business-like way."

Efforts Under Way to Have C. C. Pictures Receivership Taken Out of the Courts

Efforts are understood to be under way to reorganize C. C. Pictures, Inc., on a basis satisfactory to all of the producers involved. The matter may be decided definitely by the end of next week.

It was reported yesterday that certain interests in the company allowed the business to continue on without precipitating matters by the receivership action, there would have been no necessity to go into the courts. It was also reported that appointment of the sequestration receiver, Nathaniel Corwin, may be contested by several of the creditors on the ground that he was a former employee of H. C. Cornelius.

The petition in bankruptcy was filed in Jersey City since C. C. Pictures is a New Jersey corporation.

English Theaters Playing to Satisfactory Returns—London Houses at Premium

By ERNEST W. FREEMAN
The Film Renter and M. P. R. News, London
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—Generally speaking, business is very satisfactory with English houses. There is still another addition to the list of prominent west end theaters that have gone over to the cinema.

The Empire, in Leicester Square, has opened with Stuart Blackton's production "The Virgin Queen," which features Lady Diana Manners and Carlyle Blackwell. This will be succeeded by a two weeks' run by Norma Talmadge in "The Eternal Flame," which is booked for four weeks. "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" finished a successful run at the Palace on the 31st, and was immediately followed by "The Prisoner of Zenda."

(Powers Returning to Coast

P. A. Powers, of F. B. O., leaves on Monday for the Coast.

"The Last Hour," an Edward Sloman production, distributed by C. C. Burr of Mastedon Films, Inc., has already been booked for first runs in thirty-two New England theaters. Those New England exhibitors are not at all sure how to pick the winners—Adv.

"The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," a Warner Bros. production, has opened with a good showing in the entire east.

It is doubtful if any picture has ever played to such phenomenal audiences as "The Four Horsemen," and it is now being taken off in the heyday of its success because Sir William Jury is under contract to show two more pictures at the Palace during his tenancy. "Robin Hood," at the London Pavilion, is playing to packed houses, and many other productions are being held up through being unable to secure a west end theater. "Climbing Mount Everest," and "Shackleton's Quest to the Pole," are also doing very well.

Here is One of the Best Pictures of the Year

John M. Stahl Prod.
"THE DANGEROUS AGE"

D.irector .......................... John M. Stahl
Author ............................ Frances Irene Reels
Scenario ............ J. G. Hawks and Bess Meredyth CameraMan .......................... Jackson J. Rose

As A Whole........... A splendidly made picture that makes a fine audience attraction and should prove a popular choice

Story...... All well known facts but skilful treatment and judicious application make them completely interesting

Direction...... Puts this one over; so well done that trite story comes forth as first rate entertainment

Photography ................. Very good
Lightings................. Good; some unusual night effects Players................. Lewis Stone gives a capital performance; Clo Madison, Edith Roberts and Ruth Clifford contribute to the picture's attractiveness

Exteriors ................ Not many Interiors ......................... First rate
Detail .......................... Given good attention
Character of Story........... The why and wherefore of the unrest a man undergoes when he reaches "The Dangerous Age"

Length of Production ........ 7,204 feet

Here is one of the best pictures of the year. There isn't very much new about the theme, and there aren't any great thrills, but it is the kind of production that brings people back to the theater, and these are the sort of pictures that are very much needed indeed today.

"The Dangerous Age" is the sort of picture that picks up with each succeeding performance. It's the sort of thing that women "love"; that when they leave your house, they are going to talk about it a great deal, and this regardless of whether they are young and hope to get married, young and married, or wives whose husbands have reached the "dangerous age" somewhere in the early 40's. All are going to be very happy over this picture. Perhaps it may teach them a lesson, but certainly there is no preaching and it never slows up in interest.

John M. Stahl deserves all the credit for this one. He has taken a simple, somewhat hackneyed story and has made of it one of the pictures that will surely stand out during the year. Much of this is due to his expert knowledge of what constitutes the boring, uninteresting developments from day to day in the house hold of a woman to do family. Here the husband still has sentiment sufficient to be enthralled by the charm of an early spring night. And Lewis Stone as the husband, was never cast to better advantage. He is dainty. He dreams of romance, his wife patches his underwear. When Stone suggests she should go with him to New York and enjoy a second honeymoon, she informs him that the spring house cleaning must be done. Nothing was ever truer to life. Every man of forty knows it and so does every wife if she wishes to admit it.

Stone goes to New York alone, meets a girl young enough to be his daughter. He is carried off his feet, writes to his wife that he wants his freedom, only to discover the girl is engaged. Then comes a wild chase to recover the letter. His arrival on the day of his daughter's wedding, his anxiety to obtain the letter. His wife reads the letter, but dissembles, and the story ends with the wife awakened to the fact that a man wants to hold his wife as a sweetheart and not only as the caretaker of his home.

The production is excellent, the cast splendid, the story handled with true and unerring instinct. All in all, a mighty fine picture.

Arouse the Interest in Your Women Folk. This Should Be Enough

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Get back of this one hard. Give it a good start and it will take care of itself. Let your people know the general theme of the story. That is all important. Then your women folk are sure to be interested, and your business should build with every succeeding performance.

You can easily use teasers and catchlines because the title is easily applicable to this. Let them imagine what "The Dangerous Age" is, or it might be better to tell them what it is, and issue a warning to the wives of your community to see the picture for what good they can obtain from it.

You have the advantage of some excellent names including Lewis Stone, whose work in recent pictures has given him a splendid standing. And you have the name of John M. Stahl whose more recent productions have given him quite an important position as well. Some of your people may also remember Edith Roberts.

The title is attractive and will awaken curiosity. You can work with your club women on this and start a newspaper discussion based on the plot without difficulty.

CHARACTER OF STORY .... A comedy complex with the usual incidents but laughs galore in them

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,584 feet

Jack Holt easily proves his versatility in putting over his first genuine comedy role in "Nobody's Money," Beulah Marie Dix's adaptation of William LeBaron's stage play. Irregardless of Holt's performance, his likeable personality and the fact that he shows what he can do as a comedian, there is real entertainment in "Nobody's Money." It is a sure-fire amusement and if they don't laugh, cheer up, and go out happy after seeing it, it won't be the picture's fault. It is in a happy vein all the way through and Director Worsley has shown keen comedy sense in his handling of the story. He always manages to get the most out of the situations and a lot of unimportant business, incidental to the plot, certainly rounds it out and provides many laughs that contribute to its success.

The development is smooth, swift and increases in interest as it goes along. It isn't the easiest thing in the world to sustain the interest evenly in this type of farce comedy but Worsley has succeeded in doing so to a surprising degree. There is nothing startlingly original in LeBaron's comedy scheme. In fact the idea has been worked out similarly in many previous pictures, though probably never to much better advantage than it has been done here. The hero, who has everybody at his mercy, turns out to be the man whose interests he is protecting. In this instance the denouement happens to be a genuine surprise and probably there won't be a great many who will figure out the ending before time.

Jack Holt is thoroughly pleasing and capable in the role of John Webster, erstwhile book agent. Holt, together with his "side-kick," Harry Depp, is the life of the picture. They get a lot of fun out of it and have no difficulty in making it register. The laughs are spontaneous and well distributed and there are no dull moments in the picture. It is good entertainment all the way. Wanda Hawley is Holt's leading woman. While she hasn't a great deal to do, they might have secured a better suited opposite for Holt.

Story: Two film-flamers are working a small town under the assumed name of Robert Douglas. A stranger, happening into town, is hired by the two to play the role of Douglas to help them out of a scrape. Complications pile on with the stranger holding the winning hand and ruling the lives of those who hired him. How he turns the tables on the two, swings the Governor's election the way he wants it, wins the candidate's daughter and then discloses his true identity, makes up a series of laughs in this amusing feature.

Make Your Promises and Let the Picture Do the Rest

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you are looking for a good strong comedy number, get to this one at your first opportunity. They'll be well satisfied with Jack Holt's first comedy effort and you can rest assured it will amuse them unless there is something wrong with them. It won't be the picture's fault if it doesn't cheer them up.

Get the star's admirers interested in his latest picture. Promise them something different for him and you can make safe promises for his first appearance as a comedian. His is a personality that gets them. Let them know the picture is there with laughs. If they want humorous entertainment you can count on pleasing them. It is worth your best exploitation and the results should prove worth your effort.
Barthelmess at His Best in "Fury"

SCENARIO BY ................ Edmund Goulding

CAMERAMAN .................. Roy Overbaugh

AS A WHOLE...... Ranks with "Tol'able David" as one of Barthelmess' best pictures

STORY...... Excellent vehicle with the sea and sailors for striking and beautiful atmosphere

DIRECTION...... Excellent; a few sequences held too long

PHOTOGRAPHY ................. Very good

LIGHTINGS .................. Excellent

PLAYERS...... Barthelmess as the gentle son of a sea captain embittered by disappointment, gives striking performance; Dorothy Gish delightful; Tyrone Power stands out, and Pat Hartigan fine as the "heavy"

EXTERIORS...... Striking shots of the sea and docks

INTERIORS............... Very few, but typical

DETAIL...... Well handled; some poetic titles out of place, particularly the final one

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Good for any house; especially appealing to women

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION........ 8,709 feet

Not since "Tol'able David" has Richard Barthelmess had such an opportunity, and not since this famous production of last year has he accomplished such excellent results as he does in "Fury." He is shown as a tender boyish charming figure, the son of the captain of a windjammer who, embittered by his wife's desertion, sees the world all wrong. Much of the action is laid aboard ship and the remainder in the saloons and boarding houses which line the docks of the great city. The environment of London and Glasgow is skillfully carried out, and Director King has lost no opportunity to convert "Boy" Leyton all the sympathy which Barthelmess usually obtains and which is given a highly colored background by the almost insane actions of his father, portrayed by Tyrone Power, and by the rough but natural happenings aboard ship.

The footage is somewhat lengthy, and cautious editing might be employed to advantage, particularly with reference to the extended sequence of the burial at sea, and some of the fights both aboard ship and in the saloon.

Dorothy Gish has an unusual opportunity to appear in one of the roles for which she is famous, and excepting that perhaps the characterization is overdone at times, her performance is very gratifying. She has a number of opportunities to do the "bits" which she does best, and she registers pathos exceedingly well when told by "Boy" that he cannot marry her until he has fulfilled the oath he has taken. She is heartbroken.

Too much cannot be said of the performance of Tyrone Power, as the captain, and Pat Hartigan gives an excellent performance as "Morgan," the heavy. Production values are high.

Story: How "Boy" Leyton avenges his father and kills the man who stole his mother, makes up this unusual drama. In the end "Boy" marries Minnie, a waif, and all ends well.

Here's Another "Tol'able David"

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Here is an unusual opportunity to "cash in" on Richard Barthelmess' latest, a story which seems to have been especially written for him by Edmund Goulding, who has performed a mighty fine job. Barthelmess seems to live the part of the quiet, lovable son of a rough sailor. You can tell your folks that this is the best thing Barthelmess has done since "Tol'able David," and that it ranks high in comparison with that popular production. You can also tell them that Henry King, who made "Tol'able David," directed Barthelmess in this, and that he has an unusually powerful cast including Dorothy Gish. Your fans will probably remember Dorothy for her excellent performance in "Orphans of the Storm" as well as other Griffith specials. And you can tell them that she has never had a better part than in this. Tyrone Power, a great actor, may not be particularly well known to picture fans, but tell them all you can about him and get them interested.

For the benefit of those who remember Barthelmess for his first big special, "Broken Blossoms," say that the background of "Fury" is laid in the Limehouse section of London.

The title can be played up advantageously.

CHARACTER OF STORY......A contrast of the chauffeur and the other a millionaire

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....6,963 feet

"Poor Men's Wives" looks like a first rate box office number, due largely to the splendid efforts of Gasnier, who produced the picture. The story really contains material with genuine audience appeal but it is decidelly the skilful treatment and careful handling accorded it that makes it entertaining. And there are individual touches and original twists that keep the theme from resembling so many others dealing with this same angle on the marriage question—wealth or happiness?

Contrast in this instance is especially interesting and excellently worked out. You are first introduced to the two girls, chums, who work in a dressmaking establishment. The one marries a rich rounder while the other becomes the wife of a chauffeur. From this point the story gathers interest and builds steadily toward the climax. In fact the interest is so well sustained that the spectator hardly realizes the picture is as long as the seven reels the story consumes. And it isn't often that this is the case.

The development is never obvious and the things that you expect to happen do not occur. Each new twist is a genuine surprise. The spectator naturally assumes that the wife of the chauffeur will tire of her semi-poverty and accept the attentions of the rich man who drives her home in his automobile after running her down. But she doesn't, and it is a clever sequence of events that leads to her husband's suspicion and an equally clever twist that brings about the happy ending without beating around the bush into divorce courts and the like.

Barbara La Marr, as the wife of the poor man, apppears to fine advantage in this and she does excellent work. Her portrayal is real and convincing. Betty Francisco is a splendid type and David Butler is a likeable and thoroughly pleasing chauffeur. Richard

CHARACTER OF STORY.......Girl factory worker puts a note in overalls pocket and wins a country husband

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...............4,426 feet

"The Love Letter" is the best regular weekly release that Universal has turned out so far this year and it is the best Gladys Walton picture in some time. The picture is a splendid entertainment that contains an original story with a fine combination of comedy and drama, very well blended together and with more logic and plausibility than you usually find in this type of story. It has sure-fire audience appeal and its ability to satisfy a big majority is certain.

Gladys Walton at Her Best

It starts out with an absorbing premise that is quite out of the ordinary as far as romance is concerned. Among the girl factory workers who put mash notes in the overalls on which they work and which are sent to stores all over the country, is the heroine. You are given an idea of the answers the girls receive to their notes and among them comes one to Mary Ann McKee. This gets the story off to a fine start and King Baggott has succeeded in sustaining the same interest all the way through and building up a first rate suspense in the climax when it looks as though the girl's new found happiness is destined to be ruined by an acquaintance of her tenement days.

This last reel particularly, gives Gladys Walton a chance to again do an emotional bit. And it must be admitted that the star shows a decided improvement in this direction and the sequence in which she pretends to love another in order to save her husband's life is very well done. Also the scene in which she kisses her baby goodbye. The role of Mary Ann McKee is the sort that Miss Walton does best and she's going to please more than just her regular admirers by her work in this.

The story has a dash of meller which includes a good twist. The girl is taken on her first "job" by her crook friend, Red Mike. When the police rush into the store which is being robbed, the star gets into the show window and assumes the position of a dressed figure thus eluding the police. There are many other equally good touches that make the picture interesting and very good entertainment.

Story: When her friend Red Mike is sent to prison, Mary goes to the country to look up the fellow who answered her note. They are married and happy until Mike calls and threatens to shoot Mary's husband unless she goes away with him. How Mary prepares to obey to save her husband's life but Mike weakens and tells the truth, leaving Mary to enjoy her happiness, completes it.

You Can Count on Pleasing Them With This Comedy Drama

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Your folks will thoroughly enjoy this latest Gladys Walton picture and if they are at all partial to the star, make an extra fuss about the showing of her latest feature, "The Love Letter" because it is decidedly the best she has given them in some time. And they'll be delighted with her work as well as with the entire picture. It is a very pleasing entertainment.

If you have a mailing list you might start a letter campaign by writing to your patrons and signing the name "Mary Ann McKee," then following this up with the announcement of the picture to be shown at your theater. Play up the theme—the consequences of writing love letters and you can depend upon your flapper patrons being on hand. The comedy and drama are both well balanced and interesting.

DETAIL .......................... Fair

CHARACTER OF STORY .......................... New York millionaire goes broke in London while looking up poor girl his son wants to marry

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......................... About 5,000 feet

Associated Exhibitors’ latest Playgoers release is an English import that doesn't hit any high spots either in presentation or acting. It is quite an ordinary attraction and one that will hardly satisfy audiences here. At the outset the picture promises to be one of the familiar order in which a millionaire parent decides to prevent the marriage of his son to a poor girl and goes about it in the usual way—buying the girl off. But once the father lands in London on his errand the story takes an entirely different turn and the remainder of the feature consists of the hardships endured by the millionaire who goes broke in London and is unable to convince anyone that he is really the wealthy John Pye Smith.

In this respect the theme is not unlike one of our recent releases in which a rich westerner comes to New York and, not being able to get any ready cash, is forced to mingle with the poor, thereby learning the conditions of those less fortunate than himself. But there is no comparison in the way both themes have been handled. This one is by far inferior and has not been given the skilful treatment that would make it a satisfying picture. There is no humorous relief in this to fill out a plot that certainly needed some trimming to make it worthy of feature length.

There is insufficient situations and incident to give it much entertainment value and the director has not injected any particularly effective bits to round it out. Some of the atmosphere is quite realistic and interesting but there is nothing very outstanding. The exteriors offer some fairly good shots of London on one of its typical foggy days and, on the whole, the locations are first rate. Photography is about fair.

Of the players, C. M. Hallard, as the millionaire father, has the most to do and he does it well enough except that he is never convincing as a New Yorker. He looks just the English actor that he is. Katherine Blair is pretty and deserving of a more conspicuous part than she is given. The remainder of the cast is adequate.

Story: John Pye Smith, New York millionaire, goes to London to “buy off” Hilda, the pretty nurse, to whom his son is engaged. Through unusual circumstances Smith is left stranded and penniless in London. He is injured and nursed back to health by Hilda who is then welcomed into the family.

Build Up Your Program With Good Short Stuff If You Use It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This does not look like a very sure thing if you know they want and demand good entertainments. In the first place the picture is obviously foreign and they have quite enough poor American features to put up with without your giving them some weak imports. But it is mostly a matter for your own judgment so it would be well to take a look at the picture yourself before you decide.

If you know they are not very critical and can build your surrounding program up with good short reels, it will help cover up the feature’s shortcomings. A good comedy, educational subject and the usual news weekly will make up for the other if you pick them with care. There are no names to use so it is up to the title and catchlines to let them know what you are offering.

Everybody's Talking About "The Christian"
Good Production and Right Treatment Makes Familiar Material Interesting

Wm. B. Brush presents
"ONE MILLION IN JEWELS"
American Releasing Corp.

DIRECTOR ...................... J. P. McGowan
AUTHOR ....................... J. P. McGowan
SCENARIO BY ................. J. P. McGowan
CAMERAMAN ................... Wm. Tuers

AS A WHOLE......... Crook melodrama that offers fairly good excitement revolving around the old jewel smuggling business

STORY...... Will appeal to a certain crowd that likes the intricate type of plot that this contains

DIRECTION....... All right usually, although there is not enough suspense to cause any surprise in what happens

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Very good

LIGHTINGS ..................... Good

PLAYERS........ Helen Holmes foregoes her serial adventures to play the girl crook of this feature; J. P. McGowan a pleasing performer; Elinor Faire photographs poorly; others adequate

EXTERIORS .................. Some very attractive

INTERIORS ..................... Suitable

DETAIL ......................... Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Efforts of girl to smuggle in crown jewels despite efforts of man she loves to prevent her

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... 5,326 feet

It must have taken a lot of courage to decide on an unhappy ending for this picture and for that one outstanding bit of individuality the producers deserve considerable praise. It is quite a sensible and logical ending but it breaks all precedent for a picture of this type. Certainly no one in the audience will ever expect the heroine to die. Such an event never figures in this type of crook melodrama because they usually expect, and generally prefer, the sugar-coated happy ending no matter how unreal. After five reels of persuading on hero's part and the same extent of refusals on the heroine's side, you do imagine she'll eventually give up her crook associates and live happy ever after with her revenue officer-hero.

With this exception Wm. B. Brush's offering runs true to form with the usual intrigue connected with the effort of a crook hand to smuggle in certain crown jewels. Some very attractive and interesting locations greatly alleviate the triteness of the plot and the sequences occurring in and around Havana Harbor have sufficient pictorial appeal to make up for the weak material. Many of the scenes are aboard a private yacht or on the steamer, with the smuggling business made considerably more interesting through the surroundings in which it happens.

The plot consists of very much the same incidents with the jewels passing from hand to hand in a succession of mystery bits that fail to build up any very definite suspense for the climax. The incident of the candy box in which the girl crook attempts to get the gems in by placing them in the candies and giving the box to a steamer acquaintance, that suspicion may be averted, is a rather clever twist though never convincing. Some action occurs in the course of the story though there is nothing very conspicuous.

J. P. McGowan has a pleasing personality and they'll like his work as the revenue officer who realizes too late that the girl crook loves him. Helen Holmes has a rest from her serial thrillers as the girl. She also does good work and the remainder of the cast is well suited.

STORY: Helen Morgan is one of a band sent to smuggle in some crown jewels. They are shadowed by Burke, a revenue officer, secretly loved by Helen. Helen refuses to listen to Burke's plea to give up the game but he does not realize, until she is killed in an attempt to save his (Burke's) life that Helen really loved him.

Has Angles That Can Be Exploited to Bring Them In

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is first rate material for certain audiences. They like this type of crook melodrama with the jewel smuggling plot. It is more or less of the regulation formula but there are other interesting angles, such as pictorial appeal, and pleasing players, that make it a better attraction than it might otherwise have made. If you know your folks like this sort of entertainment, you have sufficient to talk about to get them interested. Helen Holmes is well known and where she has gained a following for her dare-devil stunts in serials, you will certainly attract them with her name. Tell them she plays the part of a girl crook who smuggles crown jewels into the country. Catchlines will give a further idea of the story. J. P. McGowan has made some pictures previous to this. You might also get them interested in him.

William DeMille Prod.
"THE WORLD'S APPLAUSE"
Paramount

DIRECTOR .................. William DeMille
AUTHOR ..................... Clara Beranger
SCENARIO BY ................ Clara Beranger
CAMERAMAN .................. L. Guy Willy

AS A WHOLE......Consists of situations and atmosphere intended to provide visual appeal but that is as far as it gets

STORY......Artificial and quite theatrical; flavored with sensational bits that will make it popular with a certain crowd

DIRECTION......Very good as far as production goes and usually handles story with good judgment but ending is too long arriving

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Excellent
LIGHTINGS ................... Good

PLAYERS......Lewis Stone and Bebe Daniels featured with Stone doing his usual good work and Miss Daniels a suitable but not beautiful Corinne d'Alys; others Kathryn Williams and Adolphe Menjou

CHARACTER OF STORY......Star seeking publicity is cause of man's death at the hands of his jealous wife

Probably because there is a moral to it the unpleasant bits in "The World's Applause" will have to be excused but it does seem unfortunate that they have to wade so deeply into scandal and sensation providing incidents in general, to get to it. Before you finally learn the lesson of this film—that success is not measured by the amount of prominence you attain—you are treated to some mighty intimate scenes in which a popular stage favorite is the sensuous, central figure. She is very deliberately sought by a famous portrait artist, a married man, who plans his seduction in elaborate style. Of course he has a studio establishment which figures prominently in his scheme and the very innocent young moth runs headlong into the flame heedless of the warning of her manager, who really loves her. The aggravating thing about these petty publicity seekers is that you are expected to accept their sugar-wouldn't-melt-in-their-mouth attitude for the real thing.

But this Corinne d'Alys spoils it all, or the title writer does it for her, when she admits that her would-be lover will give her everything but "a narrow gold band." The titles, incidentally, are very bad. There is one in which the true lover warns the girl that the artist wants her to pose for him so that "he can see more of her." The titles are quite off color in many similar instances. This one particularly seemed to strike the Rivoli audience as a thoroughly fine humorous touch.

William DeMille is following closely in the footsteps of his brother, Cecil, when it comes to making pictures with plenty of pictorial appeal and colorful atmosphere. In this respect the picture is interesting and should satisfy. From a story angle, it is all a matter of taste. Where they like this theatrical, sensational stuff, it is all very nice but where they want clean, wholesome stories, it may be different.

Bebe Daniels handles the role of Corinne adequately but she never gives the impression of being sufficiently beautiful to have "The World's Applause." Lewis Stone is always capable but deserves a more sensible role. The cast, on the whole, is suitable.

Story: John Elliot's new star, Corinne d'Alys, is swept off her feet by sudden success. She accepts the attentions of Townsend, an artist, the husband of Elliot's sister, who paints her portrait. Townsend is accidentally killed by his jealous wife and Elliot is arrested. His sister, realizing Elliot loves Corinne, commits suicide, leaving a confession which clears Elliot and cures Corinne of her craving for publicity.

Can Be Exploited Easily—Be Careful of Your Family Trade

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Undoubtedly there are exhibitors who will want to get this one because it will appeal to their particular clientele and there are a good many people who will be thoroughly well satisfied with the picture because it contains the sort of atmosphere and situations that they like best. Stories of theatrical life always appeal to a big majority and this one should prove no exception to the rule.

Nevertheless "The World's Applause" is hardly suited to a family clientele and while there are no flagrant offensive bits, there are several very definite suggestions that will make it unsuitable to such an audience. It has plenty of exploitation angles to be taken advantage of by exhibitors who want to play it and get their people interested.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......5,613 feet

"Truxton King," one of George Barr McCutcheon’s Graustark stories, provides a much better vehicle for John Gilbert than any of his recent releases and the picture, as a whole, is entertaining and quite worthy of consideration. Although the idea isn’t essentially original, since these comic opera themes have made frequent appearances on the screen of late, still Jerome Storm has handled it nicely and the result is satisfying.

The plot is very much like its predecessors with the opposing faction of a mythical kingdom planning the downfall of the party in power and like “The Dictator,” there is a Yankee hero who spoils all the plans of the enemy, fights off a small army by himself and receives the usual reward—the hand of the heroine. All the elements popular with this type of story are to be found in “Truxton King” and besides the intrigue and plotting of the enemy, the adventures of the Yankee hero and the customary romantic angle, there is a comedy bit now and then that aims to provide a humorous strain. It is in this respect that the feature is weakest.

The comedy business is provided solely by a corpulent player representing a tourist guide, who tries hard to furnish some laughs, but they usually miss fire. Incidentally it looks very suspicious—the introduction of this guide who is one of Cook’s men with his cap displayed throughout the picture with the band reading Cook’s Guide. Fox seems to be going in heavy for this advertising in his pictures of recent release and it is more than likely that exhibitors will soon start to kick about it. If the advertising isn’t intentional, there is no good reason for the publicity that Cook is given.

Storm has given the story a good production and the encounter between the two factions has been well staged. The shots were taken at night with searchlights providing splendid lighting effects. They shoot some of the scenes of the approaching troops from a ditch. There’s a good thrill in this. John Gilbert finally has something more suited to his ability and the supporting cast is good.

Story: Truxton King, an American, is suspected of being a spy by the guardians of young Prince Robin. They find later that he is his friend when he saves the life of Robin in an attack brought by the opposing faction. How King saves the day and wins Robin’s Aunt Lorraine, completes the story.

Has Satisfying Qualities and Should Appeal to Them

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

A good many audiences will be pleased with "Truxton King" because it contains a suitable variety of entertaining elements that will make it an appealing number. For John Gilbert’s admirers let them know that this is the best picture of all his recent releases and in case they have been disappointed in the past this will help to reestablish him.

If you know they happen to like these comic opera entertainments, on the plan of the recent Wallace Reid picture, "The Dictator," you can count on satisfying them with "Truxton King." Use George Barr McCutcheon’s name with the title because if they have read his Graustark novels they’ll want to see this picture. Let them know that Ruth Clifford is the star’s leading woman and that young Mickey Moore has a prominent part.

Short Stuff

“The Oregon Trail”—Universal

Type of production..................... Historical serial in 15 chapters

This is the third of Universal’s historical serials dealing with the settling of the United States. The first, “Winners of the West,” dealt with the Santa Fe Trail and the settling of California; the second, “In the Days of Buffalo Bill,” dealt with the Overland Trail and this, “The Oregon Trail” deals with the settling and winning of the Oregon territory for the United States. The same star and director appear in this serial as in the preceding two; Art Accord and Edward Laemmle, respectively. The story and scenario have been written, from American history, by Robert Dillon with the assistance of historical societies. The first two chapters reviewed this week are extremely interesting, from a historical angle as well as being filled with incidents of exciting nature.

Louise Lorraine is seen in the leading feminine role as the daughter of Velasquez, the first white man to settle in the Oregon territory. She shows dramatic ability. The supporting cast includes Duke R. Lee, Ruth Royce, Jim Corey, Sidney De Grey, Bart Law, Grace Moclean and Dick Carter. Also should be mentioned the work of a wonderful collie dog, referred to as Rex Accord.

There should be a wonderful opportunity to tie-up with schools in this one and the press book issued by Universal should help you a great deal. History is easily assimilated in picture form and special school children’s matinees should go over well.

“Just a Little Late Club”—Better Day Pict.—Second Nat’l Pictures

Type of production.....................1 reel Bruce Barton Editorial

“Just a Little Late Club” is decidedly different from the average one reeler, in that it is neither a comedy, nor scenic, and offers a change to the movie going public. It is a picturization of an editorial by Bruce Barton, its theme dealing with young Mr. Just-a-Little Late, and with his rival Mr. Spry, who is always just a little early. There may be some who will object to a preachment, even in sugar-coated form, but it should be, in the main, entertain, and there are quite a few laughs distributed throughout the reel. Better see this first and judge for yourself.

Pathe Review No. 6

Type of production.....................1 reel magazine

An interesting feature of this issue of Pathe’s Review No. 6 are some very well-tinted night scenes showing Japanese fishermen in boats lighted by torches, fishing by means of coromants. Each fisherman handles about twenty birds, pulling the strings attached to the birds’ throats so that they cannot swallow the fish they catch. Another feature that will prove interesting is an oriental dance that is seen first in actual rhythm and then in slow motion. The colored footage entitled “Riders of the Red Sands” gives a glimpse into the actual home of desert sheiks, including a battle with shields and swords.

Screen Snapshots No. 19

Type of production.....................1 reel fan magazine

Although the scenes in this issue are, of necessity, not new they will probably prove none the less interesting to picture fans. A visit to Rudolph Valentino’s former bungalow at Hollywood comes first, then Mary and Doug returning to the coast after a visit to New York. Director Cecil De Mille and his cast are next glimpsed making the Roman orgy scenes in “Manslaughter”; Theda Bara plays “Pung Chow” and golf; Thomas Ince explains the story of “The Hottentot” to Madge Bellamy; and Jackie Coogan wins an automobile race. Fans will like it.

“Yellow Handkerchief”—Tales of Fish Patrol—Universal

Type of production.....................2 reel drama

This is another of Jack London’s “Tales of the Fish Patrol” starring Jack Mulhall as Charley Le Grant, and with Louise Lorraine as the wail of the water front. Edward Kull has directed from a scenario by Anthony Goldsworthy.

The punch in this story comes in the last few feet when LeGrant traps the entire gang of pursuing Chinnams, headed by “Yellow Handkerchief,” Jim Wang, in a huge fishing net. The shot showing the men entangled in the net is exceedingly novel. The rest of the tale is interesting and will hold the attention.

“Colonel Heeza Liar’s Treasure Island”—Bray—Hodkinson

Type of production.....................1 reel cartoon comedy

This is a clever little reel combining the little cutout cartoon of Colonel Heeza Liar with actual photographs of the artist and the staff of the art department. The little figure is exceedingly real and the manner in which the entire action is handled makes extremely interesting material. The Colonel hears the boys reading about a desert island that contains treasure and he sets sail for the island in a bottle. The cannibal chief tries very hard to cook him but the Colonel escapes and dives off a cliff only to be swallowed by a fish which after a supposed lapse of time is caught by the artist and his friend who are on a vacation. They are much surprised to see the Colonel and hear about his adventures.

“Dog Sense”—Cameo—Educational

Type of production.....................1 reel comedy

Director Fred Hibbard has made in “Dog Sense” a very entertaining little comedy with the assistance of two very clever bull pups, a flock of cats and a cute toddling kiddle. The plot is but a thread, but if it were even less, it would not be missed as the almost human dog makes up for it. There is some very funny business with his master’s pipe which the dog smokes with evident enjoyment. When the other pup steals the pipe and endeavors to do the same, the first dog rudely takes it away from him. But the pup, disregarding his interference boredly blows the mouthful of smoke he still retains in his older brother’s face. It is a clean, amusing and thoroughly enjoyable offering, and is the best reel seen so far under the Cameo banner.
Short Stuff

"Hoboes De Luxe"—Universal
Type of production........................................1 reel comedy

This is an amusing one-reeler featuring Neeley Edwards as the extremely polite hobo and his side partner Bert Roach at his valet. The opening is good, showing Edwards dreaming of a wonderful dinner served on silver platters and his awakening under a tree with the odor of mullein stew in the air. The story written and directed by William Watson tells of the tramps' adventures in a missing husband's rich father mixup. There are quite a few laughs in the offering.

"Colonel Heeza Liar and the Ghost"—Bray—Hodkinson
Type of production........................................1 reel cartoon comedy

This time Colonel Heeza Liar, the little animated cartoon cutout has a scrap with the artist because he doesn't want to work at night. But the artist says that he must stay, so the Colonel tries to get revenge by dumping a jar of paint on him. Then when the boys are having a lunch the Colonel jumps into the prop room and climbing into a toy balloon which he has draped with chilton he proceeds to scare the boys. How he succeeds in frightening them and also a passing policeman provides the balance of the action. There is some very clever stuff in this one, which should prove a pleasing addition to almost any program.

"Jenkins and the Mutt"—Bruce—Educational
Type of production........................................1 reel scenic-drama

"Jenkins and the Mutt" is the second of the new Robert C. Bruce series called "Wilderness Tales." The little drama, played against a background of western hills, country roads and rippling mountain streams, is enacted by Alice Ellis, Irving Keneedy and a most appealing dog. Jenkins is a hen-pecked clerk and Mrs. Jenkins is the hen-pecker. One evening she refuses to give her husband his dinner unless he loses the dog. He tries in every possible way to do so, but the morning comes with the Mutt still at his side. Having been away all night, he is afraid to face his wife and so the night stretches into months and Jenkins is still wandering. Finally, worn and tired, with the dog still at his heels, he returns, only to find that his wife has moved away and left no address. The photography is exceedingly good. Some of the scenes have been tinted.

"Once Over"—Hal Roach—Pathe
Type of production........................................1 reel comedy

The title of this Paul Parrott comedy gives no indication that the action takes place in a barber shop where Paul is learning the gentle art of being a tonsorial expert. A bride comes out of a face mask treatment with her nose entirely out of shape, but seeing the pretty manicurist through the frame of a glassless mirror she goes away happy. Not so her husband, who returns to the barber shop to clean it up. But Paul saves the day by throwing him into a barber chair and raising it to the ceiling.

"Pop Tuttle, Detekative"—Film Booking Offices
Type of production........................................1 reel comedy

Dan Mason's latest Plum Center comedy is "Pop Tuttle, Detekative," a first rate rube sheriff comedy with some familiar gags but also some new ones. Dan Mason buys himself a "professional detective make-up" and starts out to get a thief. How Tillie, the depot agent, captures the crook and Pop gets the credit offers some pretty fair laughs.

Pathe Review No. 5
Type of production........................................1 reel magazine

A most interesting subject in this issue of the Review deals with "The Thrill Box" mechanism in which the Army Air Service tests recruits' flying ability. It is doubtful if one will still wish to fly after seeing what airmen have to be able to stand. Then there are some very pretty tinted shots of the Connecticut River, an interesting electrical experiment in the Popular Science section, and colored scenes of the Sahara's population.

"Boyhood Days"—Century—Universal
Type of production........................................2 reel comedy

Young Buddy Messinger is seen to good advantage in this, the first of his comedies under the Century banner. Two clever monkeys help to get some laughs. Buddy loves Alice and Buddy's father who owns the town store loves Alice's mother. There are a few titles that could be eliminated with good results but the offering as a whole is amusing and should please the average audience, especially if Buddy has found favor with them either in "The First" or other vehicles.

"The Nuisance"—C. C. Burr—Hodkinson
Type of production........................................2 reel comedy

Some good audience stuff is contained in this two reeler which stars Mary Anderson, Raymond McKe and Charles Murray, and has been directed by Gregory La Cava. The continuity is somewhat choppy, jumping from one sequence to another that is not related at times, but in the main the comedy should get over well. There is some funny business in a haunted house that has sliding panels and all sorts of trick apparatus that is worked by switches in the cellar. The hero has a bet that he cannot stay there overnight. A cat gets in the cellar and after experimenting with the switches finally manages to set fire to a can of dynamite and blows up the place.

Earlier in the picture there is a sequence which some may object to. A bowl of goldfish is overturned and its contents empty into Murray's trousers. Incidentally, he is talking to the Minister's wife. Some of the fish slide out on the floor and the family cat jumps up and sticks its head inside the trousers, obviously after the fish.

Pathe Review No. 4
Type of production........................................1 reel screen magazine

Scenic shots illustrating Bryant's poem "The Death of the Flowers" open this issue of Pathe's Review. Next comes an interesting funeral filmed in Canton, China. Bonnie McLeary, sculptress, next models a tiny figure. The New York Aquarium again provides interesting material for the camera in the shape of Puffer fish. Colored scenes of modern Athens complete the issue.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE TRADE AN OPEN LETTER FROM FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN
AND BEVERLY BAYNE

Hotel Majestic
West Seventy-second St. at Central Park
New York

Friends:

We are preparing to resume our moving picture activities, because we feel that better times are in sight and that this is the psychological moment to combine our picture triumph of former years with our recent record, dramatic and vaudeville, box office successes. We feel positive that our next picture — which will be begun when this advertisement goes to press — will prove that we have not only our picture following of other days, but also hundreds of thousands of new friends made by our intimate personal contact with dramatic and vaudeville audiences.

It is a matter of record that our legitimate stage tour under the management of Oliver Morosco was a "landslide".

It is also a certified fact that during the two years of our engagements on the Keith and Orpheum Circuits we broke more house records for attendance than were ever before broken by any one act and for this reason in some cases we were held over for the second week. Obviously, these successes have broadened our clientele and increased our following by many millions of people throughout the entire country.

Our pictures will be so constructed that the fifth reel can be played on the stage with a setting identical with that on the film as a novel form of personal appearance. We will appear with the film in this manner (assisted by two of the other artists in the picture cast) for just one week in each theatre in each of twelve key cities. We would like to do more but this is all the time available between pictures.

Yours for prosperity,

Francis Bushman

changes Not Members of Hays Organization Expected to Take Advantage of Uniform Contract

It seems to be the opinion of responsible exhibitors that those independent exchanges who are not affiliated with the Hays organization will not use the uniform contract which is ratified by the T. O. C. C. and M. P. T. O. of New York on Tuesday.

At that meeting, W. H. Linton, of Utica, definitely indicated what might be expected from the independents. It can be stated that the tacit rules that they will come into line. The Hays organization has been particularly careful to impress the minds of the exhibitor congresses that as an organization, it does not guarantee that its various members will use the contract. At the same time, it is held that the uniform contract contains so many provisions which will rebound to the advantage of both distributor and exhibitor, that it would seem logical for all of the releasing organizations to take advantage of it.

It is admitted that the Hays organization holds no control over right units and, in fact, several of the national distributors' "play date is pay date" clause expected to perform all kinds of feints. Billy Brandt pointed out at

Lasky In; Dalton Due Today

Lasky arrived from the east on Saturday. Dorothy Dalton is due today to work on "Fog Bound."

Praise for Hays

"Jimmy" Walker paid a fine tribute to Will H. Hays on Friday when the uniform contract was signed. Walker said Hays had embodied his ideas in carrying on with the exhibitor units. "The fact that he added," the former exhibitor organization had decayed. He said that Hays could not be dropped the whole mat- and eliminated all reform programs, and that the exhibitors at the time could do nothing because of the pressure of aggressive leadership.

R. A. Rowland talking. "I'd rather pay $50,000 for the right to a good picture than to take a chance with an unknown vehicle. It's a gamble any way you take it; but it is less of a gamble that way than any other."

Which may be true. But which incidentally leads to existing high values demanded by owners of such materials. Present prices for picture rights make 1920 figures look pikerish. But they keep on paying them just the same. Warner's deal with Belasco for three pictures runs into a quarter of a million. But it may be worth it. Belasco's name means a lot. But the producers are asked $50,000 for almost anything in the way of a stage success and "The Fool" was held high by the Selwyns that Griffith passed it up—and Bill Fox grabbed it. So there you are. Happen to know of an incident where one producer, sordidly for securing one of his best directors, bid up the price for a certain play $50,000 over the price originally set. And they call it a business.

Famous Players keeps out of the competition. Just won't pay these sort of prices. May go to $15,000 on special occasions, but usually pay less. Claim they put the money in the negative. Incidentally the "The Covered Wagon" cost over $500,000. Highest price ever put into picture by Famous. Touted as a knockout. We'll see.

Business Better

December Figures $1,340,459 Over Those for November—Improvement Over 1921, Too

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Admission taxes totaling $6,825,249.00 were collected by the Government in December, according to figures made public by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. This was an increase of $1,340,459 over the collections of $5,484,790.03 reported for the month of November, and an increase of more than the $6,689,702.83 collected during December, 1921.

Collections from the seating tax on theatres during the month amounted to $35,207.24, as compared with $24,245.96 in November, 1922, and $34,991.16 in December, 1921.

The December totals definitely indicate that business throughout the country is on the up-grade. The November taxes were $88,000 over the October collections. Now the December taxes indicate a substantial increase over those for November.

Spectacle to Trace History Since Columbus—The President May Attend

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—A special train is being planned by the American Historical Review and Motion Picture Exposition to bring to Los Angeles for the premiere of the event next summer the President, members of his official family, the diplomatic corps from Latin America, a Congressional delegation, the United States Marine Band, and the director general of the Pan American Union. These men and their wives will be the guests of Los Angeles and the expositions from the time they leave Washington until they arrive home.

Plans for this train, which will run to Los Angeles and return, via many of the principal cities, are now being worked out by Frank B. Davison, director general of the exposition. Davison, with Mayor George E. Cryer visited Washing- on in December and extended the invitations.

The history of the New World will be shown in pageantry, from the discovery of this continent by Columbus until the proclamation of the Monroe Doctrine. It is planned also to film this story, filling in the series of pageants with greater detail to give it continuity.

First Producer: "Where were you this morning?"
Second Producer: "Where I am every morning; at the bank.

HEARD ON BROADWAY

Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, widow of the former publisher of the New York World. Planning a big party. Calls on Eddie Darling; Keith offices, to secure talent. Darling reports back that he can get the "greatest bet" of the day, better than any opera star. "He's having trouble with his company," he went on, "so you will have to invite him as a guest. Then he and his wife will dance for you and later you can give him a souvenir and put a check in it." Mrs. Pulitzer agrees. "And who is he?" she asks. "Valentino," responded Darling, all enthused. Mrs. Pulitzer was silent a moment. Business of thinking. "And who?" she asked after a few moments, "is Valentino?"

RATTLING THE SKELETON

Frank Tichenor claims that he prepared the first insert that ever went into a trade paper in his business. Back in April 1914, boasting "The Little Rebel."

There'll probably be some heavy mail following this. From the other contestants.

WATER STUFF

In Morosco's production of "Lady Butterfly" they have a unique effect of the boat sailing out to sea. The reproduction of the water has puzzled many old timers in the audience. It's done by projecting a moving picture from back stage. Stuff shot along the Mediterranean, but projected at a trick angle. Gives very unusual effect. Producer is also the projector. Gets $100 a week for his film and his work. Worth it.

EXHIBITORS POW WOW

Scheduled for Chicago in May. And pretty soon all the scrapping will start. Just as it always has. Frank Rembusch will be heard from; so will others, including perhaps John Evans of Philly; and possibly Al Black, if he gets in the game in time. Meanwhile "they say" Syd Cohen may not listen to the pleadings of his friends who want him to run again. But will withdraw. To develop the Theater Owners Distributing Corp. Which will leave "Al" Steffes and others a free field. For the presidency.

DOUG'S IDEAS

Interesting. He believes, so they say, that his pictures can be distributed without a regular machine. That he can do without one and save a lot of money. Has other radical ideas. All of which does not add to the gayety of United Artists. First thing you know something'll happen in that organization. And Doug's ideas may blossom. But meanwhile Doug takes a lot of big rentals for "Robin Hood." And the well known squawk of Mister Ex-hi-bi-tor is heard throughout the land. If Doug ever puts his idea into execution—boy, what might happen?

By the way, Doug's next will be in color.

MONKEYING AROUND

The next time J. Parker Read takes his pet monkey on a train he is going to allow himself an extra half hour. To make sure the monk gets aboard in time.

WHAT'S AN ImitATION?

H. B. Egg, owner of Safety First Theater, Dumb Bell, Ariz. All pictures looked alike to him. $7.50 was the limit and that took in "Dr. Jack" and "Robin Hood."

Came to Denver. Sees Harry Nolan. Says he, "what's your price on Chaplin's? I can't do business with your salesman."

Sees a Danger

F. H. Elliott Says Underwriters Are Determined to Do Away With Inflammable Film

Giving specific data relative to measures designed to eliminate the use of inflammable film by organizations of fire chiefs and underwriters, Frederick H. Elliott, former N. A. F. I. secretary and now vice-president of the Feaster Mfg. Co., says a nation-wide campaign is under way to compel use of non-inflammable stock. He says the slow burning stock will make the expense of the industry because it costs more to make.

According to Elliott, the Fire Marshall's Ass'n of North America is backing a Congressional bill to keep inflammable film out of inter-state commerce after Jan. 1, 1925; the Inter- nal Ass'n of Fire Chiefs intends waging a state campaign along those lines; while in San Francisco exchanges cannot operate in buildings more than two stories in height. Elliott blames the agitation largely on the vast amount of film on sale in department stores during the holidays.

MARY MILES MINTER
in
"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"
Supported by ANTONIO MORENO

Adapted by Will M. Ritchey from the novel by John Fox Jr., and the play by Eugene Walter Directed by Charles Maigne

Released April 29th

FAMOUS for years as a novel, a play and a song, this immortal classic of Kentucky's mountains is now produced in a manner worthy of its great heart-story. Millions have known and loved it. It has had thousands of imitations, but none has come near it in genuine appeal.

Miss Minter has the best role of her career, and the great supporting cast, headed by Antonio Moreno, includes Ernest Torrence, Edwin Brady and Cullen Tate. This will be a really big picture. A special photoplay edition of the book will be issued.

Too tough for me. Thought you might listen to reason. Salesmen ask $15 etc." Nolan says "Sorry Mr. Egg, but that's the minimum on Chaplin's. Can't do any better." Says he "Why should I pay you $15 for Chaplin when I can buy Billy West for $5?"

"Well," says Nolan. "One is the genuine article and the other is imitation."

"Yes," says Egg, "that may be so, but my crowd don't know the difference."

(Neither does Egg).

THE MUSIC PROBLEM

Interesting idea developed. By M. J. Mintz and Jimmie Bradford. To help the many, many orchestras whose music library is not what it should be. They have developed the thematic music cue sheet. Which gives the leader a few bars of the appropriate selections. When the hero saves the heroine and wallops the villain. Then if the musician hasn't got that particular piece, he replaces it from what he has. And what's more interesting. The cue sheet defines what music is taxable. And what isn't. So Mister Ex-hi-bi-tor knows where he is.

Famous Players’ Deal Under Way

With Ben Blumenthal for Ownership of Hamilton Corp.

It is understood that Famous Players have started negotiations with

Ben Blumenthal looking for the control of the Hamilton Theatrical Corp.

Arrangements will probably be concluded this week not only with Blumenthal but with Samuel Rachmann

as well and when final arrangements are consummated, Famous will own fully one-third of the entire entterprise.

Hamilton was the unit formed for the exchange of German-made pictures in countries outside of Germany. The Negri pictures made here are to be “presented” by Hamilton as will those of Ernst Lubitsch.

Charnas Buys Two

More on Valentino

The Sunday World credited a Famous Players official as saying that the company was ready to meet

Rodrigue, Valentino with “every possible co-operation.” “As to his consumption,” this official was quoted, as always have been and are now regarded to discuss and readjust his contract temporarily with his present day popularity.” When Adolph

Lukor was asked whether such statements reflected the truth, he said they did but in relation to the World report that the company might attempt to engage Valentino, now playing in Detroit, he had no comment to make.

Arthur Butler Graham, Valentino’s

attorney, characterized the World

ticle as “Famous Players propaganda.” He said the dispute was not based on matters of compensation and said he would welcome any attempt to punish Valentino for concealing the facts, as the World indicated might be tried.

T. O. C. C. and F. I. L. M. Club Will Probably Settle Arbitration at

Special Meeting Tomorrow

Plans were practically completed yesterday for a special meeting of committees representing the T. O.

C. C. and the F. I. L. M. Club to be held tomorrow morning at which a new set of rules covering arbitration in Greater New York will be drawn up to the satisfaction of both parties.

It is assumed that the controversy which has existed for several weeks will be finally eliminated and rules of sufficient elasticity prepared so that trouble in the future will be avoided. It is understood that the F. I. L. M. Club is in accord with the provisions of the uniform contract as ratified at last Friday’s meetings.

Members of the exchange’s organizaare vested methods of arbitration in the F. I. L. M. Club.

Oppose Percentages

English Exhibitors Frown on That

Method—Expected to Change

Attitude, However

By ERNEST W. FREDMAN

The Film Banner and M. P. News, London

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—A good deal of discussion has cropped up during the last few days upon the question of sharing terms. Many of the branches of the

C. E. A. have discussed the matter and signified their intention of resisting any demand to play pictures on a percentage basis.

Several leading exhibitors in Newcastle, Birmingham, Bristol and London, have expressed themselves strongly upon this matter, but at the same time here is little doubt that when a big picture comes along, there will be plenty of exhibitors quite wi-ling to show it on a percentage basis.

The question of sharing terms has been simmering for some time, but with the number of big pictures that are assembling over here it is doubtful if there is any other way of handling the situation in view of the fact that exhibitors will not pay the prices that the renter demands to enable him to get an adequate return.

“The Voice from the Minaret”
1st Natl—Strand

TRIBUNE—We had the feeling all through "The Voice from the Minaret" that we were in a studio.  Miss Talmadge seems more mature than ever she has seemed before, and she is a great actress. It is a joy to watch her; so much so, in fact, that we do not care what she is doing of whether she is doing it with scenery or on stage as has been the case in a Shakespearean production (used to be) and Eugene O’Neill is perhaps the most pleasing actor on the screen. What we just said of Miss Talmadge is true of him.

MORNING WORLD—The picture is as delightfully photographed in its individual views, including close-ups by the half dozen of Miss Talmadge in mourning dress, as anything brought here late, and it is a dramatic fizzle. It has been made at quite an enormous expense and it does not show signs of having progressed one inch in the development of cinema drama.

DAILY NEWS—Perhaps the least worth while of Norma Talmadge’s recent pictures. The star’s talents appeared to us to be wasted in a picture of this kind, the kind being English society drama of the slightly soiled variety.  It has as its one redeeming feature Miss Talmadge. Miss Talmadge, we think, could make almost any picture possible.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—It is fortunate in having so fine an actress as Norma Talmadge to grace the leading role. In scenes of emotion, which are so easy to overdo, she pulls up the rope of her feelings tightly; and with a firm hand, never letting the situation get theatrical.

TIMES— It is sufficient to report, first, that apparently Miss Talmadge’s voice is still continuous,  the story is as judiciously romantic and reverently conventional as it was and some thrills for many and lead no one into paths unapproved by the Puritans.

MAIL—A powerfully dramatic and well-acted climax saves * * * "The Voice from the Minaret," at the Strand this week, from what would otherwise be a conventional and somewhat tame love story.

AMERICAN—* * * It registered as an interesting and absorbing picture.  * The desert and the Damascus accessories were perfectly photographed, and throughout the picture the eye was titillated. Miss Talmadge once again displayed her emotional abilities.

GLOBE—Mr. Joseph Schenck has produced * * * "The Voice from the Minaret," in his customary generous and excellently lavish fashion. He has, as usual, assembled the very best literary, acting and musical talent available. In this particular instance, however, the result is on the whole disappointing.

EVENING WORLD—Miss Talmadge hasn’t for a long, long time been seen to better advantage than she is in "The Voice From the Minaret." * * * Anyway, it’s well worth a visit to the Strand.

SUN—* * * May be counted a successful effort from the studio in public. On critical grounds, however, the picture has a very very banal and old-fashioned story.*

POST—Without Norma Talmadge "The Voice from the Minaret" would be a total disappointment. * * * The cast fortunately is not as wonderful, but Miss Talmadge is worthy of better pictures, such as her previous release, "Smiling Through."

"Java Head"—F. P.-L.
Rivoli

TRIBUNE—To us the characters were transferred from Joseph Herengraber’s story straight to the screen without being damaged in the least. It all seemed very real to us. George Melford has in some way kept an intriguing air of romance clinging to the characters, which one seldom finds in a picture made from a familiar story. Every minute of it was a delight to us, and "Java Head" is one of the best directed things we have seen in a long time.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The author is represented by a quite conventional story told in an equally conventional way, so that the result is another product from the film mimeograph.  * The piece is laid in Salem, Mass., in the late ’40s, which offers opportunity for picturesque settings and costumes.

MORNING WORLD—* * * Colorful melodrama of a mariner’s life, and although it is made up of the usual conventional screen stuff its characters seem generally to have a purpose in view, and the play is kept up a great deal of the time.

HERALD—The outstanding feature * * * is Leatrice Joy. Although her surroundings are worthy enough in themselves to overwhelm any individual effort, she appears in bold relief.  * "Java Head," as a whole, is a splendid picture—beautiful to behold and charged with drama.

GLOBE—* * * Entertaining and interesting. At times it approaches greatness, but is far from being in a class as a motion picture that "Java Head" was as a novel.  * just a fairly good motion picture, and one which will probably pass quickly into oblivion.

TELEGRAHAM—George Melford, director and Joseph Herengraber, author, make ideal team. **

EVENING WORLD—The cast is excellent. * * * We singled out Miss Joy’s characterization of the Chinese Princess as being especially fine.

SUN—George Melford * * * has caught the spirit of the original story and in period absolutely, and by the simultaneous and unfailing sense of tempo * * * he has made it one of the judicious film triumphs of the year, capable of making any doubts of Thomasine screen the whole over again.

Censor Bill Up in Missouri

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Jefferson City, Mo.—The Committee of Fifty of St. Louis has presented its censorship bill to the legislature. The reformers claim that the measure has the backing of numerous Protestant and Catholic religious organizations throughout the state. It would create a commission of two men and one woman, each to be paid $3,000 a year, to review and censor all pictures produced or shown in Missouri.

Exhibitor-Distributors Plan Trips

Officials of the Theater Owners Dist. Corp. plan a number of trips in order to explain the plans of their organization to exhibitors in various parts of the country. There will be a meeting held in New Haven and in Boston shortly and later in the month, another in Detroit.

Signs with Lee-Bradford

J. A. Fitzgerald will direct four features a year for the Carl A. Theobald Prod. Co., of Dayton, Ohio, for distribution through Lee-Bradford. Production will be in Dayton. Fitzgerald and Theobald are at the Cloister for a few days.

“Hearts Aflame”—Metro Rialto

MORNING TELEGRAPH — Director Barker skillfully and with great climaxes combine with fire and flames to make a picture most dramatic.

AMERICAN—As a motion picture achievement, the fire was wonderful! The picture led up to it rather ramblingly, however.

EVE. JOURNAL—You will forget while you see “Hearts Aflame” at the Rialto Theater that in these astonishing (fire) scenes there must have been a cameraman or more about to photograph them. * * * The forest fire, of course, is the climax * * * but there are other sequences that set one’s nerves tingling. One is the spectacle of great trees crashing to the ground and another in the blowing up of a dam. * * *

MAIL—* * * forest fire * * * is thoroughly realistic and very thrilling.

But before coming to the “one big scene” the producers take you through several reels of backlogged action in order that they may have the length to feature the film.

EVE. WORLD—We thoroughly believe you’ll like “Hearts Aflame”—we did. In fact, we like it so well that we’re going to see the forest fire again some time. Reginald Barker has put into this picture of unusual cleverness, and the result is a story of a startling spectacle that makes one think, because of the true beauty, that forests were created to be burned and not cut down.

POST—The exciting forest fire scenes in the final reel are more than make up for whatsoever is lacking in the beginning of “Hearts Aflame” at the Rialto. The cast is good, too.

TRIBUNE—It is a very good story and one who is interested in trees and their preservation and forest fires and the “big outdoors” is going to be delighted with the picture.

The Bohemian Girl”—Amer. Releas.

Cameo

TELEGRAM—  is a poetic romance and about the best of the foreign cinemas ever shown here.

AMERICAN— * * The film version contains many good reasons for appealing to the twentieth century fan.

First and foremost, the cast is a superlative one, especially so far as the three leading women are concerned. * * *

SUN— * * Serves to introduce to American audiences Gladys Cooper, reigning English theatrical beauty, and Ivor Novello, destined to appear in D. W. Griffith’s next picture, and judging by the welcome they received yesterday, they have found a home from home on the American screen.

JACK HOLT

“The Tiger’s Claw”

By Jack Cunningham

Released May 6th

A strong love melodrama with real heart-interest.

Directed by Joseph Henabery

Some of the thrills are Holt’s fight with the tiger, his horseback leap over a fifteen-foot gap in a broken bridge; the dynamiting of the dam; the amazing flood scenes. Eva Novak and Aileen Pringle are in the cast.

A Paramount Picture
"Art" Conference

An "Art" conference is planned by Adolph Zukor in New York in the future in order to develop a series of artistic princes to which the industry can live up under which it can operate at times.

Zukor describes these standards as "that which guides producers in discovering their obligation toward the cultural development of the various people all over the world who rely on the screen for their principal recreation." It is planned to appoint an advisory board of well-known filmmakers and artists to award a series of prizes, in cash, which Zukor will offer to those "in the industry need development, says that as far as technique and artistic stabilization is concerned, industry has made extremely satisfactory progress.

Those who will attend the conference will be leading filmmakers, drama writers, artists, and critics.

D. Williams addressed the A. F. A., yesterday on the relations between film executives and their ad agencies. He touched upon distribution, in response to questions and one point stated that all of the cut rates and sales managers he had seen in the last two months said that the day of centralized distribution will arrive shortly. The higher costs are "a joke", he stated, and that the current distribution cost and what that raises a Chaplin or Pickford form cost about $50,000 to distribute, now cost about $250,000.

Minneapolis Exhibitors Disturbed over Two New Theatre Deals by Finkelstein and Ruben (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—In exhibitor circles, there is some uneasy feeling over the two new theatre deals made by Finkelstein and Ruben.

The acquisition of the Rialto by F. and R. was unexpected in view of the fact that S. Reisman was understood to have ‘other parties under consideration. The Rialto seats 800 and is located at Chicago Ave. and Lake St. With reports that F. and R. were attempting to secure foreign film protection, talk of a producer’s booking combination has been revived here. In some quarters, it is said that Finkelstein and Ruben plan to invade the suburban districts.

Impressions of a Prominent Film Man on Touring the Country General Conditions

Following will be found the impressions of how business is throughout the country as obtained by a well known executive who has but recently visited the points mentioned:

After Harlan

The taking over of the Lynch houses by Famous caused a great deal of excitement in that territory and the exchanges are all up in the air. Every distributor and they had their men on the ground while I was there, all trying to see that their products did not suffer in the change made.

Famous started a plan to unload many of the "lions" such as selling (I) the houses at Orlando, Fla., Lakeland, Fla., and several other small houses, to Neil Stark, St. Augustine. However, they are holding on to the winners such as Tampa, Miami, St. Petersburg and Jacksonville.

In the Courts
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Pipestone, Minn.—Jerry Hines, former owner of the Orpheum and Grin, was convicted last week by a jury at Pipestone of arson in the third degree. The charge grew out of Hines’ alleged attempt to burn the Orpheum, valued at $80,000, Nov. 14, 1921.

According to the prosecution, Hines hired a man to burn the theater, for which he had paid $20,000 in cash, and upon which he owed $60,000, drawing interest at 10%.

William A. White & Sons have filed an application in the Supreme Court to compel William Fox to testify before a grand in a suit against the Fox Film Corp., and others for $13,000 for services in arranging with the American Bond & Mortgage Co. to execute a mortgage for $1,300,000 on the Fox Film plant between 56th and 57th streets and 9th and 10th avenues. The film company alleges that title to the property was taken by the Fox Film Realty Co.

Buffalo—Jay Berman has filed suit in the Supreme Court here against Joseph A. Court and R. J. Wood for $15,000, alleging breach of contract. Jerusalem, alleged to be the owner of the Ellen Terry of which Court is a stockholder and director, through the Woodburn Real Estate Co., headed by Wood, filed a suit to compel the Grand St. theater to him for one year and then brooke the agreement. In the contract Berman was to pay $7,200 year rent for the house with an option to buy for $65,000. Berman delivered $100 to Wood to bind the option.

Both Sides of Controversy
Recently F. H. Smith, owner of the Grand Theater, Thomasville, Ga., said he was being driven out of business by high rentals and taxation. The following are excerpts from a letter received from him:

Dear Danny:

Like your paper, exchange managers ask me to write the exchange. But when I tell on what I can afford, they laugh, but I don’t buy. Too many bars in the business, anywhere. Pretty well distributed too. But I am going to show ‘em and tell ‘em. Got enough to last about 60 days. Leave with a clean slate. High rentals. Bank put on home office. Say town of 8,000 should do so and so. Why? Because Capital is in it. Don’t fit small towns. You say may be we can change excessive taxation. We can. But we don’t. Enuff exhibitors to do it. Even in small towns. But you can’t buy. Too many "speckled yearlings." You know Bull. Maybe you don’t know "speckled yearlings." You would if you lived in the cattle country.

Keep hammering on taxes and rentals. Generally, Danny. Daniel. Exhibitors must look after their own and the public and rental, in their home town, is "moneymaking up." From Atlanta comes an unsigned letter written apparently by an exchange man writing to the other side of the controversy. The letter says that Thomas has been exhibiting pictures through arrangement with a charitable organization so that he has been paying no taxes to the Government; that the Woman’s Club was to receive whatever profits accrued but that there was no way in which they could check up. This letter says that if the whole truth were known, it would be found that the exchanges have been treating Smith fairly.

How’s Business?

Houston
All theaters are doing fair business but this town needs a new house badly. Understand that John Jones of Dallas, is going to build a house with 2,500 seats.

Dallas
Great for first runs at present. Last Sunday the following were playing—Melba—"Robin Hood." "Palace-Knightly." Old Mill—"One Exciting Night." Nut sed. The Capitol is going into a first run house which will add to the joys of the exchanges.

Oklahoma City
Business off—three first run houses fighting and everyone complaining. Boland has the Empress, with First Nat’l, Goldwyn and Fox and is doing the best business, but his house is a barn. Cooper has the Criterion new house and is slowly starving to death, the corporation changing hands three times in the last five months. Confidentially he is trying to make a deal with Boland to amalgamate as Boland would turn his house and new Orpheum playing Interstate vaudeville into a first run house on April 29th and opens with "The Christian." On the same date he closes his stock at the Liberty and goes into first run, so Cooper is in one hell of a jam. The other first run house, the Capitol, was built by Lynch as Boland left Famous out of that city for 16 months and now Famous is trying to unload to Cooper and if the deal goes through he will get together with Boland and they will close the house, Tulsa is a fair better town at present than Oklahoma.

Kansas City
Business here only fair. Exhibitors are howling bloody murder everywhere over prices and it is one constant battle. Hostetter is trying to put over a booking combine in this territory and at present he and Baker of Kansas City, control eleven key towns in this territory and they say what they are doing to the exchanges outside of Famous and First National is a shame. He is being forced to ask for Famous and First National and the others are helping to pay their prices.

Sheehan Expected Abroad
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
London—Winfield R. Sheehan is expected here in the late Spring.

Montreal Collects $176,765 Taxes
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Montreal—Total paid admissions at local theaters for September, October and November were 4,984,216. The revenue received by the city and the Province through the amusement tax totalled $176,765, half of which goes to the city for local charities and half to the Province for distribution under the Public Charities Act. The total patronage for 1922-1923 is estimated at 20,000,000 people. This is an increase over the last fiscal year of almost three millions and over the 1920-1921 total of five millions.

The Troubles of an Exhibitor

Split Lip, Nevada.

Dear Danny:

Seem the announcement in your radio, which, of course, is not to be shown in New York. He was living in New York to use when his shows didn’t run and I told him that Famous Fixers were a flock of German negroes he could probably buy dirt cheap.

I asked him to run the hotel New York and I told him Mr. tori had a pretty fair tavern where he could get accommodations if he piled his shirt and collar enough.

I told Clem to keep away from Seventh Avenue and he would along all right. I also warned him about buying Long Island and Woolworth Building.

Deny Receivership

In Petition Filed Against Select Pictures Corp.—Bankruptcy Proceedings Started

Late yesterday afternoon, George Learned Hand, of the U. S. District Court, dismissed the petition filed to have a receivership appointed as a result of a petition of involuntary bankruptcy filed against the Select Pictures Corp.

The petitioning creditors were: Graphic Photo Engraving Co., $484; A. H. Weiss, $171; and J. J. Ritch- ford, an employee of Select, $150.

Mark Haman, representing the Los Angeles Savings & Trust Co., and other creditors, opposed the receivership.

While it was impossible to obtain any statement from officials of the Selznick organization, it is understood that a reorganization plan had been determined upon early Friday morn- ing, for the purpose of continuing the business as a going concern and to ex- tend its activities on a broad scale.

"Evolution" Given Private Showing
A preview of "Evolution" an Urban release was held Thursday evening at the American Museum of Natural History. The picture deals with the history of the universe from the birth of the planets to the age of man. Shown in detail the different steps in the evolution of living creatures. It was produced by Dr. Raymond L. Dimars of the New York Zoological Society, written and edited by Dr. Benjamin C. Greenburg, a well-known high school teacher.

Mexico Upset

in future productions of the members of the Hays organization. On that understanding, it was decided to allow the flow of American pictures into Mexico to continue uninterrupted.
The late reports indicate that except two pictures has been made: "Excess of Merit," a Fox release and "The Agent," a Larry Semon comedy for Vitagraph. The contract entered upon by Woodle on behalf of the Hays organization stipulates, that unless producers discontinue the practice of holding up Mexicans and other Latin-Americans in an unfavorable light, American pictures will be kept out of the country. The Hays organization yesterday was without official advice regarding the two pictures.

Incorporations Increase
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Albany—A marked increase in the picture business in New York is indicated by the large number of new incorporations granted charters by the Secretary of State. During the past month 35 companies with a capitalization of $2,558,500 filed certificates of incorporation, compared to 31 companies, with a capitalization of $953,500 during January of last year.

Claims Church Is Injuring Theater
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Cleveland—The M. P. T. O. A., of Ohio, is back of a Salem exhibitor, who claims he is going "under" because he cannot compete with a church showing a regular picture program. Sam Bulllock asked the Film Board of Trade to withdraw their service from the church. The board refused, claiming that such action, in order to be effective, must be national. The Salem exhibitor, U. E. Rakeshaw, owner of the Grand, through his attorney, has asked for an injunction against the non-arts institution to keep it from showing theatrical films.

Praises Editorial
Gus Inglis Says Coast Conditions Are Proof of Thought on Negative Costs
Gus Inglis of Mills and Inglis, Los Angeles, in a letter to the editor of THE FILM DAILY says:
"I know you get lots of letters from the fellows here on the Pacific Coast complimenting you on your editorials and your work. If you will publish this, I am leaving for New York, but I want to say that I have a letter complimenting you on your editorial under the title of 'Negative Costs,' in your issue of January 2, 1923.
"I think this is an article that every motion picture producer should read and thoroughly digest, as you hit the nail on the head when you pointed out the fact that there are a few pictures that gross over $1,000,000. In talking to people connected with independent productions here I notice just what you say in your article— you all talk about a million dollar gross on their picture, but when the negative is fewer, prints and advertising paid for, the production put on the market and the summing up of it comes, the gross is almost always way below the million dollar mark.
"Articles such as the one you have written should make the producers think. I might further say that it should also be taken into consideration by some of the authors and the people who control rights to stage plays and books, because as a rule this is where the big figures come in. It looks to me that the cost of the story is the basis from the point of view of the producers figure their gross, and this is obviously all wrong. If all the trade journals would take up this subject that have so effectively touched upon, I am sure that the whole industry would see the whole industry a great deal of good. As you have pointed out more than once, it should be stopped, not just inside the industry rather than outside."

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Book Tie-up for "The Christian"

Goldwyn has made a tie-up for exploiting of "The Christian" with Grosset & Dunlap, publishers, who issue cheaper priced reprints of popular novels. The publishers are issuing a new edition of "The Christian," illustrated with stills and with a jacket illustrated from scenes.

"What is 'The Dangerous Age'?"

Cleveland—Local residents were asked to give their opinions as to what they regarded as "The Dangerous Age" of life as part of the exploitation on the attraction at the Allen. They were also asked to state the dangerous age in their particular line of business. The interviews brought out many differences of opinion and the prominence of the individuals who allowed themselves to be quoted, was sufficient to insure stories in two of the city papers.

Runs Slipper Contest

Wilmington—In connection with the showing of "The Prisoner of Zenda" at the Arcadia, the Walk-Over Shop displayed in its windows the slippers worn by Alice Terry during the filming of the picture. Miss Terry is credited with having the most perfect foot of any screen actress. The Walk-Over Shop believed Wilmington women could rival her and a contest was held.

The first woman whose foot in shape, form, and size fitted perfectly Miss Terry's slipper was offered any pair of shoes in the store. The exploitation stunt attracted many persons and proved a big box-office booster for the house.

A Real Idea

Paris, Ont.—J. A. Bolinsky, manager of the Allen, has begun a campaign to get selected groups into his theater.

For "The Bachelor Daddy," he telephoned the membership of the Daughters of the Empire, a fraternal order, and out of the 28 women 20 came. None of these were regular patrons. He made a point of going up to each one and discussing moving pictures with them. They were tickled to death with the picture and promised to come often.

The same group worked with another society for "Across the Continent," and pretty soon Bolinsky expects to have a hundred or more influential folks constantly boosting his house.

The soundness of his methods is proved by the fact that playings of "The Bachelor Daddy" and "Across the Continent," during Christmas week in opposition to Christmas parties, church bazars, skating, hockey games, and other diversions.

Centurians Attract Shoppers

Baltimore—Roman Centurians of Caesar’s "period carrying banners rode through the shopping crowds during the run of "Nero" at the New theater. The riders attracted great attention while the banners they were carrying announced the run of the production at the theater.

Realism in The Lobby

Cleveland—William Raynor, manager of Reade’s Hippodrome, built a complete blacksmith shop in the foyer in connection with "The Village Blacksmith." The horse was in a stable. The fire was burning in the fireplace. The anvil was ready. An old fashioned buggy stood on one side. Harness and other saddlery accoutrement lay around on the saw dust floor. It looked very real and was exceedingly effective.

Join the "A-B-U-T-S"

Toronto—Clever exploitation was carried out by Ben Crank, of the Allen for "Brothers Under the Skin." He distributed thousands of "membership cards," with safety pins attached, which signified that the holder was affiliated with the "A-B-U-T-S," the pin being the club emblem. Other cards had safety matches, the wording being "Most matches are failures. Don’t get married until you see ‘Brothers Under the Skin’ at the ‘Allen’.

A moving van was sent through the residential districts bearing banners which read: "This furniture is being moved for non-payments of weekly installments. Don’t get married until you see ‘Brothers Under the Skin’ at the ‘Allen’.

Effective Teaser Campaign

Indianapolis—When "One Exciting Night" was booked for showing at the Circle the management put through a tie-up with the Indianapolis Star producing exceptional results.

The tie-up took the form of a symposium, conducted for two weeks in advance of the play date for the picture, by the paper for the best letters from readers describing the most "Exciting Night" in their experiences. Prices of $1 each for the daily best letters were given. As the symposium closed all letters were judged again and the best of all won an award of $50.

The contest ended a week before the play date and immediately following it a teaser advertising campaign was started in local newspapers, the copy referring mysteriously to "One Exciting Night," and timed to tie up with the display advertising and announcements just before the opening performance.

Will Surely Appeal To Star's Admirers But Story Is Quite Lacking

Norma Talmadge in
"THE VOICE FROM THE MINARET"
Ass. First Nat'l. Pict.

DIRECTOR .................. Frank Lloyd
AUTHOR ..................... Robert Hichens
SCENARIO BY ............... Frances Marion
CAMERAMAN ................ Tony Gaudio

AS A WHOLE...........Splendidly made picture that will go especially big with star's admirers, but otherwise won't cause a commotion

STORY......The usual eternal triangle with too many passionate outbursts, almost ridiculous at times

DIRECTION............Always very fine and picture is beautifully mounted in every respect but situations are too 'slushy'

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Excellent
LIGHTINGS ................. Excellent

STAR......Sure to satisfy her many admirers; does not always appear to advantage in close-ups

SUPPORT......Eugene O'Brien comes back as the star's lead; a well suited opposite and does good work; the late Edwin Stevens' appearance uncanny to those who know he is deceased

EXTERIORS .................. All right
INTERIORS .................. Very good
DETAIL ..................... Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY......Unloved wife of English nobleman falls in love with theological student, gives him up but is reunited upon husband's death

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 6,885 feet

Regardless of just what the criticisms for or against "The Voice of the Minaret" may be, one thing is certain—that it will make plenty of money. In the first place it brings Eugene O'Brien back as the star's leading man, and it presents Miss Talmadge in one of those typical passionate dramas which seem to bring them in, and Director Lloyd has seen it to that folks are not going to be disappointed. He has allowed the lovers many osculatory scenes that will easily gain a reputation for the feature, capable of drawing a big crowd anywhere it is played. Once it has been shown you can count on the word-of-mouth advertising to do the rest.

So far as the picture's moneyed success is concerned, it seems sure enough, and will likely prove a popular choice with the majority of audiences. And from the looks of the matinee crowd at the Strand, Norma Talmadge's following will surely turn out in full force. But the picture will not gain any place in the list of the year's best despite its drawing power or financial capacity because the story won't let it. It is the ever popular eternal triangle, worked out with a few slightly new complications and a fairly different atmosphere, but, on the whole, "The Voice From the Minaret" is essentially commonplace in its situations and weak in logic.

The hero, a religiously inclined young man until he meets the woman, pretends to fight off the temptation, but it is never convincing, no matter how many times Eugene O'Brien walks to the open window to wire his hands in search of consolation. Nor do Miss Talmadge's many tears compel sympathy, because you know only too well that her sickly husband will eventually make his exit for the happy ending that is bound to come. Of course there are some intervening complications that are unexpected and help to relieve the triteness of the plot, but generally speaking, Robert Hichens' story is wholly unworthy the money Joseph Schenck has spent upon it, and the splendid production given it by Frank Lloyd.

There is an attractive desert sequence with the hot sands providing a more or less appropriate background for the apparent liaison of the ex-theological student and the wife of an English nobleman. The atmosphere is colorful, the photography excellent and the lightings very good. The star does not look as well in this, although it may be that she has not been carefully photographed.

Should Draw Big Business Even Though Picture Is Not At All Distinctive

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It probably won't matter a great deal what Norma Talmadge has to do as long as she appears in the picture, to satisfy her following and judging from the Strand patronage, the star is still in vogue. And then there is the other angle—that of the story, which, while it is trite, conventional and borders on real "slushy" drama, will be heartily received by a good many—the women in particular. They'll have plenty of love making to feast their eyes and they'll remember Eugene O'Brien and Norma Talmadge as sort of having set the pace for this type of drama early in the picture business.

If you know they like Norma Talmadge her name should be all that is necessary to get them in, and a few stills in the lobby will certainly get them interested. Catchlines will do if you think they will want to know more about the story, but the star's name coupled with that of Eugene O'Brien will do just as well.
Pleasing Romance And Picturesque Atmosphere Make It Appealing

Harley Knoles' Prod.
“THE BOHEMIAN GIRL”
American Releasing Corp.

DIRECTOR ...................... Harley Knoles
AUTHOR ........................ Wm. Balfe
SCENARIO ...................... Resina Henley
CAMERAMAN .................... Rene Guissart

STORY...... Except for locale doesn't differ greatly from familiar type of romantic melodrama DIRECTION...... Even and, for the most part, quite artistic; interest usually well sustained
PHOTOGRAPHY ................ Average
LIGHTINGS .................... Not always good PLAYERS ...... Ivor Novello fine type of screen hero but has limited role in this; Gladys Cooper pleasing; others Ellen Terry, Constance Collier and C. Aubrey Smith

EXTERIORS ..................... Pretty
INTERIORS ..................... One or two big sets

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... The story of the opera. Gypsy wins love of girl who is willing to remain with her lover even after she learns she is of the nobility

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 6,462 feet

“The Bohemian Girl” has gained considerable fame as an opera, and it is only natural that it should eventually find its way into pictures. The screen version was made by Harley Knoles in England with Ivor Novello and Gladys Cooper, two prominent English players, in the leading roles, with an artistic and rather pleasing entertainment the result of their combined efforts. Stripped of its attractive atmosphere and effective romantic twists, “The Bohemian Girl,” as a film play, leaves little to the imagination of the audience, since the situations have already served in many an American screen melodrama. But with the choice selection of locations, appealing gypsy camp atmosphere and a production that is usually pleasingly artistic, the picture offers a satisfying entertainment that will undoubtedly be well suited to the average audience.

The picture is a trifle too long, but it is surprising that the interest has been so well sustained in spite of sequences that are slightly too drawn out. Harley Knoles tells the story in a smooth, even fashion, and usually wastes no time in getting to the point of the particular episode. The development is also good and builds towards the climax with increasing interest. There is one bit which is not altogether coherent. You understand that the girl stolen by the gypsies has never known that she is really the daughter of a nobleman nor from whence she came, but when she is doomed to imprisonment for theft through the trickery of the gypsy queen, she calls for her father. The titles may be the fault of this incoherent bit, however.

Ivor Novello is the customary romantic type of hero who fulfills all the requirements of the role of the Polish soldier, and promises to do much better work if given a more ambitious part. Since he has been signed by Griffith to appear in his next picture, it will be interesting to see what he does. Gladys Cooper, another English player, is a thoroughly pleasing heroine, but she does not screen well in this. Possibly it is due to poor lighting. Incidentally, the lightings throughout are not as good as they should be.

Story: Arline, the young daughter of Count Arnheim, an Austrian, is saved by Thaddeus, a Polish soldier, who joins a gypsy band. Arline is stolen by one of the band, but protected always by Thaddeus, who falls in love with her when she is grown. When the band returns to Bohemia years later, Arline, still ignorant that Arnheim is her father, is brought before him for theft. How she learns Arnheim is her parent and is eventually happy with Thaddeus, makes up the climax.

Play Up the Title And Interest Them In The Gypsy Romance

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Those who like artistic pictures with attractive atmospheres and plenty of pleasing romantic touches, will be well satisfied with “The Bohemian Girl.” If your crowd favors this type of entertainment you can safely promote the picture and get them interested through many channels. Let them know about the stage play—the title should already be familiar—and talk about the two English players who appear in the principal roles.

The gypsy atmosphere will undoubtedly appeal to a large majority and you can play it up with catchy lines indicating the romance of a girl of the nobility, kidnapped when a child, who falls in love with one of the band, and then finds there is a barrier between them. It can be played up to excite their interest and, of course, use the title prominently and use the score of the opera for your musical accompaniment.

The Only New Thing
In Motion Pictures
This Year!

From exhibitors—from audiences—from critics—from picture experts—comes this comment, again and again, after viewing that great photoplay sensation

D. W. Griffith's
"One Exciting Night"

Here is a picture that has EVERYTHING any exhibitor can ask.
It satisfies box-office demands and also pleases immensely any type of audience.
In all sections of the country it has set new attendance records in theatre after theatre.
It is that "something new" in pictures that exhibitors everywhere are seeking.

Miss Louella Parsons Says
In The Morning Telegraph

"Here is something entirely new—the first picture of its kind I have ever seen.
"D. W. Griffith has never made such an enjoyable picture.
"Never in the history of pictures has there been anything so full of thrills, suspense and everything that makes for one hundred per cent. interest."

More Money From Philadelphia and a Record in Cleveland!

D. W. Griffith's "One Exciting Night," his latest picture sensation, did such a smashing box-office business at the Stanton Theatre, Philadelphia, that it brought this letter from Frank W. Buhler, managing director, to Albert Grey, general manager of the Griffith organization:

"Enclosed find check to cover additional rental on "One Exciting Night."

"We have extended the engagement of this picture owing to its great popularity in Philadelphia.

"'One Exciting Night' is a picture that appeals to all classes. It has an element of comedy, an element of drama and keeps the spectator interested every minute of the showing.

Big Box-Office Returns and a New Record in Cleveland!

Breaking all house records at popular prices at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, Mr. Griffith's "One Exciting Night" played to $18,113.80 the first week of the engagement. The second week brought $13,679.89.

As a result of the splendid box-office and audience value of the picture, N. M. Schenck, of the Loew organization, sent the following letter to Albert Grey:

"Thought you might like to know that 'One Exciting Night,' which completed a two weeks' run at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, has done remarkable business.

"The audiences received it enthusiastically, and I feel sure that it will go equally well anywhere."

For Two Weeks Broke the Record Made With "Way Down East" and Also With "Orphans of the Storm"

And REMEMBER! "Way Down East" in stage and screen theatres, has played to twice as much business as any other two pictures ever made!

And this record was made during the most unfavorable weather in years.

$15,000 greater than "Way Down East"!
$8,000 greater than "Orphans of the Storm"!

Read What Joseph Plunkett Says

"Dear Mr. Abrams—I am glad to write you that D. W. Griffith’s ‘ONE EXCITING NIGHT’ did bigger business for us than either ‘Way Down East’ or ‘Orphans of the Storm.’ We were compelled to stop the sale of seats many times during the engagement of the picture. It certainly is a great audience attraction, which was plainly shown by the way our audiences received it."

Now Read What "Variety” Had to Say

"Strand—‘ONE EXCITING NIGHT!' (Griffith-United Artists.) Seats 2,900. Scale; 30-50-85. Was held over for second week and broke the house record on the business done by both ‘Way Down East’ and ‘Orphans of the Storm,’ previous Griffith’s that played two weeks at the house. Got close to $29,000 on the week."

"Variety’s” report for the first week at the Strand stated that “ONE EXCITING NIGHT” grossed “better than $31,000,” adding that it was being held over.

Good Action And Thrills In Last Two Reels of Mix's Latest

Tom Mix in "ROMANCE LAND"
Fox

DIRECTOR .................. Edward Sedgwick AUTHOR .................. Kenneth Perkins
SCENARIO BY .................. Joseph F. Poland
CAMERAMAN ............... Dan Clark

AS A WHOLE...Burlesque western with good action and some novel stunts that will make it attractive to a majority

STORY.......Little to it, but Ralph Spence titles fill in the gaps with some fair humor

DIRECTION.......Adequate; saves the best for the last reels; pretty slow in getting it going

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... All right
LIGHTINGS .................. Standard

STAR.......Offers some new stunts that will please his admirers

SUPPORT.......Includes Barbara Bedford, Frank Brownlee and others

EXTERIORS ................. Some pretty shots
INTERIORS .................. Sufficient

DETAIL.....An overdose of Spence's "wise cracks"

CHARACTER OF STORY.......Cowboy outwits every attempt of villain to prevent him from marrying the girl

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 3,975 feet

Tom Mix's latest is a little different from what he usually does, or at least it starts out to be, but ends up as a typical Mix western with stunts, action and thrills of a fairly familiar order and a few new ones besides. The beginning promises a burlesque on "The Connecticut Yankee" with the star cavorting around in "tin B. V. D.'s"—a la Ralph Spence titles—the laughs provided mostly by said titles, except that they are not always funny. They'll appeal to a certain crowd, however, and very likely they will get a big laugh out of the one where hero, wearing a suit of armor, says, "I'd tip my hat to you if I had a monkey wrench." The others are of the same order.

The remainder of the picture consists of a series of plots with villain trying to prevent hero from marrying the girl. Much of this is unimportant incident that gets over neither laughs nor thrills, and Sedgwick seems to have been at a loss to know what to do until it was time to start the action, prior to the climax. The start is slow but probably the last action, stunts and thrills of the last reels will make up for it.

There is a rodeo meet in which villain and hero contest, the winner to marry the girl. Naturally there is a lot of crooked work on the part of the villain which gives hero fine opportunities to display his skill in various sports. The first is a chariot race with hero easily the victor. The camera work in this is first rate, and there are many fine shots of the speeding chariots. Next comes an obstacle race on horseback, and hero is almost the winner of this when villain cuts the saddle and hero is out of the running. Finally there is a mixed vehicle race with Mix in an old fashioned carriage. Once more villain tries to spoil hero's chances by loosening the bolts, but hero drives right to victory, minus the wheels.

But the best of the action comes in the last reel when villain captures the girl and hero follows. There are some first rate thrills with Mix rescuing the girl and carrying her to safety on a car which spans a lake. Mix's admirers will like the feature particularly well, and if it's action they want "Romance Land" should do nicely.

Barbara Bedford plays opposite Mix and has a more or less exciting time of it trying to marry the man of her own choice. Frank Brownlee is the usual cigar-chewing villain who plans all the surprises for hero.

Talk About The Rodeo And Use A Trailer Of The Rescue Stunt

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

While Mix's latest isn't probably as good as some of his other pictures, nor as full of thrills and action, still "Romance Land" has a finale that should make it popular, and they shouldn't object to the fairly slow first reels. There is a comedy vein that will appeal to a certain crowd as sure-fire. It won't do for every audience, but there is a big majority that like this sort, and where Mix has a following you can count or it going over.

Talk about the rodeo and promise action and thrills that contain some new ideas. A trailer would be about the best means of getting them interested, by showing shots of the race or one of Mix's spectacular rescues. That should be enough to make them come back. Of course play up the star's name prominently and you can say that Barbara Bedford is his leading lady.
Pleasing Atmosphere and Fine Production in Latest Melford Picture

George Melford Prod.

"JAVA HEAD"

Paramount

DIRECTOR ...................... George Melford
AUTHOR ......................... Joseph Hergesheimer
SCENARIO BY ................. Waldemar Young CAMERAMAN ................... Bert Glennon

AS A WHOLE ... Attractively mounted and with pleasing atmosphere; otherwise a conventional offering

STORY ... Very little to the plot and that quite familiar; accorded too much footage to sustain interest evenly

DIRECTION ... Tries to make up for story's deficiencies through good production but it hardly covers requirements

PHOTOGRAPHY ................. Excellent
LIGHTINGS ...................... Very good PLAYERS ... Well suited cast with Leatrice Joy the appealing Manchu princess; Jacqueline Logan, Albert Roscoe, Raymond Hatton and George Fawcett others who are prominent

EXTERIORS ..................... Actual shots of old Salem
INTERIORS ...................... Good
DETAIL ......................... Adequate

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Manchu bride of Salem skipper kills herself when she learns her husband still loves his childhood sweetheart

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 7,865 feet

George Melford's latest production is an adaptation of Joseph Hergesheimer's "Java Head," a story of old Salem in the days when hoop skirts and narrow minds were the popular vogue. But the latter doesn't play a prominent part in "Java Head" since the people raise no great objection to the introduction of a Manchu princess into their community. However, Hergesheimer's tale is rather typical of the old days with the atmosphere delightfully retained in the production provided by Melford who shot most of the exteriors right in Salem where the story is laid. The quaint houses, shaded streets and the typical water fronts, all beautifully photographed, give the picture splendid value as far as pictorial appeal is concerned.

But despite the splendid efforts of Director Melford and a capable cast headed by Leatrice Joy, who is a very appealing Taou Yuen, the picture does not offer a strong entertainment. The plot is as old as Kipling's "East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet," nor does "Java Head" differ greatly from the others except perhaps that the Chinese heroine does not turn out to be a white girl adopted by a Chinaman in infancy, with the denouement paving the way to the happy ending. This time the other alternative is taken, and probably the less frequently used of the two; the Oriental kills herself just as the heroine of the recent "Toll of the Sea" did.

The plot is very slight and there seems little excuse for the excess footage used. The story would have served to much better advantage in five reels, with the interest more effectively sustained. The sequence dealing with the drug-eaten brother of the white girl does not seem at all essential although it provides Raymond Hatton with a first rate dramatic role.

Learitce Joy is the bright spot of the picture, together with the quaint pictorial appeal contained in it. She is a pensive and winning princess who will surely please her admirers for her part in this. Albert Roscoe is well suited and the entire cast capable.

Story: Because of an old feud Gerrit Ammidon, of an old Salem family, is ordered out of the house by Nettie Vollar's father. Gerrit sails to China where he marries a Manchu princess whose life he saved. How he brings her back to Salem and discovers he still loves Nettie, is followed by the Manchu girl's suicide when she learns the truth.

Promise Pictorial Appeal and Use Leatrice Joy's Name

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

George Melford's latest picture is so very good to look at that probably it will have a much better chance of getting over than you would expect. The story is of a familiar order but where they remember Joseph Hergesheimer's story and were favorably impressed by it, they will undoubtedly be anxious to see what Melford has done with it. As far as that goes he has stuck to the story and given it a thoroughly fine production.

Learitce Joy's performance is well worth seeing and, while you may not think it will warrant particular exploitation, you can make the usual announcements to include the name of the producer, those of the players who mean the most at your box office and whatever else you think they will want to know, or need to know, to interest them. Mention the fact that many of the scenes are actual shots of Salem with that quaint New England atmosphere.

HODKINSON PICTURE

A Picture that MILLS
Here is the answer, graphically and realistically flashed on the screen, to the great question:

What Did the War Accomplish?

You see in this film the aged, broken and helpless man who deluged Europe in blood that his towering vanity might triumph for a moment in history.

He paces his twenty-acre, barbed-wire-enclosed prison like a caged lion, but with none of the lion's dignity. His companions are a pair of dachshunds!

This is the only motion picture ever taken of the ex-Kaiser in exile. It was obtained by a former school-mate of the ex-Crown Prince, who smuggled a specially constructed motion-picture camera into the estate at Doorn, and caught the one-time "war lord" at close range, under the pretext of photographing landscapes and flower gardens.

Many of its moments are startling. Hanford MacNider, former head of the American Legion, says:

"It appears to me as an epoch-making event in the screen industry, in that it gives a most faithful and realistic description of how the once all-powerful German War-Lord is forced to end his declining years, isolated and alone, a pitiful figure in the world of affairs."

Book it now, while newspapers are giving pages of publicity to this sensational film.
Good Stunt Stuff That Furnishes Fine Thrills For Those Who Like Them

Richard Talmadge in "THE SPEED KING"

DIRECTOR ......................... Grover Jones

AUTHOR .......................... Not credited

SCENARIO BY ..................... Grover Jones

CAMERAMAN ..................... Arthur L. Todd

AS A WHOLE..... Series of acrobatic escapes which star performs with considerable agility the chief point of interest in this STORY....... The conventional mythical kingdom theme with variations; not as good as star's recent vehicles

DIRECTION...... Makes some display in production and speeds story up to satisfying finish

PHOTOGRAPHY ................. Satisfactory

LIGHTINGS ....................... Good

STAR....... Will go very big where they like the Fairbanks type of stunts

SUPPORT..... Mark Fenton and Harry Von Meter the political villains; Virginia Warwick a fair heroine

EXTERIORS ....................... Suitable

INTERIORS ....................... Appropriate

DETAIL .......................... Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY..... American motor-cyclist impersonates foreign king and gets into all kinds of trouble but wins a princess for a wife

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 5,000 feet

Richard Talmadge is the chief contributor of this type of comedy lately, the acrobatic stunt kind—and where they like this sort of entertainment the Talmadge pictures should go very well. His most recent offering, "The Speed King," doesn't contain as good a story as some of his others but toward the end, the last reel or two, there is plenty of thrills in the succession of escapes which hero effects in evading the enemies of the king he is impersonating.

Play Up Title And Make Promises For Star's Performance

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There seems to be a good many picture goers who like this acrobatic stunt stuff of the Doug Fairbanks variety, and since Talmadge is the chief contributor of this type of entertainment, outside of Fairbanks, there should be a market for his pictures. The latest contains some first rate action and thrills of this order and should thoroughly please them.

If you have played the recent Talmadge pictures you probably won't have difficulty interesting them in this, but if you haven't you might use this and see how they take to it. Let them know what the star does, and promise some very exciting escapes. The title is good and could easily be advertised by having a man ride about town on a motorcycle displaying the title and announcing the showing at your theater.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 8,260 feet

"Mighty Lak a Rose" is a mighty fine picture and Edwin Carewe deserves a great deal of credit for the very worth while offering which he contributes to the list of the year’s best. Curtis Benton’s story is a wholly absorbing crook theme that is almost entirely unlike the average and contains many thoroughly original and interesting twists that make it an unusually strong and appropriate screen vehicle. It is the sort of theme that will appeal to a large majority and the manner in which Carewe has handled it, makes use of every good point that it contains and brings out the elements of comedy and pathos in particularly convincing fashion, is all very fine.

The development is ideal and the interest is accumulative. It isn’t often that the continuity in a story of this kind succeeds in maintaining logic and coherence to the degree that this one does. Toward the close Carewe does spend a trifle more time on sequences than necessary, with a slight tendency to drag the conclusion, but his purpose is quite obvious. He evidently didn’t want to force the happy ending by introducing improbable coincidence and so things work around to a wholly satisfying, though fairly tardy, happy ending.
This is not to say, however, that the detail employed here is out of place. There are numerous mighty strong touches of pathos in these last reels and it would be a pity to cut them out but the picture does need some speeding up.

The basic idea, and an old one, is the regeneration of a band of crooks. But it is doubtful if it has ever been put to better use, or surrounded with more convincing human interest situations, than it has here.
The gradual reformation of the band brought about by the soothing violin played by the blind heroine whose favorite is “Mighty Lak a Rose” is great and there is a pathos in the climax that is a wallop and it can only be appreciated by seeing it. Carewe has mounted the picture in good taste, the photography and lightings are excellent and it is an all around fine piece of work as far as he is concerned.

Too much cannot be said about the meritorious performance of Dorothy Mackail, the blind heroine. Miss Mackail plays with a sincerity and feeling that gets under your skin and she’s always convincing. She is not beautiful but she’s all the more sincere and convincing for it, at least in this type of role. The cast is fine all the way through with James Rennie a real hero and Anders Randolf a splendid type for the role of “Bull” Morgan. Helene Montrose also gives a fine performance as “hard-boiled” Molly Malone and Harry Short supplies the humor. Sam Hardy has a minor part.
There is also a mighty well trained colt in the picture.

Story: Rose Duncan, a blind violinist, comes to New York where she is to live with her uncle and receive instruction from Professor Trevor who is interested in her playing. The uncle is killed and Bull Morgan, a crook, sees a chance to use the girl. He pretends to be her uncle and takes her to live with his crowd which includes Jimmy Harrison, educated by Bull; Molly, Bull’s “sweetie” and “Slippery Eddie” Foster. Jimmy is won over by Rose’s “Mighty Lak a Rose.” When Jimmy decides to "go straight" Bull throws a chair, hitting Rose. Her recovery brings about the reform of the others. Later Jimmy is caught by the police while "turning off one more trick" to get money for an operation on Rose’s eyes. Rose, who believes Jimmy is dead, is finally found by Trevor and on the night of her debut, Jimmy, now free, wanders to the stage door where his dog recognizes Rose’s picture. Later there is a reunion and Trevor gives up hope of winning Rose.

Deserves Your Best Exploitation Efforts and Will Surely Please Them

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can always depend on this combination satisfying a large majority and “Mighty Lak a Rose” is strong in both elements—comedy and pathos. You can count on it pleasing them and they’ll laugh at the antics of “Slippery Eddie” and probably weep at the misfortune of the little blind heroine. There is much to be said about the splendid performance of Dorothy Mackail and you might make an extra fuss about her performance because they are sure to look for her again after they see her work in this.

Make sure that your musical accompaniment is right for this one because it has a lot to do with putting the picture over satisfactorily. The song from which the feature takes its name should be prominent throughout the showing. Make promises for the entertainment the picture affords and by all means get your women folks interested. They’ll have a fine old fashioned cry over this one and what woman doesn’t “love” a good cry now and then. The picture is worth your best efforts and give Edwin Carewe’s name the prominence he deserves.
New York Telegraph: "The Bohemian Girl" lends itself remarkably well to the screen. It's difficult to know whose performance to start praising first, the personnel of the cast is so excellent. Besides being beautiful, Gladys Cooper has great distinction. Ivor Novello, as the leading man, looks like a Greek god and is an intelligent, handsome actor. Constance Collier is dashing and radiant. It's a very well done picture.

New York Tribune: There never has been such a gorgeous profile on the screen since Francis X. Bushman became the idol of the fans, as that of Ivor Novello. Gladys Cooper is very lovely to look at. "The Bohemian Girl" makes one long for music.

New York American: "The Bohemian Girl" at the Cameo is a delight. It contains many good reasons for appeal to the 20th century theatre fans. The cast is superlative—Gladys Cooper, the most beautiful actress of the British stage, Constance Collier, gifted and emotional, and beloved Ellen Terry. Ivor Novello is an excellent example of the romantic school.

Evening Mail: One of the most delightful and charming photoplays made in some time is Harley Knole's production of "The Bohemian Girl" at the Cameo Theatre this week. Ivor Novello gives every indication of becoming another Valentino. He is not only one of the best looking men on the screen today but also a finished actor.

New York Times: Harley Knolea has made a faithful adaptation from the opera that has not been cheapened by movie melodramatics.

Evening Telegram: A poetic romance and about the best made picture ever brought here from abroad. With its marvelous, gorgeous settings and elaborate costumes, it's a real treat. Gladys Cooper is charming throughout the entire story and Ivor Novello is both handsome and a good actor.

New York Sun: "The Bohemian Girl" introduces two fresh, attractive personalities to the picture fans of the country—Gladys Cooper, a reigning theatrical beauty, and Ivor Novello, who is to appear in D.W. Griffith's next picture. Judging by the welcome they are receiving at the Cameo they have found a welcome on the American screen.

Evening World: This picture leaves but little to be desired. Now that Novello has been brought over to be Griffith's leading man the interest quite naturally centers first in his work in this picture. It's a vivid production.

Here Is What Los Angeles Said:

Los Angeles Examiner: Here is a story that accomplishes the unusual by the simplest and most direct means. Every woman who sees Tibi Lubin will admire his handsome, sturdy boyishness. Alex Pantages is a mighty good "picker" of pictures.

Los Angeles Express: "The Prince and the Pauper" is a faithful depiction of that continuing favorite from the pen of Mark Twain. The picture is at all times a delight — pictorially and in every other way.

Los Angeles Record: A picture that is a real treat. Everything about the production is well chosen; you are sure to like it immensely.

Los Angeles Herald: If Mark Twain could come back to life he would be sincerely satisfied to see the perfect picture made from his "The Prince and the Pauper" and with wonderful Tibi Lubin, who plays the beggar lad and the King's son.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Soldiers, on leave in France, become implicated in uprising in small principality where one is made over-lord until they discover who he really is

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........... 4,658 feet

While "The Gentleman from America" isn't as funny as some of Gibson's other recent releases, it has a satisfying humor and enough comedy incident to make it register sufficiently well to get it over, and the production itself is quite worth while, and the atmosphere is wholly pleasant and interesting. Director Sedgwick has been considerably more pain-taking in mounting the picture than the story really warrants, but the result gives the piece quite a good deal of pictorial appeal, and when things are not just as humorous as they might be, there are other compensating values that keep you interested.

Raymond Schrock has conceived a clever twist to an old dramatic situation that just saves his theme from being a most conventional one and instead of the cut and dried old plot of the girl forced to marry a nobleman for a political alliance, the idea is turned into a comedy with the introduction of an A. E. F. hero, who gets all mixed up in the plans of an over-lord to marry his son to the daughter of a duke, thereby insuring his own political position.

The laughs consist of fairly familiar post-war hokum, with the happy-go-lucky buddies furnishing the amusement. Hoot Gibson and Tom O'Brien, as Johnny Day and Dennis O'Shane respectively, are delightfuly pleasing war buddies who find they can't use the furlough when they finally get it because they are "broke." How they eventually borrow the price of a trip to Paris, but land in Cardonia and get into difficulties immediately because they cannot speak Spanish, gets the picture off to a good start.

Of course the ever prominent romantic twist is included, with hero Hoot saving a senorita from marriage to the villain whom she does not love, and the subsequent understanding between hero and the girl when he learns some of the native terms of endearment. Gibson does good work, and Louise Lorraine is pleasing as the girl.

Story: Two pals in the A. E. F. are given a furlough. With a borrowed dollar they "clean up" in a crap game and start for Paris. Instead they land in Cardonia, a principality of Spain. Hero is mistaken for a bandit and falls in love with the prettiest senorita in Cardonia. After a series of exciting adventures he saves the girl from marriage with the villain, finds she is the daughter of the Grand Duke, and becomes assistant ruler of the kingdom. The last seen of hero he is back in camp doing k. p. duty for overstaying his leave.

Use Gibson's Name And Tell His Admirers They'll Like This

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"A Gentleman from America" is the right picture for the average audience, and you can count on the hokum of the soldier camp pleasing them thoroughly well. It furnishes sufficient amusement to cheer them up, and Hoot Gibson can be relied upon to keep them amused when the comedy situations fall a bit short of drawing laughs.

The atmosphere in this is somewhat different from Gibson's previous picture, and you can let them know that pictorially it is quite pleasing, and with regard to the story say it deals with the adventures of two A. E. F. boys on leave and of their difficulties in a Spanish principality where they are taken for bandits, and one eventually becomes assistant ruler of the kingdom. Play up Gibson's name and recall his recent features that you have shown.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Disinherited youth becomes bell boy and wins over uncle who objected to his marriage with an actress

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 3,940 feet

After seeing “The Hottentot,” you know just how good a comedy Thomas H. Ince and Douglas MacLean are capable of making. Probably that is the reason “Bell Boy 13” seems such a “weak sister,” but surely there is no comparison between the two offerings.
The story in this is very slight and without any genuinely strong humorous situations upon which to build, and there is not enough good incident to round it out to even the short four reels which it consumes.
Nor has Director Seiter succeeded in improving upon the story through his direction. At the outset he allows too much that is on the order of slap-stick, and there are some very old gags that even a hokum tworeeler wouldn’t boast of. The efforts of young hero to evade his uncle and keep his date with the actress he wants to marry afford considerable silly business in the opening reel that doesn’t gain a favorable impression to start with. The stunts that Mac-Lean goes through to get out of the house may supply laughs where it doesn’t take much to amuse them, but it is all very hackneyed humor.

Seiter does succeed in keeping the story moving at a good pace, even though it isn’t continuously funny and he would have gotten much better results in several instances, where the situations were fairly new, if he had not repeated them so often. The introduction of a very homely girl who “thinks the wedding march the prettiest music ever written,” is one instance where it is overdone. The first glimpse of her face, when she’s singing “Fly, birdie, fly,” is all right and it will get a laugh, but not the second nor third look.

MacLean tries hard enough to please his audience, but he is under quite a handicap with such poor material. John Stepping is an amiable enough uncle despite his objection to his nephew’s marriage to an actress, played by Margaret Loomis, whose clothes would seem to indicate that the feature is not of recent manufacture.

Story: Harry Elrod’s uncle would rather have his nephew interested in his stock business than in the actress, Kitty Clyde, whom Harry wants to marry.
Kitty also refuses to have anything to do with him until he goes to work. Harry becomes bell boy 13 at a prominent hotel, from which his uncle manages to have him fired. Harry incites all the help to strike and when the management threatens the uncle, the-latter gives in, Harry tells his followers to go back to work, and he also wins the consent of the uncle to his marriage.

Won’t Do Unless They Happen To Favor This Type of Nonsense
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you don’t find it difficult to amuse them and they will laugh easily, you can undoubtedly put “Bell Boy 13” over satisfactory, but if you show “The Hotten-tot” first and follow it with this one, they are bound to be disappointed. The first is so full of spontaneous and original humor, that they will hardly be satisfied with the second.

Douglas MacLean works very hard to put the picture over, so if you number many of his admirers among your patrons, you might get it over on the strength of his performance. The comedy is mostly of the slap-stick variety such as the breaking of plates, a display of ill-fitting hats on the part of the star, and more or less familiar chase stuff that keeps things going if nothing else.

"The Balloonicific"—Buster Keaton—First National

Type of production..........................2 reel comedy

Written, directed and played by Buster, "The Balloonicific" will undoubtedly satisfy your folks, especially if they like him. There is plenty of amusement contained in its twenty minutes of running time but it is not quite as funny as either of his two previous releases, "Cops" or "The Electric House." However there are many high spots that will bring laughter just as hearty as the previous two elicited. About the most amusing of these is the sequence in which Buster walks along unconscious of the fact that a bear is following him. Gun in hand, he keeps on with the grizzly right at his heels. Suddenly, a second bear confronts Buster. He picks up his gun and fires at this bear and in brandishing his gun over his head he unconsciously knocks the other bear on the head and kills him just as the shot kills the first one. Walking back a few steps, Buster sits down, and it is only when he realizes that his hand is touching something warm and furry, that he looks down to find that he is sitting on a dead bear and has killed two with one stone.

Phyllis Haver is the girl in this and it is a far cry from her work in "The Christian" to a one-piece bathing suit, but she does both well. As the title indicates, Buster gets mixed-up with a runaway balloon and after shooting a pigeon that has settled on the gas-bag, he breaks his fall in a tree-top. The equipment of the balloon includes a collapsible canoe and armed with this and a pair of boots two sizes too big, and a fishing rod, Buster goes fishing. A word here should be said in praise of the locations which are as good as those contained in many "scenics." Particularly fine is a shot of a waterfall with the sun striking it. After many adventures Phyllis is finally won and the closing footage sees the pair in the trick canoe, above which Buster has erected an awning, peacefully sailing towards the falls. There is a good thrill here, when you think they are actually going over, but just at this point the canoe rises above the water, and another shot shows that it has been attached to the mended balloon all the time.

"Extra! Extra!"—Hammons—Educational

Type of production..........................2 reel comedy

While not quite as funny as Lloyd Hamilton's preceding offering, "No Luck," there is very good entertainment in this one. Hamilton, in his role of a ladlyke young man, is extremely funny and his humor is in a class by itself. Not once does he relax from his pseudo-dignified and chastening attitude and even when he smiles, it is in the indigent manner of a very correct schoolma'am. Ruth Hiatt has a bit that she puts over well, but Hamilton is on the screen continually. There is some very funny stuff with a typewriter with a particularly long carriage which he operates at an open window on a level with the street. Innumerable things get on the end of the roller including hats, doughnuts and finally a firecracker which explodes and blackens his face, scaring the girl who is passing almost to death. Hamilton is a newspaper photographer. He wears a checked cap and is mistaken for a dynamite thrower the police are looking for. After being mistaken several times for the villain they employ him as official photographer and after a chase the dynamiter is caught. But while the cop struggles to hold him long enough for Lloyd to get a photograph the villain throws his trusty dynamite.

Pathe Review No. 7

Type of production..........................1 reel magazine

Some extremely cute shots of babies comprise the "living pictures" in this issue of Pathe Review. There are some adorable kiddles and this should find especial favor with the feminine portion of the audience. How mail is delivered in Alaska is next shown, and the human interest touch is provided with a glimpse into the home life of a settler. The popular science division deals with the composition of the human breath in interesting fashion, and the colored scetic bit shows interesting scenes in Arabia.

"Gambling With the Gulf Stream"—Bray—Hodkinson

Type of production..........................1 reel magazine

Styled as a Bray Romance this one reeler contains some very interesting material. It shows by text, diagram and actual shots the way in which the Gulf Stream and the Arctic Current circulate, how this current could be deflected by means of anchored buoys on the Grand Banks; and what would happen to the climates of the different countries if this really were to take place. The British Lion would turn into a polar bear and cocoanuts would grow on Broadway, according to Bray. The idea is shown in detail and is extremely easy to follow. Very good for any house.

"Spuds"—Universal

Type of production..........................1 reel comedy

If your folks have liked the previous offerings in which Lewis Sargent appears as the hardworking Messenger boy, they will like this in all probability. Sargent has a likeable personality and doesn't strive overmuch to be funny. The plot of "Spuds" centers around a water hydrant against which Jimmy parks his bicycle, in spite of a policeman's warning. Drawing a potato sack over the hydrant he fills it in the top with potatoes, and goes inside the house to answer his call. The cop returns and seeing the potatoes offers a passing Italian fifty cents for them. The Italian agrees, but when the cop tries to lift the sack the top of the hydrant comes off and then the fun begins. It is a mildly amusing comedy that should pass muster.

"The Cobbler"—Our Gang—Pathe

Type of production..........................2 reel kid comedy

Director Tom McNamara's gang of assorted kiddies are here again in this one and it's a safe bet that your folks will be mighty glad to see them. If you have played the preceding offerings of this series, "The Champen," "Saturday Morning," etc., you will not need to be urged to book this one. If you haven't had any of them, a treat is in store for you and your audiences. Little Farina is one of the shining lights in "The Cobbler," but every one of the kids does such fine work that it is difficult to single out any for particular mention. They invade a good-natured old cobbler's shop this time, and he tells them what he would do if he had money. Just then a postman delivers a notice of a pension. The cobbler procures a rickety old flivver and the entire gang go on a picnic. After a time they stop for water and little Farina wanders off into a watermelon patch while Mickey Daniels gets chased by a tramp. You are sorry when the end comes, and they all get away in the erratic flivver.

Mark Twain told the story. Of the old time Mississippi river gambler. Who was going to commit suicide. Because there weren't any amateur poker players left. All of which is apropos of the fact that there aren't any amateur exhibitors left. That is, when it comes to figuring values. At least they figure it out that way in Chicago. Where one distributor said: "You know First National has caused more difficulty with exhibitors than any other factor in the business. Right. How? By giving out those sub franchise exhibition value figures. There was a time when we could ask a price. And get it. Now Mister Exhibitor says: "Well, I don't know. Your price figures for this town on a million dollar exhibition value. And your picture ain't worth a million. Ain't worth $300,000. So cut it or get out."

Which sounds tough from the distributors point of view. But that's a mighty good reason not to pay those fancy prices. Now so popular.

FEATURES TOO LONG

From all over comes the holler. That features are too long. First run operators say so. As well as the little fellows. And they're right. There was a time when a five or six reeler was supposed to be "just the right length." Now they're all super—at least they run from eight to 12 reels.

Scholars

Won't these producers ever learn: that in pictures: as in everything: brevity is the soul of wit. Chop out a lot of the footage: please Mister Producer. You can't get much more. Just because it's eight reels. Hi Abrams notwithstanding. Producers for United. Must make them over seven reels. Yet Chaplin. And Lloyd. In short fives. Or even four reels. Get the big money. True. Doug's "Robin Hood" is long. Too long: but it would get the same money. In less footage. That's sure. Meanwhile: the picture goer gets tired out: there isn't a chance to use and play up the short subjects as they deserve: and what's the answer: a poorer show: more dissatisfied people: and the Eastman Kodak declares another special dividend.

Length has nothing to do with it. Never had. Never will have. The biggest men aren't always the smartest. Look at Zukor. Glance at Loew. They're little—but. oh, my!

TALKING ABOUT MARCUS

Do you know how fast Metro's stepping? Have you watched things? No? Well: you haven't much company. Because nearly everybody else has. Sure are moving. Mid-West exhibitors say Metro salesmen are promising for 1923-24: An addition to Metro's program. In the form of two female stars. Who will make Metro still more formidable.

Meanwhile. Over in the Loew organization. The chiefs of staff. Are chafing. They can't get the attention. Of the Big little Boss. Who'se so busy with Metro. He don't know they're in business.

HOW DIGNIFIED WE'RE BECOMING?

Once upon a time he was known as "Buck" Jones. Over at Fox's. Now he's Charles Jones. Once upon a time it was "Hoot" Gibson. Now, if you please—or if you don't—it's Ed (Hoot) Gibson. After awhile they'll lose the Hoot.

"What the Picture Did For Me"

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies—I scraped up all the loose change I could get hold of and booked this picture for the first three days of 1923. I borrowed a few extra dollars from my wife for extra advertising matter. She kicked on letting me have it, and said I should have taken the money I paid for the picture and bought a new Ford. I had the picture pretty well advertised, and on New Years night a show was scheduled to start at 7:45 p.m. in the usual costume flop. Like most of the small town exhibitors I had but very little faith in costume pictures. The show was scheduled to start at 7:45 p.m. in automobiles, vehicles and on foot. About dark they started to come, the poor fellow in automobiles, vehicles and on foot. They seemed to come from every direction, and most of them at once. At 7:15 the standing room was all sold and we were turning them away. In my ten years as an exhibitor I have never shown a picture that give the general satisfaction that this one did. I had nothing but praise from all who saw it. Mr. Exhibitor, if you want a picture that will give your house more prestige than it has ever had, I advise you to get this one. It's worth every cent you pay for it, if you don't make a dime on it. The attendance held up each night and for one matinee.—R. W. Hickman, Lyric theatre, Greenville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Particularly interesting in view of Joe Schenck's identification with the Lesser-Gore group. In West Coast Theaters. No one has yet discovered the salesman. Of any company. Offering American Beauties. To Mike Gore. For the prices West Coast pays. Not so's you could notice, anyway.

After awhile Joe'll be having a hard time. Sitting on the fence as a producer. And trying to be interesting. As an exhibitor as well. At the same time.

But suppose Chaplin, and the Talmadge's. And Doug and Mary. And a few more. Decide not to sell where the exhibitors combine? What then? W-e-l-l, several things might happen. You can't blame anyone for figuring. But then there's something like the Clayton Act. Known to attorneys who practice in the U. S. Courts. Which might cause some trouble. It's about conspiracy.

Of course it sounds like pum pum punk. If a lot of exhibitors combine. There's nothing to stop producers. And distributors. From doing the same darned thing. Been opposing combines so long. For just this reason. That maybe you've tired reading about it. But, boys, you're going to have one. Just as sure as you have the other. And it may be easy. Very, very easy. To make the Clayton Act. Or any other old act. Look like preserved figs.

BACK TO FUNDAMENTALS

Cannot escape it. Have to go right back to them. And chief of all is confidence. When they get a little confidence maybe things will be different. When buyer and seller meet and play right. Not trying to "gyp." Not trying to "do." But playing on the level with each other. These things will stop. And not before.

Who's that said "millenium?" Better arrive long before. Or there won't be no business left.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCTION

Golly the squawks. Hear them a mile off. Biggest Mid west distributor talking: "If it hadn't been for Al Lichtman where would we have been this season? Tell me?" That's what he says. And goes on like this: "The Warner's were a big help in the field last year. But now they're going business with First National exchanges. And you can't get near them. Unless you have a golden rod. And the Mint back of you. And what's in sight for next season? Tell me?"

Tried to tell him. More squawk. "Say," he went on. "You get those producers to sell us on negative value; not New York appraisement; and perhaps we'll get somewhere."

You independents on the Coast? Do you hear this? Well, heed it.

ENTREPRENEUR

ANOTHER STORY

That story of Egg and Harry Nolan reminded George Kann of Goldwyn, of one they tell in England about the salesman (they call them travellers there you know) who came to the exhibitor and after bulling the merits of his picture, etc., ad infinitum, winds up his spiel with:

Schenck and Hays

The same article points out that neither Fairbanks nor Mary Pickford are interested in the Hays organization and in view of Schenck's bringing together these stars together with Chaplin and Lloyd to offset low prices offered by booking combinations, the Times article says:

"It is a matter of discussion in motion-picture circles whether, if such an alliance materializes, Mr. Schenck and his galaxy of stars will desert Mr. Hays and his association, or if he will cause the entry of his prospective colleagues into the Hays fold."

Extras Fighting Booking Offices
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Hollywood—Extras working in the studios are opposing the so-called "control" of booking offices. The first complaint is scheduled for an early hearing in the State Labor Commission's office. An extra man whose name is withheld for obvious reasons, charges the manager of the Service Bureau, 1036 South Hill St., with discounting his pay checks without right and in violation of the law. The fight between the extras and the booking agents has been going on for some time.

Pyramid Pictures have reengaged George Terwilliger to direct "Wife in Name Only." Peter Milne prepared the script.

Vitagraph Claims a Victory
A statement from Vitagraph claims that the company was awarded $1,200 and costs in its suit against the Liberty Theater Corp. of Fresno and San Jose. The litigation involved the showing of Larry Semon comedies. It is claimed that Liberty transferred its interest in the Fresno house to Kehrlein Bros., who played one comedy and then sought to cancel the contract. The company, so far as the San Jose house was concerned, fulfilled its contract and then renewed it. Then Vitagraph filed suit for the value of the unplayed pictures in Fresno.

Change in Release

Understood "Lady Hamilton" Goes to Hodkinson—Film is German-Made—Originally Sterling's

It is understood that Hodkinson will release "Lady Hamilton," variously touted as one of the most important products of German studios. The picture was brought over, and sold to Hodkinson by Rudolph Berg of Berlin, representing Richard Oswald Films, the producers. At that time, negotiations were launched with United Artists and a print sent to the coast for the Fairhankes to see. It was at that time that the Allied Prod. and Dist. Corp., was in formation as a means to placate Charlie Chaplin's resentment over the inclusion of artists.

Schenck-Hays

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Hollywood—Relative to the various reports published regarding his attitude toward the Hays organization, Joseph M. Schenck has authorized the following statement:

"There has been some quiet whispering that the organization was intended to work contrary to the efforts of Will H. Hays. Such reports are not true. I am a member of the Hays organization and a firm believer in his work. I have the utmost confidence, respect and admiration for his achievements. This organization will never oppose Will H. Hays so long as his policies continue and if they have begun. I have no reason to suspect that he intends to change his policies."

Rex Beach Again Tied Up With Goldwyn—Jesse D. Hampton to Produce the Pictures

Rex Beach is again associated with Goldwyn. By virtue of a deal with Jesse D. Hampton, it is understood that Hampton will produce all Beach works in the future, and that they will be released through Goldwyn.

This will bring Beach back to the Goldwyn fold after an absence of some time. Beach was former president of Eminent Authors, Inc., when the coterie of nationally known authors produced and released through Goldwyn. Beach resigned and became associated with Whitman Bennett and United Artists. Incidentally, the production of "The Spillers" brings Jesse Hampton back into the ranks of producers after a lengthy absence.

Kane Re-elected

Again Heads Associated Exhibitors—Two Dividends Declared by Directors

Stockholders of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., held their annual meeting yesterday and re-elected the following directors: Arthur S. Kane, Roy Crawford, Edna R. Pearson, John C. Ragland and John P. Fritts.

George Ham Sharrard was added to the list of directors.

The directors voted to declare a 2 1/2 per cent dividend for the first quarter of 1923 on the company's preferred stock to stockholders of record as of March 25 next, and an accrued and preferred dividend of 2 1/2 per cent for the last four months of 1921 to stockholders of record as of Dec. 31, 1921.

The dividend for the first quarter of 1923 is payable April 4. These dividend declarations make complete the payment of all dividends from March 1, 1921, when the present corporation was formed, until the end of the first quarter of 1923.

Mystery

Surrounds Action of Hiram Abrams Against Adolph Zukor for $25,000

In an action brought in the Supreme Court yesterday, Hiram Abrams seeks $25,000 damages from Adolph Zukor.

The action was filed without the usual complaint being presented. No indication of the purpose of the litigation was given.

All parties involved, as well as counsel, refused to discuss the action, and as a result, there was considerable mystery as to what might be behind the litigation.

Adolph Zukor is en route to Europe.

Berman Back with Abrams

Abe Berman, who recently left United Artists to join Goldwyn, is back with United Artists, in the foreign department.

Goldwyn Signs Frank Mayo

Goldwyn has signed Frank Mayo and Dagmar Godowsky, who will first appear in the Rupert Hughes special, "Souls for Sale." Mayo will be starred or featured later.

Later Sterling Pictures were formed in New Jersey to handle the picture. P. S. Parish and Thomas F. Martin were mentioned in connection with the company's personnel. A test engagement was made in Providence where the picture broke records and caused unusual comment.

One interesting clause in the contract included an American valuation at $175,000.

It was impossible to communicate yesterday with C. R. Seeley who at one time had an interest in the production.

Through Hodkinson

Ernest Shipman has arranged the distribution of three Canadian-made pictures through Hodkinson. These are "The Man From Glengarry," "Hedda for Noshin,'" which was made as "Glengarry School Days" and "The Rapids." All of them were directed by David M. Hartford.

"May Make Series"

Hall, Russell; and Mr. Pfeife, of the Priscilla.
“DRIVEN” REACHES HEIGHTS OF BEST AMERICAN FILMS

By P. W. GALlico.

Title of picture, “DRIVEN.”

Produced and directed by CHARLES BRABIN.

Released by UNIVERSAL.

Presented at the CRITERION THEATRE.

“Driven,” to us, stands out as one of the best photoplays we have ever seen from an American producer. This is a tall statement, but we stick to it. It is powerfully dramatic, brilliantly acted and directed, and makes no concessions.

The producer set out to tell a story of the kind of people who inhabit the mountain regions of the South, and he did it unflinchingly. It is not a pretty picture, but it is an honest picture.

The story is so simple it can be told in a few words. A drab, miserable mother of a vicious mountain brood sells information which leads to its being wiped out in order to assure happiness to her youngest son.

We can recall, perhaps, only two other photoplays in which the inevitability of circumstances has been as powerfully rendered in a series of pictures as it is in “Driven.” There is more real despair and heartbreak in this short film than in all the rest of the so-called “heart” and “mother” pictures put together.

Acting honors belong to Emily Fitzroy, whose portrayal of the woman of the mountains whose family have crushed everyone...

Elinor Fair and Charles Emmet Mack enthusiastic about this film as we would like to. We suggest that you see it.

The photography is excellent, because it does just what it should. It helps to tell the story. The love element between Tommy and Essie is handled so charmingly as we have ever seen it done. It is a picture of life. It is... oh, well, see for yourself.

Nothing Like It

WHEN the program building "Short Stuff" issue of THE FILM DAILY appeared last summer it brought enthusiastic expressions from exhibitors, large and small, throughout the country.

It was so valuable, so informative, so worth while to the entire industry, that it seems assured that the forthcoming issue, devoted to Short Stuff, out February 18, will receive even a more cordial welcome. And as comprehensive, as helpful, as the initial number was the forthcoming issue will be better, in every way.

Exhibitors who are "showmen" and who want to improve their presentation will not only read every word of it, but will file it for future reference and use.

Don't forget the date—Sunday, February 18, 1923.

Without doubt the best "buy" that a producer or distributor of short stuff can make. Our advertising solicitor is as close to you as your 'phone.

Toronto Hit
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—Tax returns for the large cities of Ontario during 1922, by Peter Smith, Provincial Treasurer, indicate that receipts at theaters fell off in a number of centres during the year. This was due, partly at least, to reduction in admission prices, it is believed.

Of the large cities, Ottawa showed a substantial increase over the previous year, however, 1922 being a record year. The tax totals for various cities follow.

Newspaper Opinions

Beginning today and in the future, newspaper opinions will appear with the names of the papers arranged in alphabetic order.

"Drive"—Universal Criterion

AMERICAN—The outdoor scenes were picturesque. * * * The picture was lufu-brous and drawn out, but, although the actors meant well, the title was self-explanatory.

DAILY NEWS—"Driven.", to us, stands out as one of the best photoplays we have ever seen from Mr. Tourneur. This is a tall statement, but we stick to it. It is powerfully dramatic, brilliantly acted and directed, and makes no concessions.

GLOBE—In "Driven" Mr. Charles Brackett has produced a picture which is entitled to take its place among the very best of not only this season but all other seasons. In all respects it is a masterly piece of work.

MAIL—* A photoplay having every element of an exceptional picture, lacking only the spark of greatness to raise it to a lofty niche.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * A really splendid film, the photography of which is exceptionally artistic. If "Driven" doesn't attract large audiences in effete New York it will be New York's fault—and misfortune. Whoever misses seeing this picture misses a film that he or she would have gladly been able to remember.

POST—The film is interestingly unrelated and makes a good picture.

TELEGRAM — "Driven," among season's best.

TIMES—* * * Is one of the most genuine films ever shown on Broadway. It is so photographic in the true sense of the word, and it is unusually well made. * * * As this mother of the mountains, Emily Fitzroy gives a thrilling performance.

TRIBUNE—To us the story was fascinating and real, and Mr. Brackett has done it perfectly. "let the chips fall where they may."

"The Christian"—Goldwyn Capitol

DAILY NEWS—It is a splendid picture, brilliantly acted and directed; but from the standpoint of the box office, a story which under the cinematic treatment of Maurice Tourneur is probably far more compelling than it was in its printed form or on the stage.

EVENING WORLD—* * * "The Christian" was one of the most enjoyable pictures we have seen in years. It is a fine picture to sit down at the Capitol and our advice is: Don't miss it.

GLOBE—Maurice Tourneur has chosen to include so much in his screen version of "The Christian" that the powerful, dramatic punch of the book and play is absent in the picture.

HERALD—The latest screen version represents photography at its very acme of perfection. There are scenes recorded under the inspired direction of Maurice Tourneur which make an emphatic appeal to the aesthetic sense. * * * Story is preposterous.

EVE JOURNAL—Broad in its scope, rich with brilliant adornment and spiced with action, "The Christian" is great not so much for these things as for the fact that it vividly and poignantly presents the soul of a man in whose breast there rages a tremendous struggle.

MAIL—* * * It appears to be a just a movie, with some good and night scenes. Too bad the producer had to stick so closely to the foolish logic and psychology of Sir Hall Caine's book, from which the picture is essentially theatrical.

SUN—Technically "The Christian," at the Capitol this week, is very spiritedly, even vulgarly, put together. * * * Entire picture is essentially theatrical.

TELEGRAM—The interest and anticipation which heralded its advent is undeniably justified, for the manner in which Sir Hall Caine's most famous novel has been adapted for the screen is a real letter achievement.

TIMES—And even those who are not warmed up by its realism may enjoy this film as exciting entertainment. For, aside from its supposed "meaning," the movie melodrama entitled "The Christian" is a stirring production. * * * "The Christian" is an unusually stirring melodrama.

WORLD—In the matter of its merit generally as a picture, it is well above the average in effectiveness. * * * It is worth seeing, and those who can enjoy a thing because it is largely a delight to the sense of sight certainly ought not to miss it.

"Adam and Eva"—F. P. L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—"Adam and Eva" is lively, vigorous, affable and intelligible comedy, and if you can't crack a smile or two, get a copy of somebody to help you out. You are in a bad way.

EVENING WORLD—Is no exception. But "Adam and Eva" will probably acceptable to those legions who do admire Miss Davies as Miss Marian Davies convincingly proves that the public can become what it was never suspected she would—one of the very best screen actresses of the day. * * * The production is an excellent one in every respect. Story, direction, acting, titling, sets, and photography are all far above the average.

HERALD—"Adam and Eva" is, in effect, an amusing comedy, with many beautiful scenes. * * *
More Opposition

Minneapolis—The executive committee of the M. P. T. O. of Minnesota has decided that the proposed uniform contract is not acceptable. It will so inform Sydney S. Cohen and Will H. Hay. The committee declares that, while some clauses indicate an improvement over the existing contract, the new draft is entirely too one-sided.

The M. P. T. O. yesterday issued statements voicing the opposition of the Western New York M. P. T. O. and the Connecticut units to the proposed uniform contract as drawn up. The statement says that the New York unit at a meeting on Feb. 13 discussed the contract and "strong resolutions were adopted directing the officers of this organization to notify all local exchanges operated by these companies to the effect that the members of the M. P. T. O. considered the contract unfair and inequitable." It was further declared that they will authorize legal proceedings, if necessary, to restrain the companies from operating under it.

Court Proceedings For Possession of Blue Mouse House—F. R. & F. and Sobelman Involved (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—The entire local film row is interested in what looks like a battle between Finkelstein and Ruben and Rove and Sobelman over the Blue Mouse theater. Both sides are see to injunctions.

The Blue Mouse is controlled by the Rove Theater Co., of which William Hamm is president; William Rove is managing director. The Sobelman group is headed by William J. Sobelman, president, and his brother, Philip P. Sobelman, general manager.

"Second Fiddle," starring Glenn Hunter, backed by a national advertising campaign in The Saturday Evening Post, offers one of the best box-office buys offered today. It's a Tuttle-Waller production and a Hodkinson picture.

Michigan Ban Off

No Restrictions Against United Artists—Dispute Arose Over Non-Theatrical Bookings

According to Arthur S. Friend, president of Distinctive Prod., the ban on United Artists productions in Michigan has been lifted by the M. P. T. O., of that state.

The action was brought as a result of a meeting arranged in New York by Friend, with W. S. MacLaren, president and H. M. Rieh, general manager of the Michigan unit. Friend originally sent Homer K. Gordon to Detroit to discuss the matter with the exhibitor officials.

M. P. T. O. Convention to Be Held at Sherman, Chicago—Plan Large Exposition at Coliseum

Members of the M. P. T. O. A. were informed this week of the official dates of the national convention, May 19-26, at the Sherman Hotel, Chicago. The business sessions are scheduled to open on May 21.

While the convention headquarters will be held at the Sherman, the actual business will be held on the floor of the Coliseum. In conjunction with the convention, there will be an exposition to be known as the Motion Picture Palace of Progress. Each state unit is entitled to a representation equal to its state representation in Congress. The delegates and alternates must be chosen at least one month in advance of the convention.

File Amended Bill

Federal Trade Commission Action Against Famous Players and Others Somewhat Altered

Washington—The amended complaint of the Federal Trade Commission against the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., Stanley Co. of America, Black New England Theatres, South- ern Theatres in South Carolina, and others, was forwarded by registered mail to all of the defendants yesterday.

The amended complaint of the action which was started Oct. 20, 1921, is somewhat less extended than the original complaint, and is returnable April 5 before the Commission with the customary 30 days being granted to all the defendants to file an answer.

Paragraph 1 of the amended bill of complaint is practically unchanged from that of the original, but in Paragraph 2, the extent of the business of Famous Players is elaborated. Paragraph 15 states that in the first run situation throughout the country, is somewhat elaborated, the amended bill going into the question of the key city first run operation to a greater extent than the same paragraph in the original bill.

Deal Reported Under Way

It was reported late yesterday afternoon that Haring & Blumenthal have pooled their Northern New Jersey theaters with those operated by Frank Hall, and that the entire group of eleven houses would book through the A. B. C. Haring & Blumenthal, according to report, had originally made a deal with Loew but this transaction was said to have been called off. At the Loew offices it was said that no deal had ever been made with Haring & Blumenthal and that it was only being considered. The others could not be reached for a statement.

Lichtman Honored

Guest at Surprise Dinner Given at the Ritz-Carlton Last Night—Sails on the 20th

Jack Bachmann managed, get At Lichtman into the Ritz last night on the pretense of dining with several business men. What Bachmann really did, was to steer Lichtman into a private dining room with a group about 70 folks gathered around for a surprise dinner for Lichtman before he sails for Europe on the 20th.

Everybody had a good time. Naturally Lichtman was surprised. He didn't expect anything like it. Later, when dinner was over, he told the assembled guests it was all that ending up with a few remarks about hoping to continue everyone's friendship in the future. Harry Reichenbach was toastmaster and in that capacity, called on a good many people to say a few words. It was a real party. Among those present were:

Introduce Censorship Repeal Bill

(Per special to THE FILM DAILY)

Albany—The Administration bill to repeal the State Censorship Law was introduced Wednesday by Senator Walker and Assemblyman Dorfmeister, Democratic leaders hearing on the repeal will be held before the Ways and Means Committee, Feb. 27.

Mastaba Off For Coast

(Per special to THE FILM DAILY)

Philadelphia—Jules Mastaba, of the Stanley Company, left yesterday for a two month's trip to the coast, with stops at Chicago, St. Louis and the Grand Canyon. In addition to his family, the party consists of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Gimbel, and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Herold. The private car of the president of the Pennsylvania was placed at the disposal of the party.

Michigan Ban Off

Then they came east and through Michigan, a meeting was arranged at which Hiram Abrams and Albert E. Greer were present. When "Robin Hood" was placed with the Masonic order in Michigan, thus ignoring the first runs, the Michigan theater owners had banned all United Artists releases including "Darrasle," "The Ruling Passion," "The Man Who Played God" and the Griffith Pictures.

File Amended Bill

All of the key clauses in Paragraph 4 in the old complaint, are deleted in the new. Paragraphs 6 to 13 of the old have been more or less incorporated in Paragraph 4 to 10 inclusive in the amended complaint, but Paragraph 10 of the amended bill really gives the gist of the amended action as follows:

"As a further result thereof Famous Players-Lasky Corp. is the largest theater owner in the world, and in one week in the year 1920, more than 6,000 American theaters, or approximately one-third of all the motion picture theaters in the United States, showed nothing but Paramount pictures. and about $7 cents of every dollar that was paid to enter motion picture theaters was paid to enter those theaters which displayed Paramount pictures.

"In acquiring or controlling, in attempting to acquire or control, motion picture theaters, the respondent companies have coerced and intimidated and attempted to coerce and intimidate motion picture theater owners or exhibitors by diver means and methods, which were the following, to wit:

"(a) Threatening to build or lease or operate theaters in competition with exhibitors who refused to sell or lease their houses.

"(b) Threatening to cut off or interfere with the film service of such exhibitors who refused to sell or lease their theaters.

"(c) Secretly offering higher rentals effective upon expiration of leases held by exhibitors who refused to sell or lease their theaters.

"(d) Temporarily reducing the price of admission charged by theaters owned or controlled by the respondent companies, below that charged by exhibitors who refused to sell or lease their theaters.

Mere Opposition

In Connecticut, where a resolution of condemnation was passed at a meeting held in New Haven on Feb. 13, at which it was declared the proposed contract was "unfair, inequitable and lacking in mutuality." Wisconsin, Minnesota, Upper New York and Connecticut again have gone on record as opposing the uniform contract. The Cohen office maintains that these various units are the ultimate aim of the Cohen office in this matter. It is up to them to decide whether or not they want the contract.

Edelheitz Speaks

The attack of the Wisconsin unit yesterday elicited the following statement from Bernard Edelheitz, chairman of the uniform contract committee of the T. O. C.:

"The attack on the uniform contract by the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin, because of Paragraph 12, is not made in a spirit of fairness. It is knowledge of the facts regarding these provisions that has led to this attack."

"The statement that this paragraph would give the producers absolute control of the screens of the country, and that this control could be sold for fabulous sums for political advantage, is purely a charge on the face of it, to be given serious consideration."

"I am certain, that the intelligent exhibitors of the world will understand that such statements as these, are issued for the sole purpose of creating ill-feeling in the industry and not with a view to bringing about a better understanding between exhibitor and producer."

"The uniform contract is certainly the first progressive step in that direction and the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that the parties to the contract, to be based upon mutual rights and obligations."

It is invariably known, that the contracts in vogue hitherto, were entirely one-sided. All of its provisions were in favor of the producer and distributor. The exhibitor was given no rights and remedies under the old form of contract. All of this has been swept away by the provisions of the uniform contract and mutual rights and obligations are provided for by both distributor and exhibitor.

"The legal as well as a common sense interpretation of this provision, as relating to the intention of the parties to the contract, can be understood as meaning, that the exhibitor cannot re-edit pictures by any alteration or addition, but that is all that the above provision means."

The wording of this paragraph gives the producer the right to insert political propaganda or commercial advertising in a picture, is absolutely violating the intentions of the parties and the ordinary meaning of words, which seek to express such intention.

Even without the express provisions contained in the code of ethics which specifies the prohibition of such violation, the exhibitor would be justified in refusing to exhibit a picture containing political propaganda or commercial advertising.

"I repeat, let us be fair to the uniform contract. As I have stated before, on several occasions, it is not 100% of what we sought to accomplish in favor of exhibitors. It was not possible to accomplish all that we sought at the time, but it is certainly a step ahead, let us accept it in spirit, and without any rights and remedies.

"The adopted plan for still further achievements in the near future."

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Duluth, Minn.—J. B. Clinton of the Clinton-Myers Company, operating the Lyceum here intends appealing to the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade decision to Will H. Hays. Action failing in that quarter, Clinton says he will seek redress in the courts.

The controversy arose over a contract which Clinton signed with Manie Gottlieb for 10 Goldwyn pictures, including "The Christian." The contract was supposed to be either approved or rejected by James R. Grainger, Clinton says he was informed later by Clyde Booth, the Goldwyn salesman with whom he closed the contract that certain changes were necessary before approval, changes not to affect "The

Bean Blossom, Ind.

Good Morning Sir:

I notice from time to time you conduct a column in your paper labeled "The Troubles of an Exhibitor" and as a former member of this clique, may I air a few petticoat incidents in my troublesome career as a sponsor of canned amusement in the small but thriving city of Bean Blossom?

I am sure the boys out in the arid wastes of Nevada will appreciate my misfortunes.

To begin with, I was chump enough to trade a perfectly good oyster-shucking facotry for the Weary Hour Cinema, the only temple of amusement in Bean Blossom and from the very outset, grief befell me in a goodly measure.

I will not attempt to enumerate the many provoking situations such as: film Miss-cuts, over-rated specials.

Mike Gore Has Something to Say Regarding the West Coast Theaters

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Relative to the item published recently regarding the Lesser-Gore acquisition of the T. & D. Circuit, Michael Gore and David Berenson, the latter the booking manager of the West Coast Theaters, have issued the following statement:

"Not long ago we had a conference with the heads of various important distributing organizations, at which time we openly allayed their expressed agitation over the steady growth of our West Coast theaters. The expression of our plans, purposes and policies as they had been revealed in the past and would be in the future, completely allayed the fears of these gentlemen and reassured them. We do not know why the agitation has arisen again. Our aims in the matter of the extension of our chain of theaters are merely the aims of good business based on the faith that the entire motion picture industry is in a solvent and growing condition.

"The three branches of the motion picture industry, production, distribution and exhibition are all so intimately related to our Producing Scheme?

Boston Hears Harry Asher and Sam Grand Are Visiting Coast Relative to a New Venture

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Boston—It is reported here that Harry Asher, president of the American Feature Film Co. and Sam Grand are jointly interested in a new producing and that their coast trip is relative to that idea.

Both Asher and Grand left for California on Thursday to be gone about a month. The story in local circles has it that the financial interests known to be identified with American Feature Film are interested in the new move, the exact nature of which is somewhat indefinite. The same financial group, however has financed production in the past. It is believed that Asher will act as advance agent for them. One of the best informed film men in Boston says he understands the enterprise will be an important one.

Loew's Condition Improves

The Mt. Sinai hospital reported yesterday that Arthur Loew's condition is improving steadily. He underwent an operation earlier in the week for appendicitis.

A 50-50 Deal

Underscoring Haring and Blumenthal and Frank G. Hall Are Equal Partners in Theater Deal

One of the chief topics of discussion in local film circles yesterday was the deal closed between the Haring and Blumenthal Enterprises at the French Theater with the theaters in Jersey City, Hoboken and Union Hill.

While repeated efforts to reach the organizers of the deal were employed the deal itself was not the fifty-fifty arrangement between the two parties. One angle that was spoken of repeatedly was the fact that the negotiations with Loew had been terminated after it was generally taken for granted that the deal was all set.

The houses involved are high class. Those of the Haring and Blumenthal chain are the Central, National, Tivoli and Monticello. Jersey City is the Lincoln, Union Hill and the Roosevelt. West Hoboken. The Hall house is the State and Ritz. Jersey City is the Strand, Hoboken and the twin theaters. The State and Ritz is a Union Hill. In point of number of valuation, it is believed the deal is the most important in local exhibiting circles in a considerable time.

Deitrich Out of Cosmopolitan

It is understood that Theodore Deitrich, has resigned as publicity director for Cosmopolitan.

"Covered Wagon" at Criterion

"The Covered Wagon" goes into the Criterion on March 19 for an indefinite run.

Robert Brunton Dangerously Ill

John Brunton is due in New York today from Florida in time to sail for London where his brother, Robert Brunton, founder of the Brunton United studio is dangerously ill.

Tully Leaves for Coast

Richard Walton Tully left for California yesterday to begin work as production manager of two First National coast units. Tully will continue his activities as a producer, his next picture being "Trilby." Philip Korda and Ray Coffin his assistants went with him.

Won't Release Negris

It is understood that, by virtue of the deal whereby Famous Players secured control of the Hamilton Theatrical Corp., several Pola Negri old of vintage changed hands. The pictures are now in the Famous Players vaults but will never be re-released in this country, at least.

Christian. Later, Clinton says, he was informed that the rental for "The Christian" which had been quoted at $750, would be increased to $1,000 with a fifty-fifty arrangement over a gross of $4,500. Clinton averes he had already advertised the picture extensively for "The Lyceum. He appealed to the Minneapolis film board and at the same time agreed to pay the increased rental rather than disfigure his future big picture. The contract was signed under protest, following a special grievance committee meet, the entire committee was called.

Clinton said he would abide by the decision of the committee as final. If he agreed to do. This, the latter refused to do.

Late yesterday, the Hays office had not received any communication from Clinton.

C. & A. Train Shows Films

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

St. Louis—The Chicago and Alton Railroad gave patrons of its "Limited Red" train a complete picture show on route Chicago to St. Louis on Monday. A coach fitted out as a theater with two Acme projectors and Da-lite screen and seating 45 passengers, gave three complete 2-hour shows on the eight-hour trip. Newspaper and trade press representatives accompanied the car from Chicago and St. Louis.

Ban On Liquor

Informative Bootlegging and Jests on Prohibition. Get Shars in Pennsylvania

(Harrisburg, Pa.—Acting apparently on orders from Griffith Flincht, newly elected governor, Harry Knapp, chairman of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors, has issued orders to eliminate all actions which tend to be informative on bootlegging and the liquor traffic, slurs on state and national prohibition laws; and all jests which pertain to prohibition or enforcement officers.

Just how far this order will go is a problem at the moment, but it is certain to hit many comedy situations which have made prohibition the basis of plot and action. One of the first features which came in under the new order had eliminations made of bootleggers handing out drinks to customers at such a glass, and this situation was classed as "informative" bootlegging.

Tax For Dakota?

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Bismarck, N. Dak.—A bill placing a 10% on all admissions has been introduced in the Dakota legislature. The measure would make no exception of theaters charging 10% admissions, exempted under the Federal law.

10% Tax For Iowa

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Des Moines—A bill providing for a 10% admission tax has been presented to the State Legislature with the report of a special tax commission authorized by the preceding Assem- bly. The measure, which if passed, goes into effect July 1, 1923, will produce $2,000,000 annually. Administration is placed in the hands of the state board of assessment, also created by another bill in the commis- sion's report.

AND READ WHAT THEY SAY

NEW YORK:

"Carl Laemmle rings the bell with 'The Flame of Life.' Priscilla Dean is most effective. We think highly of Mr. Henley and 'The Flame of Life.'"

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

"Vivid and vital—acting exceptionally fine, direction truly inspired! Not a moment when it fails to grip one's attention. Get it quick! Suitable for big and little houses everywhere!"

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"Away from the ordinary routine of screen plays! A worth while offering—should appeal to everyone. It's a real live piece of excitement. Is going not only to please, but thrill! Go the limit on promises, the picture is really there!"

FILM DAILY

"Vivid picture of life—holds the interest in a tight grip from start to finish. Scenes so realistic that they possess a powerful appeal. Should have a 100% appeal!"

HARRISON'S REPORTS

"In cast this picture holds its own with any of the productions turned out by what are classed the better program producers and in direction there is nothing that can be asked for. The picture establishes Priscilla Dean as a character actress of no mean ability!"

CHICAGO:

"Priscilla Dean is splendid in this! Here is the best picture Universal studios have turned out in a long time, and one of the most vivid and entertaining productions we have seen this season. Priscilla Dean is an actress whose ability seems to grow with each succeeding picture, and I am sure you will be one of her admirers after you have seen this picture."

CHICAGO EVENING POST

"Again Priscilla Dean proves her right to the title of 'one of the screen's best actresses.' She furnishes the silver sheet with another brilliant bit of impersonation that will live to her credit. As a photoplay it is mighty interesting. CERTAINLY you are going to love Miss Dean. The sets and scenery are splendid. So is the acting. So is the direction."

CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE

"Bristles with the dramatic! A climax that is suspenseful to the last degree. Fine entertainment for any screen! A strong, fast moving story that should jar any audience with the force of its appeal and its excellent characterizations!"

Planned by Palmer Photoplay—Promise a New Studio in Hollywood as Headquarters

Palmer Photoplay Corp., announced on Saturday it intended extending its activities along production lines, and that it expected to turn out 52 pictures a year. A new studio will house the production activities of the company. This will be built in Los Angeles, in the near future, according to the company.

The series will be made primarily of distribution to churches, technical schools, and colleges, and will be an addition to regular features, the price of which, "Out of the Night," is one cent. Production on the new studio, Palmer is developing its own writer, through a department of which Clayton Hamilton is the head.

Quit It

Press agents who continue to publicize big figures should be canned. Awhile ago it may have been all right. To talk about the $100,000 series. And millions incomes. Of stars. And others. But that didn't last long time ago. Certainly it should have. There are far too many clamor howlers. And wannabes. Who use the figures the wrong way. And every time they do. It costs a lot.

Latest offender. Someone who sent out a yarn that Irving Mayer was paying Irving Thalberg $100,000 a year as assistant in production. Everybody in the business knows this couldn't be true. Despite that Irving Thalberg is a mighty smart man. This sort of bunk gets big headlines but causes a lot of trouble.

THAT AMENDED COMPLAINT

It took the Federal Trade Commission something like 18 months to amend the complaint against Famous Players. And Mastbaum, Saenger, Lynch and others. The amended bill is interesting. It splits up separate counts the alleged actions of the various defendants in what is claimed to be the unlawful acquiring of theaters. And the action against Famous in what is considered to be unlawful on the part of Famous in getting their pictures exhibited.

In view of various changes that have occurred, including the action of the Hays organization, as well as the acquiring of the Black and Lynch houses by Famous, it looks (to a layman) that

Through United?

A First National Series Will Probably Go Through Abrams Unit as Reissues

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—It is understood that the series of comedies made by Chaplin for First National will be reissued through United Artists when the distributing rights on them revert back to Chaplin. Two, "A Dog's Life" and "Shoulder Arms," revert back in April and October of this year; "Mrs. Bryan" on May 19; "The Kid," in Dec. 22, "The Idle Class" in April 18, 1926, "The Day," on March 20, 1927 and "The Kid," on Feb. 21, 1927.

Hiram Abrams states he has heard nothing that would indicate the First National Chaplins would be reissued through United Artists. William M. Vogel, foreign distributor, pointed out recently that because of the various release dates of Chaplins in the foreign market, he would control those rights for some time to come.

Two hundred prints have been ordered for 'The Pilgrim,' Chaplin's new Four Reel, which goes into the Strand on the 25th, for two weeks.

The total order will probably go to 225 before the picture starts its national release run it simultaneously begins Monday, March 19th.

If the print order reaches 225, it's believed a new high record will have been established. Those on "The Kid" did not reach that number.

so far as the renting of films is concerned that many, if not all of the matters set up against Famous have been eliminated, even admitting that they had occurred. Of course this isn't a legal decision. And maybe the Commission will find this all wrong. But we'll see what we see.

HIGH ART
Going into the Criterion next week. "Othello." Emil Jannings does the Moor. And what a performance he gives!

Big question simply this: do they want Shakespeare on the screen? If they do they are going to like this one. May be a fair test. May not. But there has been such a vogue of Shakespeare along Broadway of late that this may work out. This is sure it's a real picture.

POLA AND CHARLIE
Pola Negri. Objects to appearing in a gauzy night dress in a shipwreck scene. Says Charlie might not like it. A-hem. Let's see. Didn't Pola make some pictures in Europe that were—well, you know. But then Charlie hadn't arrived in those days.

Incidentally there are mutterings from the Coast. That everything isn't so happy. Among the other Famous stars. Over the attention and publicity. And pictures. Which Pola is getting. Jealousy.

VALUES

Prices for picture rights to important plays and books continue soaring. The latest to make the industry gasp is the report that the heirs of Lewis Wallace only want the piffing sum of $350,000 for the picture rights for "The Prince of India."

When, oh when, will this sort of thing stop?

Incidentally, Broadway gossip has it that an offer of $30,000 was turned down by the owners of "Listening In" at the Bijou. It is said that Jules Mastbaum and others of the Stanley Co., and Ben Moss are back of the production. They should know something about values for picture rights.

Wonder if any producer has thought of picturizing "Black Oxen?"

NEW STARS
London reports are to the effect that J. Stuart Blackton's two little daughters carried off the honors at the showing of "The Virgin Queen," just presented with Lady Diana Manners in the leading role. The older of the Blackton children is but twelve.

LONG FEATURES
Did you notice what a lot of important exhibitors and others had to say in yesterday's issue with regard to the length of feature productions? Maybe somebody in production circles will take heed.

HARRY AND RUDY
Harry Fields, who did the impression act at many openings for Fox, is associated with Rudy Valentinio. Just in what capacity, seems indefinite. Incidentally, Harry and Rudy were on the Chicago and Alton train going to St. Louis, and upon which were shown the first motion pictures in history. Universal had the honor of being on the first program. Priscilla Dean in "The Flame of Life" and a Baby Peggy comedy.

"Mystery" Night

Holtown, Pa.—The Lotus theater inaugurated a "mystery" night, but the name of the feature as well as the rest of the program remains a mystery until screened. After the performance patrons are given mystery prizes.

Cars $100 Reward

Birmingham, Ala.—The Alcazar, a 85 run house here announce a reward of $100 to any person who can provide a picture during the next 12 months in any other house in the city where it is shown there. This is given a great business builder.

Lunches Anti-Gimmie Society

St. Louis—To exploit the showing of "Gimmie" at the Delmonte Lynch & Co., it is hoped to inaugurate a "Gimmie" Society by the St. Louis managers. The occasion was opened by a tip for waiting, to calling taxis. The majority of the patrons have laid off the stunt with a vengeance, giving it much space. The feature is currently showing in 30 or more cities, and then the Delmonte is rung its advertising, revealing that "Gimmie," was the feature at the house.

Good Break

St. Louis—The St. Louis Globemac is one of the many St. Louis films used in "Back to Back," and "Baba," and "Slang," or George Ade. When the film was played "Back to Back," the paper published the idea of a split one-sheet poster announcing the picture and Globe-Democrat feature. Stuart paid for the printing and made it available for use and the newspaper paid for the paper in the billboards around the newsstands.

Airplane Stunt

Perth, Australia—What Fox claims is a stunt is, as a means of advertising, the first airplane to be used in a similar manner by the Royal theater in exploiting "The Last Trail." The plane distributed several thousand leaflets bearing announcement of "The Last Trail" playing the house; among the leaflets were many tickets for free flights. Large crowds gathered when the plane flight was announced in the daily papers with a result that the admissions at the Royal doubled.

Coast Labor Situation Serious
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Carpenters, electricians and painters employed in local studios are becoming dissatisfied with working conditions, threatening a strike which may greatly handicap production. The workers have asked for $2 a day more than they are now receiving and are kicking because of the time they lose due to unfavorable weather conditions and the uncertainty of their employment.

A committee appointed by the Motion Picture Producers' Ass'n, and labor representatives have been holding meetings lately to discuss the situation. J. W. Engel, Irving Thalberg and Abraham Lehr, are on the committee.

Coast Brevities

Cosmopolitan to Replace Harlem Plant—Loss Revised to $600,000

Cosmopolitan Prod. expects it will take about three months to rebuild the studio at 126th St. and Harlem which was badly damaged by fire on Saturday. The loss to the building and contents was estimated at between $500,000 and $600,000, fully covered by insurance.

Films saved by the firemen, included the negatives of “Enemies of Women” and “Little Old New York.” The making of the latter picture, will proceed this morning in three different studios, one on Jackson Ave., another the Tifflord studio and the third, the Tre-Art plant. Offices are to be established at Columbus Circle.

Sets and props for “Little Old New York” on which work had been going off for weeks and which was about two-thirds finished, were all destroyed, including expensive ballroom furniture, paintings, sculptures and other works of art.

Goldwyn Active

Goldwyn stock was exceptionally active on the Stock Exchange yesterday. 8,400 shares changed hands, opening at 6 and closing at $54.

“Movie Day” Plans Completed

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—Plans for Michigan’s Motion Picture Day Celebration are practically completed. W. S. McLaren, president of the M. P. T. O. of Michigan, will act as toastmaster. Some of those who have consented to be present are Sidney Cohen, Marcus Lescow, Mayor Lodge, Senator Copeland, E. W. Hammons, J. M. Quinn, H. B. Warner, J. R. Grainger, and others.

“The Last Hour” will keep you on the edge of your seat,” writes P. G. Gallico in the N. Y. Daily News, and then goes on to say, “if you like suspense you’ll be surprised. . . . has a new idea, is well directed and interesting.”—Adv.

Three New Series

Planned by Louis B. Mayer—Signs Earle Williams as a Featured Player

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—According to the Times, Louis B. Mayer intends adding three new series to his production activities, thus increasing his units to six. The names of the three new directors are not divulged.

The same article also states that Earle Williams, Renee Adorée and Huntsley Gordon have been signed.

Paul Mooney, Mayer’s Eastern representative, stated yesterday he hadn’t heard about the new directors.

Famous Players Must Then File Reply to Trade Commission—Hearing Soon Perhaps

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Famous Players-Lasky and other defendants in the amended complaint filed by the Federal Trade Commission, must have their answer filed by March 14. The actual testimony will be taken sometime after April 15.

Just on what date the hearings will open is doubtful. It depends on the calendar and number of cases yet to be heard by the commissioners. The widespread nature of the defendants’ activities will probably necessitate taking testimony in various parts of the country.

Play Goes to Goldwyn—Seems Likely That Victor Seastrom Will Direct It

“R. U. R.,” the Theater Guild production which has been running on Broadway for about six months, has been purchased by Goldwyn. While no announcement has been made for whom it was bought, it seems to be a logical selection for Victor Seastrom.

The play was written by the Capek brothers, who revolved the action around the “robots” or manufactured human beings. It has the Continental flavor that Seastrom has been treating in his Swedish Biograph productions.

Franklin, Barrymore’s Director

Sydney Franklin will direct John Barrymore in “Beau Brummel” for Warner Bros.

Newspaper Opinions

"Down to the Sea in Ships"—Hodkinson—Camel

AMERICAN—Every man who loves the sea and every woman who loves adventure will enjoy "Down to the Sea in Ships," * * * The story is vivid, tremendously exciting and remarkable in its accurate presentation of the ways and days aboard a whaler a hundred years ago.

EVENING WORLD—Here, at least, is a sea picture that is a sea picture. * * * We wouldn't have missed "Down to the Sea in Ships" for a whole lot.

GLOBE—In fact, the picture at the Cameo looks to me like a sea production made by Clifton. Every trick of casting, of photography, of dramatic continuity and so on, which has gone to make the Griffith masterpiece so successful, is included in "Down to the Sea in Ships." The result is what seems to me to be without question the greatest picture of its type yet made.

HERALD—"Down to the Sea in Ships" is genuinely fine achievement.

It possesses an epic quality which is regrettably rare in motion pictures. * * * Mr. Clifton deserves unlimited credit for "Down to the Sea in Ships." He worked hard and he worked intelligently—and the results are thoroughly worthy of the labor and care efforts.

MAIL—* * * will delight all those who like the sea and its pets. Despite * * * draws "Down to the Sa in Ships" is one of the most realistic photos in ever produced. It contains a cast of characters that is perfect for this type of picture. It is an awesome entertainment.

POST—Elmer Clifton has presented a novelty, and a thrilling one, too. * * * SUN—For this Elmer Clifton production is the best and most exciting picture the Cameo Theater has ever had. * * * It is a running, swiftly pulsating tale of New Bedford nearly a century ago.

TELEGRAM—* * * is a sea adventure story about the most thrilling moments, it is one of the most beautiful films ever shown.

TIMES—It is not even a good regulation movie, for its continuity is poor and its melodramatic action is perfunctory and often obscure.

"Racing Hearts"—F. P. L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—However, the race scene was certainly a vivid and realistic affair, we think it was the longest race I have ever seen or ridden in. The race is fast, pleasant and exhilarating, and those who rate at this level will be thrilled by it. At any rate, it was extremely well done.

DAILY NEWS—Feature only fair to see; it lacks originality.

EVENING JOURNAL—The tasks set before Miss Ayres and Richard Dix, her leading man, are arduous and their performances are adequate.

EVENING WORLD—It's a good picture and well worth an afternoon or evening's time.

GLOBE—Be it said, however, that the automobile race is the best that we have ever witnessed.

MAIL—If you like thrills furnished by spills of racing cars you will like this picture.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The picture has been admirably directed, and contains a little comedy touches which go to make a picture of this sort really worth while.

POST—* * * is an enjoyable film with many humorous moments.

SUN—As Agnes Ayres in "Racing Hearts" at the Rivoli this week proves as good a feminine substitute for Wallace Reid as you could get after canvassing the film colony.

TELEGRAM—* * * thrilling dramatic feature.

TRUE—The story is simple, but amusing. * * * It is amusingly worked out.

WORLD—* * * a snappy little film comedy.

"The Hottentot"—1st Nat'l Strand

EVENING JOURNAL—* * * is an extremely amusing picture. It deserves rank with that classic film comedy, "Twenty-three and One-half Hours, Leave," and will be enjoyed by many who will consider it better than its joyous predecessor.

EVENING WORLD—Laugh and grow fat is must true. We know Bigいつ on ten pounds while viewing "The Hottentot" at the Strand yesterday. * * * For "The Hottentot" has more to it than comedy, much. It has working good story and as thrilling a race scene as I've seen on good fortune to be seen.

GLOBE—At any rate, it is very funny and handles the absurd situations very capably.

MAIL—It is genuinely humorous and kept the spectator in laughter throughout the performance. Douglas MacLean, as Sam Harrington, who is in mortal fear of horses, has proved himself to be one of the best light comedians in the movies.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—A very amusing photographic picture has been made from "The Hottentot." Douglas MacLean is a very satisfying substitute for the original star, and Fadge Bellamy makes a pretty and spunky heroine.

POST—the race with some splendid trick photography is as real and as thrilling as anything of its kind seen on the screen. William Collier's play has been made into a laughable film in which Douglas MacLean plays the heroic and causes as much laughter as some of our best comedians on the screen.

TIMES—For they have made a mery screen farce of "The Hottentot." In some region it outdoes the stage production. * * It's all foolishness, and, of course, and it would be better in two or three seats than in the few or six allowed it the stage. Foolishness is a welcome relief from the laboring souls of most photographs.

In giving credit * * * one must not overlook the work of Douglas MacLean, in "The Hottentot" at the Strand this week is an exceptionally amusing picture.

TRUE—"The Hottentot" is the sort of picture that must necessarily appeal to all members of the family.

TIMES—There is a race in this picture also, the best we ever saw on the screen, but this is a stepchild. * * * The story is lean, but the big race makes up for any lack one may feel. And Douglas MacLean is an extremely clever comedian.

"Backbone Preview"—"Backbone" will be given a private showing at the Strand this morning.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

A Direct Method

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Eau Claire, Wis.—W. H. Branch, local Goldwyner, arranged with the Eau Claire Baking Co. to wrap 10,000 loaves of bread with a herald, reading: "For Your Banquet Use Old Home Bread, for "The Stranger's Banquet" go to the Grand Saturday and Sunday.

"Masquerader" All Lit Up

Madison, Wis.—A. P. Desormeaux of the Strand found a new angle for exploiting "The Masquerader" in the use of the street ballyhoo. A masked man was invested with evening clothes and sent on the streets all lit up. This was effected by stenciling the front of his stiff shirt to read: "The Strand Now, The Masquerader." A tiny piece of linen was posted over this and underneath small electric light bulbs were placed and connected with the battery on his pocket by a button in the glove.

The masked figure invested with new lights was a certain eye-arrester. His route was unrestricted. He appeared in hotel lobbies, at street car intersections, in fact, in any place where he was likely to collect a crowd.

A Personal Touch

San Bernardino, Cal.—During the run of "The Strangers' Banquet," at the Strand, Frank Browne mailed 550 post cards, bearing a personal message from a friend visiting Los Angeles, urging the recipient to see the picture when it came to their town.

"Sheik" Stunt

Harrisburg—A very effective stunt was recently pulled here by one of the local houses when showing "The Sheik." A "sheik" accompanied by a bodyguard and a negro footman, appeared in the central business section of the city in an automobile of flashy design. The car rolled up to the curb in front of several big stores, one after the other. At each store the negro footman would jump out of the car, brush the pedestrians to one side and spread a rich Oriental rug from the curb to the doorway of the store. Then his heightness, the "sheik," would alight from the car, and walk on the carpet into the store. When the car rolled down the avenue crowds saw posters on the tail end advertising "The Sheik."

Abandons "Faust"

Mary Pickford Will Not Make It—No Decision Reached Regarding New Vehicle.

Coast reports yesterday indicated that Mary Pickford had abandoned her plans to produce "Faust," after the subject had been discussed and practically decided upon. Miss Pickford originally planned to make Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall but this was put off in favor of "Faust." It is understood that a number of protests were registered by exhibitors and that these bore some weight in the final decision. It was likewise reported that "Dorothy Vernon" will not go into immediate production. Whatever subject is selected, it is assured that Ernst Lubitsch will direct it.

De Mille May Work in Palestine

Cecil De Mille may film "Ten Commandments" in Palestine. Al Kaufman left for Hollywood yesterday to discuss the arrangements. Jeanie MacPherson who has been here for about a month is also en route West to prepare the script. Paramount announced Robert Agnew had signed a five-year contract with the coast stock company.

Code In Works

Arbitration Clauses Will Be Ready in Few Weeks—Lawyers Still at Work.

Members of the law committee of the Hay’s organization are at work re- vamping the arbitration clauses to be used in conjunction with the proposed uniform contract. In about two weeks, the changes will be made and a final draft prepared for use of the company members. It is known that the law committee has to work very carefully and very slowly and that although the changes while in completed form, may appear only slightly different from the original draft they really involve a good deal of thought so far as the legal phases are concerned.

Goldwyn Signs George Walsh

Goldwyn will feature George Walsh in a number of productions. Walsh has one of the important roles in "Vanity Fair."

Valentino Going to London?

It was reported yesterday that Rudolph Valentino would go to London to appear in a version of the "Music Box." Arthur Butler Graham, his attorney, could not be reached for a statement.

Mastbaum The Chief?

Chicago Reports Pick at Chicago to Head New Fairbanks-Pickford-Chaplin Unit—News to Abrams.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—Local newspapers discuss the possibility of Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Co. of America becoming the head of a new producing organization to be headed by Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Pola Negri. The Tribune says:

"Are four famous motion picture stars, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, and Pola Negri, soon to become one mammoth screen constellation?"

"Chicago was still unformed as to the truth of the rumor which has been exciting the city circles for a month, when Jules Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America, left last night on the Santa Fe for California.

"During his twelve hour stay in the city, Mr. Mastbaum, one of the biggest motion picture men in the East, refused to affirm or deny any statements regarding the expected combination."

"Before I left New York," he explained, "I gave my word that I would make no definite statement before my arrival on the coast."

"If the merger is effected Mastbaum, it is predicted, will direct the affairs of the four stars."

News To Abrams

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

La Junta, Colo.—Hiram Abrams, ex-reporter of California, where he admitted that he denies any knowledge of the reports appearing in Chicago papers which credit Jules E. Mastbaum with going to New York to become president of a new all-star company planned by Pickford, Fairbanks and Chaplin.

A Correction

A typographical error in yesterday's issue stated that Harold Lloyd would tour the world with Mildred Harris. Of course, the name should have been Mildred Davis.

Color Shots in "Adam's Rib"

One of the sequences in "Adam's Rib," which comes to the Rivoli next week, is a sequence in which a number of Japanese lanterns in a hall room reflect various colors.

Kill Missouri Bill

Led by Rev. Howard Billman, secretary of the Committee and of the St. Louis Church Federation, the reform element put up a strenuous fight for the bill in committee. The lobby is still endeavoring to have the measure revived on the floor of the house when the committee makes its report. There is also an outside chance that some action toward slipping through a bill via the Senate will be made, but with but twenty-four days remaining which to pass bills before the session dies there is little danger from that quarter.

Sues Hays As

E. Samuelson of Newton, N. J. Alleges Conspiracy to Shut Him and Wants $100,000

A complaint was filed in the County Clerk's office on Wednesday by Sidney E. Samuelson of Newton, New Jersey against Will H. Hays, as president of the Motion Picture and Producers Ass'n of America, the association's individual members, the officers of the F. I. L. M. Club and the Hoy Reporting Service, charging conspiracy and an attempt to drive him out of business.

Samuelson operates the Park theater in Newton. The complaint alleges that in April 1922 he contracted for "Ten Nights in a Barroom" from the Arrows. Two days later, according to the papers, he informed Arrow that he intended cancelling the contract. It is alleged he was then informed that unless he held himself to the contract he would be restrained of the joint arbitration board filed a judgment of $100 against him. Samuelson alleges that he refused to recognize the film as planned and the film service was then cut off from the Park by the other exchanges.

The complaint involves the Hays organization on the ground that the actions of the exchanges were taken under the direction and participation of Hays.

Samuelson's complaint seeks a four fold injunction. He is seeking an injunction to restrain the defendants from refusing service; from demanding exhibitor advance deposits for films; from charging exhibitor prices for films and from forcing him to subscribe to the decisions of the arbitration board.

He alleges that he was considering the construction of a new theater in Newton at the time and that the actions of the defendants total over 40 in number killed those plans. He therefore considers he has been damaged to the extent of $150,000.

Slams "Politicians"
Charles O'Reilly Scorses Attacks on Uniform Contract—Sees Need for Nat'l T. O. C. C.

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the M. P. T. O. of New York State, addressed the A. M. P. A. on the uniform contract Wednesday. He took occasion to slam the objections of "film politicians," as he termed them, to "fancied wrongs" in the contract, and said that progressive exhibitors of the country could not fail to see the decided advantages of the new draft over the present form of contract.

O'Reilly blamed high rentals on the disorganized condition of exhibitors and while he had words of praise for Hays throughout practically all of his talk, he did assert that the organized producers and distributors under Hays' leadership had brought about increased rentals "in almost the same ratio as theater attendance had decreased." He placed that figure at 25%.

"Rosita," Mary's Next Spanish Story Brought Over by Lubitsch—Will Make "Dorothy Vernon" at Same Time

Los Angeles—Confirmation is made of the report that Mary Pickford has abandoned "Faust," as reported in THE FILM DAILY yesterday. Miss Pickford will work concurrently on "Rosita" and "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." "Rosita" was brought over from Berlin by Ernest Lubitsch, who will direct. The story is laid in Spain in the 15th century. Chevalier, who is appearing in the opera in Paris, will come over for one of the parts, while Holbrook Blinn is in all likelihood, will play the king.

Douglas Fairbanks, incidentally states he will not make his next picture in color, this because of the excessive cost of production. The length of time necessary to make sufficient prints and lack of equipment on the coast.

Tilley Sees America’s Chance
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—Frank A. Tilley, editor of Kinetograph Weekly, says America at last has a real chance to do worthwhile things through Victor Seastrom. “Kiné is usually conservative, but Tilley’s praise of Seastrom is lavish. He says: ‘Whether America knows it or not, it is the greatest thing in the history of motion pictures that she has ever done, if it be that she has been and understood what Seastrom was doing and would have accomplished in Sweden. But she must not be deterred; she must not be forced along the mistaken ‘popular’ lines of punch and pop and zip and all the rest of the farrago of the kaboodle illiterates who dominate the screen.’

Newspaper Opinions

“The Message of Emile Coue”
Edw.—Rivoli

MORNING TELEGRAPH—M. Coue proves to be a good pantomimist and his dominating personality holds the undivided attention of the audience. The picture was greeted with hearty applause.

TRIBUNE—A picture called “The Message of Emile Coue” is very well done. There was more applause at the end of the picture than there is usually after a feature.

EVENING WORLD—Emile Coue is an earnest movie actor.

GLOBE—M. Coue screens exceedingly well. He has the proper sort of features and a way of looking that goes individually to every spectator.

MAIL—The Message of Emile Coue” is a fitting successor to “The Einstein Theory of Relativity.” Through the medium of the picture one is able to grasp more readily the purport of Coue’s ideas and their application.

The Troubles of An

Film Daily—
Missouri certainly is the "show me" state, and that would like to have you let me know by telegraph when Clem Deneker, in Nevada, is going to show the scenario picture that Izy Ottsa \nuse.

Where does Izy get that stuff? Why they even quit running the freight train into his town. He talks about writing and using the pencil.
I saw him shoot craps once and he don't make Little Joe or Big Dick with a lead pencil.
I run a general store here and also have the local moving picture show.
A slicker come to town the other day, and started talking about OLIVER TWIST and how it would get me the money. I gave him an order for a dozen plugs, thinking he was a tobacco salesman because I have a good line of chewing tobacco for the boys in town, such as Granger Twint and Honey Dip Twist, but I found out this slicker was not selling tobacco, but he was selling spoils of film. I am also the commander of the American Legion.

Stars Form Ass'n
Coast Protective Organization, Long Talked of, Finally Takes Concrete Form
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—At a meeting, which lasted until after 2 o'clock Thursday morning, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Harold Lloyd, Dennis F.
O'Brien, representing D.W. Griffith, and Joseph M. Schenck, representing Norma and Constance Talmadge, definitely formed their new organization, which plans to check the evils of exhibitor booking combines.
All parties pledged a substantial amount to meet the expected cost of operation of the new organization, for which a name will be decided upon in a few days. It is planned by the group interested to begin functioning practically at once.
Under the proposed plan, an exhibitor or a combination of exhibitors will not have the right to play the production of any of the stars mentioned, unless a fair price for the production for any, one or all of them is paid. Where it is necessary, the stars will finance theater construction in those cities where all of their pictures can be played. The new arrangement will in no way conflict with the releasing arrangements of any of the stars. Any star of accepted importance, and comparing in box-office value, will be able to join the organization if agreeable to all of the members.
Joe Schenck is the authority for the statement that Jules E. Masbaum of the Stanely Co. of America has nothing whatsoever to do with the new organization, and laughed at the idea of Masbaum becoming its president.

The Associated Press, in reporting the formation of the new organization on the coast, quotes the declarations formed by the interests involved.

"The text of this declaration as given by the Associated Press follows:"
"Certain combinations and groups of persons and corporations are being formed in the motion picture business which will dwarf the artistic growth which we are trying to keep alive.
Those who are responsible for this threat, are blacklisted for the time time to form an organization which will protect the independent producer and the independent exhibitor against the commercial combinations and enable us to keep faith with the public."

Paramount Signs Ralph Ince
Ralph Ince has signed a contract with Paramount to direct Dorothy Dalton in one picture. It will be made in the east.

Tom Meighan on "Legit"
It is reported that Tom Meighan will appear in a stage version of "Back Home and Broke." This will not interfere with his work for Paramount.

Al Feinman sends the following telegram from Boston:

"Preparing an elaborate exploitation campaign for "Erass," which will have its world premiere at the Park, March 5th. Production is hooked for an indefinite engagement."

This slicker salesman also wore a Legion Post hat, which is talking about a picture called "THE MASQUERADER." When I asked him the Legion number of Capt. Bates, Post he nearly hit me, explaining to me that this was not a Legion Post, but the name of an actor, and it had nothing at all to do with the Legion of the First World War. I have in front of the general store. This slicker tried to tell me that this was an Irishman so tough that after he died his friends would sit around at a wake to watch him. Do you think this is done so that in case the corpse comes to life he can't start a scrap?

I am rather suspicious of this salesman because he was an Irishman working for a Jewish concern. Not that I am curious or anything, but after the salesman left here, I found a letter that he accidentally left laying on my cracker barrel. It is funny that the boys who were playing checkers did not get hold of it. The letter reads as follows:

"Dear Mr. O'Brien: On your expense account for last week, we see an item for $3.50 for a horse and buggy. Please explain to our Auditing Department what you paid for the buggy, and how can you carry the horse with you? There is also another item for $1600 for sleeping car tickets. When you first went to work for us, you told us you were a wide awake salesman. We also note that last week you did $1,000.00 worth of business, yet this week you report only $995.00 worth. This leads us to believe that you are loafing on the job.

Yours truly,
JIPPUF FILM COMPANY."

I am enclosing, herewith, a stamped envelope with one cent stamp for a reply. Do not seal the letter as I am going to let it lay in the post office, and I am not going to post it so that the post master can read it. This is to get publicity because it will mean less my theater from a new angle.

You can answer this letter in care of Harry Weiss, First National, St. Louis, because when he delivers the letter to Issy Oestl at Castoroy, he will be glad to drive over here. Best regards to your family if you have one.

Yours very truly,
V. E. R. PLATZ.

“Gimme” Helped Masons

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Battle Creek—The local Mason order took 20,000 tickets from The Bijou theater to be sold on a percentage basis when “Gimme” was playing the house.

The Masons were conducting a campaign to raise $150,000 for new buildings, and A. W. Force, manager of the theater, sold them the idea when he invited them to a special screening of the film. As a result, the Masons made money for their new home and Force made money for the Bijou.

New Angle for “Fast Mail”

Duluth—A new angle to the automobile—locomotive street stunts for “The Fast Mail” was used by the management of the Zelda, by tying up with an automobile agency the use of a car and operator was received without any charge to the management.

Prominently displayed on the body of the rubber tire of the locomotive was advertising for the picture at the Zelda. The direct tie-up with the automobile company read: “Rosenholtz’s Oakland Car and Service—Speedy as ‘The Fast Mail.’”

A Real Flirt

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Boston—Phil Kahn, of the American Feature Film, distributor of Universal Films, put over the “The Flop” locally by distributing several thousand animated heralds bearing the picture of a flirt with movable eyes. The eyes were made movable by moving the herald slowly up and down.

Newsies Advertise “Heroes”

Detroit—During the run of “He- roes of the Street” at Kunsky’s Madison, the management gave a special morning matinee for the newsboys, made possible by the Times, bringing considerable free space in the paper. There were 3500 boys at the showing, and each was presented with a Wesley Barry police cap and novelty puzzles.

A cameraman, especially engaged, filmed the occasion, shown later at the Capitol and Adams.

A Selected Screening

Atlanta—“The Christian” was recently given a showing at the Howard to several Literary Clubs, Drama Leagues and the press, eight days prior to the opening. Cards were distributed to the guests to obtain a consensus of opinion which was very favorable. The written opinions together with the three-day teaser campaign, show cards, car cards, a float representing the book; a 10,000 mailing list and an attractive lobby display put the picture over.

National “Robin Hood” Tieup

Pittsburgh—Pete Smith director of exploitation for Douglas Fairbanks launched a campaign for the showing of “Robin Hood” at the Pit where he perfected a national tieup with the manufacturers of Lion Brand Collars.

The co-operative stunt consists of a special advertising drive for a collar named the Robin Hood, the displays and advertising tying up with the theater’s announcements.

According to Smith all the exhibitors has to do is communicate with the local Lion Brand dealer when he has “Robin Hood” booked, supply materials for displays such as paper, sticks or whatever, and displays are arranged by the dealer.

Th tieup with the Columbia Graf- anola concern is another which has been used to distinct advantage in all campaigns thus far for “Robin Hood.”

“A stunt that I have been working,” said Smith, “and that can be put over by any exhibitor on any film is a tieup with photograph and camera dealers in Eastman products. On the letterhead of our company I give the store a letter stating that stills for Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood were made by a Grafex camera and printed on Eastman paper stock.

“Another gag that is always surefire on this production is the ‘Robin Hood Mark of Chivalry Feather’ I always select the company with the greatest number of hat stores in a city.

Buchowetski’s Production of “Othello” Truly Worth While Achievement

Emil Jannings in “Othello”

Ben Blumenthal—Export & Import Co.

DIRECTOR ............... Dimitri Buchowetski
AUTHOR ............... William Shakespeare
PRODUCTION EDITOR .... Don Bartlett
CAMERAMAN ............. Carl Hasselman

AS A WHOLE...... A highly intelligent, artistic and compelling interpretation of Shakespeare’s work

STORY Adheres to the text even to the subtitles; masterfully handled and wholly absorbing

DIRECTION....... Superb; a remarkably fine rendition of a masterpiece; magnificent in composition, development and all the rest

PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Excellent LIGHTINGS .............. Splendid effects

STAR .......... As though Shakespeare’s character came to life so realistic is his characterization;

PLAYERS....... Werner Kraus a tremendous hit as Iago and Ica Lenkeffy a charming Desdemona

EXTERIORS .......... Few but those very good

INTERIORS ...... Numerous spacious and splendid settings

DETAIL .......... Worth while

CHARACTER OF STORY....... If they know Shakespeare, they know “Othello”

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION......... 6,385 feet

Not to be outdone by the legitimate stage in its current revival of Shakespeare, Ben Blumenthal will offer Dimitri Buchowetski’s film adaptation of Shakespeare’s “Othello” at the Criterion theater. And it may be recorded right here that the screen, through the medium of “Othello” will readily “holds it own” in the present revival, for the Buchowetski production is not only another step in the advancement of the art of motion pictures, but the best picture to come from the German studios since “The Loves of Pharaoh.”

Too much cannot be said for the masterful rendition which the producer has accorded Shakespeare’s work and the realism and sincerity of the presentation is a very definite factor in the success attained by the picture as a whole, and closely allied with the very notable performances of a uniformly excellent cast headed by that sterling portrayer, Emil Jannings, with Werner Kraus, always interesting as Iago, the perfidious friend of Othello.

“Othello” is essentially an entertainment for intelligent minds and those who prefer a really worth while artistic achievement, something out of the ordinary. Unfortunately this class of picture patronage is in the minority but for those to whom it will appeal “Othello” offers a real gem of an entertainment. Buchowetski’s interpretation of Shakespeare leaves little to be desired and he has injected realism to the nth degree. The atmosphere, the settings, the costuming and those selected for the various roles—every detail shows care and a very definite knowledge of the art of motion pictures. “Othello” is not as spectacular nor as lavish a production as some of those that have come from the German studios but it contains qualities that make it equally distinctive. Its dramatic value is of a high standard.

Emil Jannings as “The Moor,” the insanely jealous husband of the beautiful Desdemona, is one of the most lasting impressions that the picture will leave, and easily seconded by Werner Krauss, the original Dr. Caligari, as Iago the trickster who arouses Othello’s jealousy to further his own schemes. Ica Lenkeffy, not as well known to American audiences as the two previously mentioned players, is a charming Desdemona and others in the cast, even those of only remote importance, are well chosen and thoroughly capable.

Story: Othello is commanded to quell an uprising of the Turks in Cyprus. He names Cassio as his lieutenant thereby exciting revenge in Iago, a perfidious friend. Othello, “the son of an Egyptian father and a Spanish mother,” marries Desdemona. Through a series of clever ruses Iago leads Othello to suspect Cassio of being in love with Desdemona. Eventually Othello kills his wife, learns of Iago’s perfidy, kills Iago and then himself.

An Entertainment Strictly For The Intelligent Audience

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Notwithstanding the excellence of “Othello” its appeal is unfortunately limited to the more intelligent picture patrons and those who can be satisfied by artistic endeavors such as that which Dimitri Buchowetski offers them in his production. Also those who are not numbered among Shakespeare’s admirers will not be likely to favor the picture despite its meritorious attainments.

So it may be that “Othello” will not prove a box office knockout but the exhibitor who caters to an appreciative clientele, those who prefer something distinctive and worth while, will not go wrong in showing them “Othello.” You can safely make promises with regard to the excellence of the production and above all, talk about the remarkably fine acting. It should be easy to secure the cooperation of local educational boards.
Story Of Stage Life With Atmosphere That Pleases Many

“SUCCESS”

SCENARIO BY ............ Adeline Leitzbach and Theo. Lieber, Jr.
CAMERAMAN .......................... William Black
AS A WHOLE... A rather pleasing picture that contains effective audience appeal and treats old theme in first rate fashion STORY ............................ New angles in development of stage romance with old Shakespearian actor the principal figure DIRECTION .......... Usually good; one or two sequences slightly overdrawn, but on the whole, satisfying
PHOTOGRAPHY ...................... Average
LIGHTINGS ........................ Occasionally too bright

EXTERIORS .............................. Few
INTERIORS .............................. Good
DETAIL .............................. Ample
CHARACTER OF STORY........... Actor, with lost reputation, makes triumphant return in role that made him famous and also reunites with is estranged wife
LENGTH & PRODUCTION ........ 6,700 feet
“Success,” a Murray Garsson production released by Metro, treats of a slightly familiar theme but with sufficient new angles and careful treatment to make it a satisfying entertainment for a good majority. There are so many who like stories of stage life that they should favor the romance offered in “Success,” a story dealing with the fame attained by a noted Shakespearian actor whose popularity eventually dwindles because he was too sure of his success.

A Good Title To Exploit And Elements That Can Be Made To Appeal

There is a definite moral that is nicely woven in without being preachy and while there may be no great surprise in the denouement, still Ralph Ince maintains the interest splendidly all the way through and the happy ending is effective even though it is what they will probably expect. The development is smooth and usually logical the only incidents that are unconvincing being those in which the estranged wife faces her broken down actor-husband who is teetle and apparently ill and in need of care. It is hardly probable that the wife would ignore him (the estrangement having been caused by the actor’s drinking) much less allow him to be manhandled by his former theatrical associates. Of course there is an alibi for her action in that her young daughter, about to assume the role formerly played by the mother, believes her father dead, but it would have been a much more human attitude to have had the woman go to the man especially since there had evidently been no divorce and she might still have kept his identity from the girl.

A very good twist is that in which the new portrait of Shakespearian roles, the finance of the former great actor’s daughter, refuses to go on in the opening performance of “King Lear” because of the producer’s attentions to his intended wife. How the aged actor, his identity still unknown to the girl or her lover, appears in the role and saves the young man’s reputation results in the reunion of husband and wife and the young lovers. This sequence has been nicely handled and quite convincingly since the make-up of Lear makes it quite possible for such a deception to be carried out.

Brandon Tynan gives a very satisfying performance as the actor whose success “went to his head.” Tynan’s make up in the latter reels when he begs for a role in the revival of “King Lear” is splendid. Theodore Lieber, Jr. is adequate as the young actor. Mary Astor and Naomi Childers do well and Dore Davidson adds a few humorous touches with his box-office worries.

There are attractive elements of entertainment in this that can be used to interest picture goers. In the first place it should be easy to get their attention by playing up the theatrical atmosphere and using catchlines indicating the nature of it, especially referring to the famous actor who was ruined by too much “Success” and if you care to make a point of the moral in the story, that should also interest them.

Although Brandon Tynan’s name will probably not mean much at the box office of the picture theater, you might tell them of his prominence on the legitimate stage and of the splendid performance he gives in this. They will know Mary Astor and other names to use are Naomi Childers and Dore Davidson, the latter well known for his unusually fine character portrayals. The title should be easy to exploit.
Pleasing Romance And Good Auto Race Chief Points of Appeal

Agnes Ayres in

SCENARIO .......................... Will M. Ritchey
CAMERAMAN ...................... Bert Baldridge
AS A WHOLE.............. Slight but agreeable feature

STORY ...... Satisfying romance with rather familiar situations although they are nicely handled DIRECTION ...... All right; racing sequence effectively done and furnishes some thrills.

PHOTOGRAPHY ........................ First rate

EXTERIORS .................. Appropriate
INTERIORS .................. Not many
DETAIL .............. Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY Daughter of automobile manufacturer, in latter's absence, has racer built that wins and makes the car famous

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 5,691 feet

Agnes Ayres has a story somewhat different from her recent vehicles in Byron Morgan's "Racing Hearts," an automobile story that furnishes a satisfying entertainment, of rather light weight but containing sufficient good incident, pleasing romantic situations and a cast that gets it over. The theme doesn't vary greatly from some of those that served Wallace Reid so capably in several of his pictures that proved thoroughly popular, so "Racing Hearts," will undoubtedly be well received by a majority.

Richard Dix, who is rapidly coming to the fore as a leading man, plays the role that Reid did so well—the good looking young racer who mixes love with his favorite sport. Dix handles the role very well and, while he isn't quite as convincingly romantic as Wallie, he will please them and he makes a satisfying opposite for the star. Agnes Ayres makes the most of the role of the automobile manufacturer's daughter who hits upon a scheme to make her father's product sell by stunt advertising, an idea abhorred by the old gentleman—Theodore Roberts contributing the humorous touches as the contrary parent.

In spite of the very slight material at hand, Director Paul Powell has succeeded very well in maintaining an even interest throughout and where it was necessary to do some padding, he has done so without lessening the speed. Toward the end he supplies some first rate thrills in the racing sequence and the cameraman is also to be credited with good work in shooting these scenes.

Of course there is never any doubt as to what the outcome will be but this won't spoil the picture for those who like stories of a highly romantic flavoring such as this. There is a wicked villain who plots with the owner of one of the competing cars to prevent the other winning but it is all very mild plotting and never threatens to cause any serious damage to the love affair of the daughter and son, respectively, of the contesting owners. The only standard make of car that gets any prominence in the film is the Durant, the others are all made up names.

Story: Virginia Kent's father refuses to go in for "stunt" advertising so his make of automobile, the Granada, is not nearly as popular as that of his enemy, the Mono, made by Smith whose son, Roddy, is in love with Virginia. How Virginia, in her father's absence, has a racer built and entered in the road race, and drives it to victory herself when she learns the driver has been bought by Smith, is coupled with the reunion of Virginia and Roddy who drove his father's car off the track to allow Virginia to win.

Star's Admirers Will Like It And Racing Sequence Will Interest

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Admirers of automobile racing stories will be well pleased with this latest Agnes Ayres picture, "Racing Hearts," and there are enough good talking points in it for you to get them interested without a great deal of trouble. A trailer of the racing sequence will make them want to come back to see the entire picture, especially if you show a shot of the final spill.

The star's admirers will like her work in this and you can promise them a story a little different from those she has had recently. Talk about the good supporting cast using the names of Richard Dix, Theodore Roberts. Stunt advertising and exploitation will also do very well to arouse their curiosity.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Girl who tires of social life goes into the North where suitor proves his love by fighting for her life
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5,102 feet

Katherine MacDonald’s latest is an average entertainment that probably won’t cause much discussion one way or the other. It is an in-between number that is neither poor enough to be condemned nor good enough to be praised. It is due chiefly to the story which deals with situations already familiar to the screen and ones that have been twisted around in various ways in many previous films. Tom Forman keeps it from becoming noticeably hackneyed through a satisfying production, a smooth development and by the selection of a capable cast for the star.

The role of the society girl approaches more closely the sort of portrayal that the star is most adapted to so that her admirers will like her in “The Woman Conquers,” much more than they did in her recent production, “Money, Money, Money.” She gives a satisfying performance and they’ll like what she has to do in the latter reels, where she saves the life of her wounded lover by driving a sledge through a blizzard with only the dogs to guide her.

The opening reels deal in a general way with how society folks idle away their time and there are suggestions of the heroine’s discontent and boredom brought about through the useless existence in which she finds herself. All this leads up to her decision to get away from it all and go to the trapping ground inerited from an uncle. At this point the story becomes more interesting, with attractive snow covered backgrounds and the always interesting dog sleds.

It takes a dramatic turn with the introduction of Lazar, the czar of the region, who threatens to rule the new mistress as he does his workers. Nothing unusual happens and while Forman makes an effort to keep the ending from becoming obvious, it is always expected. There are some mild thrills such as when the villain, in revenge, sets the store house on fire and the fight where villain attacks the girl and her society suitor becomes a he-man and fights for her.

There is a slight suspense in the effort of the girl to bring her lover back to the camp where his wound will be attended to. Of course he recovers with the heroine finally accepting his proposal of marriage since he has proven himself not altogether a “social lion.”

Use Names of Players and Catchlines to Give An Idea of The Story

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

They may not be dissatisfied with this one or at least it won’t gather any particular kicks. There is a story that will get over well enough where they don’t mind a few familiar twists. The atmosphere in the latter reels will undoubtedly please and there are some fair thrills such as the blizzard, the fire and the fight. They are not strong enough, however, to play up with promises of a thrilling picture.

If they like the star, “The Woman Conquers,” will have a better chance of pleasing them and they’ll undoubtedly like the story better than her last one. The supporting cast is first rate and names you can use are those of Mitchell Lewis, Bryant Washburn and June Elvidge. Catchlines can be based on the idea of the society girl who tired of the luxuries of her life and sought the peace and contentment of the Northland.

The idea which supplies the main situation in "The Man Alone" is not altogether new but the feature's value as entertainment does not suffer from lack of originality despite the fact. It has been surrounded with other good situations and a fine variation of atmosphere and incident that makes it a picture somewhat out of the ordinary and interesting because of effective characterization.

Should Satisfy the Average Audience—Use Star's Name

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"The Man Alone" will please the average audience and while it isn't a picture that will stand unusual promises or exploitation, it will do nicely for a regular attraction. You have the name of Hobart Bosworth to interest them and if they have ever seen any of his previous productions, very likely his name will be a sufficient drawing card.

Hobart Bosworth is usually cast for more virile roles than that of the uncouth mine owner who seeks the hand of a society girl, but he is equally entertaining and capable in the role of Ben Dixon. Bosworth wins the audience's admiration from the start and gains the whole-hearted sympathy of the spectator when the girl rejects him because of his lack of social etiquettes. The character played by Bosworth rings true to life and the treatment accorded him by the girl he loves and the manner in which he accepts her abuse will win admiration for him. A very good feature of the story is that its development is natural and not contrary. When hero is rejected he does not fight for the girl, but tries in other ways to win back her love, nor does he cancel his loan to her father. Events occur in the right sort of succession and without the use of coincidence.

Somehow or other Bosworth is usually associated with a sea story, or some equally virile theme, but his performance in this is thoroughly satisfying and a pleasing variation. There is a sequence in the picture, however, similar to what the star often does—that of a rugged sailor, although in this case it is against his will, the villain having had him shanghaied aboard a tramp steamer.

William Clifford provides a satisfying production and his direction of the picture is usually very good. The cast is capable and fulfills requirements adequately. Bosworth's leading lady is not a popular film player nor does she screen very well.

Story: Marjorie Hill becomes engaged to Ben Dixon, millionaire mine owner, "a rough diamond but with a heart of gold." His manners and dress get on Marjorie's nerves and she breaks the engagement. Temple, in love with Marjorie, has Dixon shanghaied aboard a tramp steamer bound South. Later Dixon makes his way back but finds Marjorie in love with the man he hired to fit him for the society in which Marjorie moved. Dixon proves a good loser.

Catchlines could read: "He was a rough diamond with a heart of gold, but he didn't fit in with his fiancée's social surroundings. He was 'A Man Alone.'" Or if you want to interest your women folks you might ask them: "What type of man would you marry? See how one girl didn't recognize a real man when she saw one. Hobart Bosworth's latest feature, 'The Man Alone,' offers some worthwhile hints on the marriage question."

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Money lender rear's deserted daughter's child at the same time planning a great revenge which fails

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5,900 feet

There have been quite a number of these Jewish heart interest stories since the appearance of Fannie Hurst's "Humoresque" and they have apparently satisfied the public. "None So Blind" is another along this line although the situations, some of them fairly conventional, have been twisted around into a theme different from the others and given sufficiently careful treatment and direction to make them entertaining and interesting.

The theme, of course, is essentially of the heart interest variety with the progress of the story gaining more and more sympathy for the principal characters—the old Jewish money lender and the child of his deserted daughter. The plot also includes an elaborately planned revenge which builds to the ultimate climax and the shattering of the old man's dreams of repaying the man who ruined his daughter's life. There are some rather outstanding instances of coincidence in the development, due mostly to insufficient detail. For instance, there is no explanation of how certain events are arrived at such as the romance of the tailor's son and the rich man's daughter, or for the fact that the latter should meet the girl, who, unknown to her, is her sister, in a little library in the poor section of the city. Of course these are all of minor importance and in no way interfere with the coherence of the story, but they may strike some as being just a shade too convenient.

It is decidedly the character study offered in the role played by Dore Davidson that creates the real human interest in the picture. His devotion to his granddaughter and his great sorrow when he learns that all his planning goes for naught through her love for a Christian fellow, the ward of the man who deserted her mother. The religious angle is prominent but it is always used with discretion and forms a very important part in the climax when the money lender learns that love breaks all barriers.

Director King has handled the story very well and usually to the best advantage. He has blended pathos with humor successfully and builds toward the climax in a satisfying fashion, wasting no time on finishing touches once the ending is in sight. The cast is a good one with Dore Davidson contributing his usual finished performance as the "Shylock of Wall Street," and Zena Keefe a sympathetic and appealing heroine. Roles of less importance are capably handled by Edward Earle, Maurice Costello, Gene Burnell.

Good Audience Appeal and Angles That Will Bear Exploitation

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is a good audience picture that will appeal to a big majority and with the right sort of exploitation should make a thoroughly satisfying box office attraction. You know pretty well just how this type of story will go, if you have played any of those similar to it, and can easily judge its drawing power from the others. If they like these human interest themes with a comedy and pathos combination you can rest assured they'll be pleased.

By this time they should know Dore Davidson and the type of portrayal which he does so well. Use his name and let them know that in "None So Blind" he plays the part of a money lender who plans to ruin the man who deserted his daughter and her baby. If you care to make use of the idea of racial barrier, the picture will interest them from that angle. You might also use the names of Zena Keefe, Edward Earle and Maurice Costello, an old time Vitagraph favorite.

DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS"
"Down to the Sea in Ships"

Elmer Clifton’s New Production a Masterpiece in Its Line—Replete With Sensations and Human Interest
Reviewed by Roger Fern

When the ten best productions of the current season are finally sorted out this Elmer Clifton offering should not be overlooked, for it is one of the most marvelously amazing attractions ever offered owners of motion picture theatres. In its class it stands alone and as an unquestionable masterpiece. Here is a production that is just that and more—a picture with a real heart. It is at the same time a great education and a remarkable entertainment vehicle. Its value goes beyond that of the theatre, for it will create talk and discussion that will live for a long, long time.

Cinematographically, "Down To the Sea in Ships" is that much sought different production exhibitors have prayed for. It is dramatic, sensational, romantic, comic and picturesque, dwelling on a story that is appealingly human.

It is big in everything. You don’t have to take any risk when you grab this one, for it is that type of production that will appeal to everybody for it has everything in it—and most important it is in possession of heart-throbs that are gripping and leave a permanent impression that will prompt word-of-mouth boosting.

Elmer Clifton is deserving of much commendation for "Down To the Sea in Ships" for it is what this writer would gamble two to one in predicting that it will prove a huge box office winner. It’s a production that will justify the investment of several thousands of dollars in exploitation, for the picture will earn it all back 100 times.

It will be a wise distributing agency that will grab this one and a wiser exhibitor who will allow it to bring the silver to its box offices.

For sensations, "Down To the Sea in Ships" is the best yet. And these sensations result from every day hair-raising experiences of whalers. And they are not faked. This writer knows New Bedford and many a time was dispatched there by a Boston newspaper to "cover" shipwrecks, etc., in that picturesque locality.

To enumerate the innumerable thrillers depicted in this attraction would mean the use of an entire page. Suffice, however, to say that this picture is so securely packed with dangerously bold fears in which whales unconsciously play an important role, that it has any 15-episode serial, this writer has seen to date, washed off the board.

You Grab This One."

"DOWN TO THE
Audiences the World Over
Stand Aghast at the Daring of this Picture

NEVER before has a photo-dramatic production made its bid for public approval backed by the weight of critical enthusiasm that has greeted "Down to the Sea in Ships."

"One of the most interesting pictures ever produced. . . . It combines pretty nearly the best in everything, acting, photography, direction and cast."—Philadelphia North American.

It is a picture that will do more in a single season to restore confidence and public interest in the motion picture theatre than any other force at work within the industry.

"In this picture, the screen has gained one of its few veritable classics. It is visual literature, hauntingly beautiful. A truly great film."—Boston Advertiser.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" has been launched with one of the biggest advertising and exploitation campaigns ever put behind a picture. Magazines and newspapers all over the country will be used to arouse interest in this super-production. The opening gun in the campaign is a full page in the Saturday Evening Post (circulation 2,250,000), on March 10th. This will be followed by intensive advertising designed to reach every community of any size in the United States.

"One of the real surprises of the screen season. . . . one worthy of a place among the finest of the year. . . . there have been no more thrilling escapades ever caught by the camera . . . . a film that will blaze the trail for the new type of pictures that are bound to come."—Detroit News.

The exploitation possibilities of "Down to the Sea in Ships" are endless in their variety and effect. It is so utterly out of the beaten path, so daring in its conception, so masterly in its handling, that the exhibitor is confronted not with the problem of filling his theatre, but with the immediate necessity of securing "Down to the Sea in Ships" early enough and for a long enough run to satisfy the enormous public demand that is already aroused for "the master-production of the new year."

"Probably one of the most beautiful photoplays ever made . . . . The enthusiasm grew by leaps and bounds."—Boston Globe.
The Supreme Thrill of Motion Picture History!

A FRAIL boat and its six occupants towed at express train speed toward three thousand miles of open water, through a sea lashed into foam by a maddened whale.

A sudden turn, a shout, "Look out, he's heading for us!" The oars are splintered along one side of the whaleboat; before the startled crew can backwater, the monster of the deep is upon them!

A flip of its death-dealing "flukes," and both craft and its occupants are tossed high in the air. The boat falls back into the sea a battered wreck, its crew floundering about in shark-infested waters.

Such is the climax of the most astounding piece of realism ever photographed—a motion picture made in the broad reaches of mid-Atlantic, with a 90-ton sperm whale as the principle actor, and the hand of chance directing as fierce a battle between man and mammal as the long history of whaling has ever known.

It required eighteen months to make "Down to the Sea in Ships." It is utterly unlike any production ever filmed, because, it is nature at her most thrilling moments, with intrepid whalemen in mad pursuit of the biggest game on land or sea. Incidents of unparalleled daring, enacted apparently within a few feet of the eyes of the astonished audience, seem to challenge belief that the scenes were actually aken by a camera—and at breathlessly close quarters.

Every phase of whaling is shown with startling fidelity—the first view of the big "school," following the weird cry from mast-head, "B-l-o-w-s, b-l-o-w-s," the lightning-like lowering of the boats, the dash for the prize, the instant of suspense as the boat-steerer sinks his harpoon to the shank. Then the frantic effort to escape, with a thin curl of smoke arising from the harpoon line as it sings over the bow, so swift is the whale's dash for the open water and freedom.

For hours the battle is waged in a dull-red sea, before the cry of "Fins out!" tells us that the monster has fought his last fight. Then follows the "cutting-in," and the thousand-and-one processes that for two hundred years have made the New England whaling industry a tradition tenderly fostered from generation to generation.

Yet back of this vivid picturization of daring runs one of the sweetest love-stories ever unfolded on the screen, a romance breathing all of the quaint customs of the most famous whaling city in the world. A sinister conspiracy, its aim the control of as fine a fleet of whalers as ever sailed the seven seas; a hair-raising mutiny and its overthrow of as brutal a master as ever triced a sailor in the rigging; a storm off-shore, the like of which no trick of photography could ever hope to equal; are touches of realism that lift "Down to the Sea in Ships" far out of the category of what we have come to accept as the usual motion picture thrill.
"Down to the Sea in Ships"
Elmer Clifton—Twelve Reels
Reviewed by Lawrence Reid

WHAT will be written in screen history as a masterpiece of its kind is offered in Elmer Clifton's "Down to the Sea in Ships"—a romance of the golden days of whaling. Taking more than a year to produce, it presents mute testimony that anything extraordinary in production cannot be achieved by working per schedule. Here is a plot, which exceeds the richest kind of atmosphere, a locale, color, detail, and romance. It is authentic, because Clifton went up to the whaling city, New Bedford, and gained the cooperation of its people. The director has gotten away from the beaten path.

This romance of 1839, when the whaling industry was at its peak, is unusual in its departure from the conventional. You might say that it is whalemen in an accurate manner. Yet Clifton has done it. He has not only brought forth a series of truly sensational scenes such as the sighting of the whales and the pursuit of them with the sub-sequent stirring episode when a mighty bull mauler is harpooned, but he lifts the veil of romance which covers the Quakers and their faith. The characters, with the exception of the protagonist, are members of the Society of Friends. We are shown into the meeting house and shown the marriage ceremony in the highly appealing episode.

While the picture brings forth the whaling industry of the 60s, with its dramatic moments, there is also interwoven a romance, the background of which is colored with a rich gladness. The relics and heirlooms of the dead past live again with all their picturesque atmosphere. It serves as an education as well as an entertainment. Everything, seemingly, has been done to make the complete with the color and detail of the period in which it is laid. Painstaking care is taken of each character. It's a heart story as well as a graphic one. And because it is so unusual in theme, characterization and production, it will be talked about as one of the sensations of the year. The photography is exceptional, and the acting is genuine.

Down to the Sea in Ships
(F. C. O. N. S.)

This picture of whaling days in New England is one of the most remarkable productions of the season and will undoubtedly prove a box office sensation. Based on an interesting love story, it has some of the most exciting and spectacular scenes yet given to a film entertainment.

Director Elmer Clifton set out to make for the Whaling Film Corporation, of New Bedford, Mass., a film production different from anything before attempted. That he has succeeded in a manner more than satisfactory, there can be no question. "Down To the Sea In Ships" is a production that stands in a class by itself and one that, with proper exploitation, should set many a new box office record.

Taking as his theme a delightful love story of Quaker life in the whaling city, when New Bedford was the headquarters of that industry, Director Clifton has cleverly transformed it into a film epic. The photography is nothing short of remarkable and gives rise to wonder as to how much of it could be accomplished.

CHARACTER OF STORY . . . . . . Hero finally wins love of girl who marries him to keep uncle's fortune from going to charity

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,126 feet

Here you have a conventional theme that has been used times without number. There is no particular kick in any part of it and the picture moves along, pleasantly enough to the regulation finish.

Hero, the adopted son of a wealthy financier, prefers a machine shop to society. His adopted father desires him to marry his pretty niece who in turn is in love with a polished fortune hunter. The old man dies and his will proves that if hero and heroine are not married in six months, his fortune which was to be shared between them, is to go to charity.

The fact that the girl actually decides to marry him after admitting that she can never love him does not tend to create sympathy for her, and another discrepancy in the plot is that after showing almost abhorrence at her husband's kiss, her feelings should undergo a change without any apparent cause while he is living away from home. You know of course, all along that she will finally love him, but you expect some sort of a climax. The only tense point comes when the hero receives a telegram saying that the estate has been embrazzled and the fortune lost. The villain then declines to have anything further to do with the lady and the hero punches him in the eye.

This fight is the one bit of action in the picture, but in spite of this the interest is sustained pretty well because of the rapidity with which the story is told, the film being in less than five reels. Fortunately Director Worthington has omitted the familiar death-bed scene and has substituted a title instead. There is a slight discrepancy that could easily be remedied which occurs in the sequence in which the girl opens a letter with gloved hands. The close-up of the letter shows a polished finger-nail on the hand holding it but in the next shot the gloves are still on the girl's hands.

Phyllis Haver is pretty but is hampered by the role she has which allows little opportunity for her to create sympathy. Mayo's admirers will in all probability be pleased with his work in this one although he too has been limited by the story.

Should Do For Average Crowd Or If Star Is A Favorite

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The average audience will probably find this acceptable and if Mayo is a favorite you can count on it to draw them. The briefness of the film lends itself admirably for use on a double-feature program, and the title lends itself well to exploitation stunts. Catchlines such as "What was behind 'The Bolted Door,'" and others will attract.

You can mention the fact that Phyllis Haver, former Mack Sennett bathing girl, plays opposite the star and that Nigel Barry and Charles Stevenson are in the cast. Use Mayo's name with the posters and mention the fact that the story deals with a bride who refuses to love, honor and obey her husband. However, if your folks want thrills, be careful about your promises on this one, as there is a total absence of the usual "stunts" and excitement generally found in Mayo offerings.

CHARACTER OF STORY ............ Man avoids girl he loves because he believes her father responsible for his father's ruin and disappearance

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........... 4,855 feet

The story contained in "A CLOUDED NAME" is really worthy of a better and more careful presentation than it has been accorded. Not that the material is strikingly original or strong but there are some fairly good situations that might have been worked into a much more interesting and absorbing plot than you are offered in Austin O. Huhn's production.

The construction is faulty and the continuity very choppy. The sequences are loosely connected and the picture, as a whole, seems disjointed and at times quite amateurish. It has not been given a careful treatment in many respects and regardless of the way the story has been handled, production values are not what they should be. The interiors indicate lack of proper equipment and the lightings throughout are very poor and often too bright and jumpy. One exterior, a house that is supposed to represent a mountain lodge not frequently used, is fixed up in obviously amateurish fashion with painted pieces placed upon the porch to give the effect of broken plaster, etc. Other equally bad bits of detail, unimportant, but none the less apparent, are to be found in the production.

The director has not improved on an already choppy continuity in the development of the plot and while there is no great difficulty in following events, there is a continual lack of conviction about the various steps preparatory to the climaxes which, in itself, contains little punch or surprise. The audience will have it well figured out ahead of time. The material has not been used to advantage which spoils what might have furnished a first rate average entertainment.

Norma Shearer is pretty and good to look at but has small chance of appeal in this. Gladden James is the over "close-uped" hero, with Richard Neill a weak-kneed villain. Yvonne Logan is given featured prominence but the little girl is too camera shy to register appealingly.

Story: Jim Allen shuns Marjorie Dare because he believes her father responsible for his own father's ruin and eventual disappearance. Nevertheless Marjorie loves Jim and follows him to a mountain lodge where she is entertained by Jim's host, Leighton, also in love with Marjorie. How Marjorie is saved from Leighton's attack by a bearded stranger who turns out to be Jim's father is followed by the clearing of her father's name and her happiness with Jim.

Nothing For You To Talk About Except The Title

BOX OFFICE ANALYSIS FOR THE EXHIBITOR

You will have to be sure that you haven't a critical audience if you want to show them "A CLOUDED NAME" because in this day of splendid productions and careful direction, they are more than likely to find fault with this one since they will realize that a pretty fair story has not been properly handled. It may get by on a double feature bill or where a strong short reel program accompanies it but make no promises for the feature picture for it is too weak to bear them out.

There are no names to attract them so you had best stick to the announcement of the title and let it go at that. They may look for Norma Shearer again though. She is pretty and very good to look at although she hasn't had much chance to show what she can do.

"The Phantom Fortune"—Universal
Type of production .................. 15 chapter serial

Universal’s latest serial offering, "The Phantom Fortune" has much to be said in its favor. In the first place it is practically the first serial to have a thoroughly plausible plot that is laid in the business world. It is devoid of the usual totally impracticable, romantic stuff generally found in chapter plays, and although it does drag in an underworld gang, too much stress is not placed upon this feature, that is in the first three chapters which were reviewed.

Directed by Robert Hill from a story by Anthony Coldewey and George Hively, it stars William Desmond, with a supporting cast that includes EstherRalston, Lewis Sargent, George Nichols, Catherine Calhoun, Jack Henderson and others.

Incidentally Universal’s motto, "It Can Be Done" is used by the hero as a slogan throughout the story, which deals with Barclay’s fight to save his dead father’s tire factory from his father’s enemies. In this he is helped by Mary Rogers, secretary of the company and the youthful office boy, "Speck" O’Dawn. "Speck" is played by Lewis Sargent, who makes the most of the role.

There are thrills aplenty in the opening episode which ends with the hero’s race through a driving rain storm, the wrecking of his machine and his narrow escape from electrocution by fallen wires, against which he is thrown. There is a thrilling climax at the end of each episode which should bring them back for more.

There should be a good opportunity in this one for a number of excellent tie-ups with local tire concerns, etc., and numerous exploitation ideas can be obtained from Universal’s press-book.

If your folks liked "Around the World in Eighteen Days," or "Perils of the Yukon," you can tell them the same star and director work in this.

Screen Snapshots No. 20—Pathe
Type of production .................. 1 reel fan magazine

Ruth Roland and Louise Fazenda have an automobile race first in this issue of the Screen Snapshots; Wesley Barry distributes candy to a group of youthful admirers; Barbara La Mar has some gowns draped on her by Mitchell Leisen; and there are intimate glimpses of many other screen celebrities including Snub Pollard, Hoot Gibson, Gladys Walton, Wallace Beery, Lila Lee, Bebe Daniels and many others. Will be enjoyed by all movie lovers.

"Broke"—Cameo—Educational
Type of production ........................ 1 reel comedy

Although there is nothing particularly new in this one, it is a fair example of the knock-about comedy and should go over well enough, depending upon the sort of thing your audience likes. It does not drag and things are happening all the time to keep up the interest. Jimmie Adams and Virginia Vance are featured, but Virginia has very little to do, and Adams is on the screen constantly. His chief difficulty is getting out of jail and the way in which he manages this, time after time, supplies the action for the comedy.

"The Message of Emile Coue"—Motion Picture Arts Inc., Educational Type of production .......................... 2 reel exposition of Coue theory

In view of the vast amount of talk regarding Coue and his theory of auto-suggestion, you can count pretty safely on this to draw the crowd. It should be explained that the picture is in no way a fictional story, but is a demonstration by Coue, by means of titles and illustrations of his points, of the theory of auto-suggestion. Coue is shown lecturing before a group of people, and you get the impression that you yourself are listening. The well-known phrase “Day by Day” is stressed a great many times in the closing sequence and finally the audience is made to say it, with M. Coue. Educational has prepared a series of exploitation helps in their press sheet that should help you put the picture over. It is the only film that Coue has appeared in and the general interest evinced by the public in his work should be sufficient to show you which way the wind blows.

"Little Red Robin Hood"—Joe Rock—State Rights
Type of production .......................... 2 reel comedy

There has been more than one travesty on "Robin Hood" released during the last few weeks, but this holds about as much humor as any of them. The opening is well done, showing a group of kids playing marbles. Joe Rock is a "goody-goody" who will not fight his fat rival for the affections of little Billie Rhodes. Instead he reads the story of "Robin Hood." The titles are in verse, supposedly from the tale he is reading and in cut-backs, Rock sees himself as Robin Hood, and his fat rival as the Sheriff. Plenty of fun is contained in the burlesque and at the finish, Rock gets some of Robin Hood’s courage and really licks his rival.

Pathé Review No. 8
Type of production .......................... 1 reel magazine

A novel feature of this Pathé Review is called "Eye for Eye," and consists of shots of eyes and other features of the human face. The audience then guesses whether they are masculine or feminine, after which the entire face is shown. Another interesting subject is a section showing a trick roper doing stunts with a lariat which are then analyzed in slow motion photography. The living pictures this time are of scenes in and around a fishing village and the colored section deals with stone castles in the Pyrenees.

"Chicken Dressing"—Earl Hurd—Educational
Type of production .......................... 1 reel cartoon comedy

"Chicken Dressing" is another of the clever Earl Hurd comedies, which combine cartoon drawings and real objects in interesting and entertaining fashion. Earl Hurd Jr. is the cameraman and general boss of the studio which has on its payroll, as star, a real chicken, Bobby Bumps, a cartoon drawing, Bobby’s dog, Fido, another cartoon, a real rabbit and a real kitten. This manner of handling material of this kind is exclusive with this brand of comedies. The novelty of it will surely appeal and the humor is of a clean, wholesome variety, appealing to all ages.
"Oh Sister"—Cameo—Educational

Type of production ...................... 1 reel comedy

A trained rooster is the medium that gets a couple of laughs in this one, and the opening, in particular, is good, showing a bull pep playing hide and seek with the rooster. However, "Oh Sister" lapses into bedroom, boarding-house table stuff that is as old as movies. The two sisters who run the boarding house are both in love with Jimmie Adams, the star boarder, but he favors Virginia Vance. The other sister, whose name is not mentioned, seeks to win him with tough round steak and endearments, but to no avail. The villain then approaches and in usual bewhiskered style makes off with her life savings of $37. Jimmie catches him, and as a reward she gives the young couple her savings and goes to live with them. Average comedy.

"Do Your Stuff"—Hal Roach—Pathe

Type of production ...................... 1 reel comedy

This Paul Parrott offering has more of a plot than is usually found in his comedies and it should sufficiently interest the average audience. The laughs are derived throughout from hokum consisting of sliding doors, collapsible stairs and other trick devices in a house in Chinatown where the hero’s girl has been abducted. The hero’s fight with the stairs and the Chinamen comprise the action, but there is a new twist at the end when Paul is confronted with a row of electric buttons and told to push one—if he pushes the right one, a sword will descend and kill his girl. When he finally pushes one, a stream of water lands in his eye and the “chinks” turn out to be members of an actor troupe to which Paul belongs. J. A. Howe directed.

Pola Negri says "Mad Love" is her greatest picture success!

February 13, 1923

Dear Mr. Lehr:

I trust that your offering of "MAD LOVE" will receive a cordial response from the American audiences. In Europe its success was unparalleled, even by "PASSION", and I hope that the exhibitors in America meet with this same success.

Cordially yours,

Famous Players Have That Many
From Cosmopolitan in Super 39

In the list of 39 pictures which Famous Players will release between now and the first of September, there are five Cosmopolitan productions.
These are "Vendetta," "The Gold
Letter," "Adam and Eva," "The 9th Commandment," and "When Knighthood
Was in Flower."

It is understood that when the deivery of these five negatives, the contact between William Randolph Hearst and Famous Players comes to an end. It was pointed out last week that the new arrangement with Goldwyn becomes effective with the deivery of pictures now in production.
Perhaps the most important is "Little Old New York."

Marion Davies is to be starred.
The picture, which is about two third-finished, was held up because of the fire at the Harlem studio last week.
The Hearst organization has made many promises about the lavishness of this new production.

It seems sure that this will be one of the important contributions to the Goldwyn program from Cosmopolitan for next year. Cosmopolitan plans another costume op-Julia Arthur will play "Queen Elizabeth." This will also star Marion Davies, and he will be placed in production in the spring.

Anita Stewart is on the west coast, preparing to appear in "The Love Piker" for Cosmopolitan. Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens are co-featured in "Enemies of Women," which was made in part abroad.

Bonuses Boys

Too many of them in the business. They have taken more toll out than any other of the many curses which have infested this industry from its earliest days. When a producer has to pay from thirty percent up for his finances how can he do anything but go broke? Can he do anything else? You can keep on pouring water down any rat hole, but that only keeps the rats away until they find a new place to burrow in. And so with thirty percent funds. You have got to pay up some day and when the time comes for the final payment, then what? Ask any of those who have been bled by these Shylocks and they will tell you. And in between will punctuate their ideas with curses and oaths. That gets them nothing. They were cought in the jam and they kicked at the price. When this business reaches a point where a man will refuse to pay these bonus boys, then maybe we will get somewhere. There are bankers who are doing business on a straight bankable basis.
They want decent security and they charge six percent. If you pay any more for your money it's because of one of two things:
either you haven't security that's worth anything, or your proposition isn't bankable. There can be no other reason.

One of the old big companies is to-day paying the price of bonus boy money. And what a price is being paid!

Dope Pictures

A half dozen or more of these things being offered. Of course it isn't expected that any of the big houses will play them, that would be hoping too much. But the distributors anticipate

Bonu Boys

getting a good run from the smaller and less important houses and cashing in that way. Now let's think this over a minute. Remember this boys, you can't take out of anything more than you put in it. If you unload a cheap and junk piece of property on an unsuspecting world, you'll pay for it in the end. Everybody in the business knows what these so-called dope pictures are. And what they are intended for. Just cashing in on something that seems to be talked about. You all know that if these pictures get any real circulation at all that, the whole industry must pay the price for any success they meet. It is particularly dangerous this season of the year when in many states, legislatures are meeting, and in any of them, censorship and Sunday closing problems are being fought out. For every booking one of these pictures gets, so much more censorship is in sight. You can't avoid it and the less you figure against it the better off you are. If this business hasn’t passed far beyond that sort of picture, then the past five years have been spent in vain. You might as well look for some of those old-time sensational white slave pictures if the dope property gets any kind of run at all and this is asking for murder if it was ever necessary.

Wide distribution of the dope pictures means settling this industry back five to ten years. And don't forget it.

What is needed in this business is a vigilance committee.

THAT COMBINATION IDEA

Of Schenck and Mary and Doug working together. To get the right kind of prices for their big pictures. Sounds all right if you just look at the producers’ side of the story. But what about the exhibitors side? There's a lot to say. And a prominent Middle Western exhibitor who happens to be on the coast didn't mince words about it. He said, the Schenck idea may be all right for the producers but if there was anything needed to bring about a real exhibitors' organization, this idea will do it. And do it more quickly than anything else. The producers and their stars say they will not sell any of the so-called big pictures if an exhibitor or group of exhibitors fail to meet them on what is a fair price. But who is going to determine what is a fair price? It gets right back to the old question of values. For instance, take Fairbanks. He is a great drawing card in 'Robin Hood' but he made several a year ago on which exhibitors lost a lot of money. He is bound to figure future values on past successes. But who knows what the coming pictures will be. Certainly no sales organization which is trying to take the last dollar from the exhibitor.

That's something to think about. But Joe Schenck tries to make it clear when he puts it like this:

"Suppose an exhibitor refuses to pay a fair price. Suppose a booking combination of exhibitors say they will only give a certain price for a big picture and that the price is way under what it should be. Our representative goes to that town and tells the editor of the best paper why the big star pictures aren't being shown and then tells of our offer to that exhibitor, or group of exhibitors, to play the picture on a percentage basis; after the share of negative costs is paid and the share coming to the theater for its operation. After that we will split fifty-fifty on every dollar taken in. If that isn't fair I don't know what fairness means. And there again you have to think about it."

THAT MAIN STREET SET

On the Warner lot. Just about the most natural thing you ever saw. Looks for all the world just like the main street of any little town. It was so natural that when Fitzpatrick, of Fitzpatrick & McElroy, the Illinois chain exhibitors, saw it, he leaned in front of the Superb Theater, which is part of the street set, and said, "I think I'm at home," he was dead right. Abe Warner said the front of the theater made him think he was back in a little town in Pennsylvania where the Warner's got their start, a good many years ago. The detail that has gone into that set will surprise a lot of people. The drug store has enough bottles in it to be used for a regular drug store any day. And the bank building and the city hall are true to life. Warner's gopher prairie was built by Louis Geb and is going to prove a treat.

IDEALS

Have kept Richard Walton Tulley going over thirty years in the show business. And now he is going to try to carry some of the money pictures. Making "The Bad Man," for First National and may also make "Black Oxen," referred to in this column last week—should make a real picture. Coming west on the train he dropped a lot of them. This is sure, if he can bring half of them to life it will mean a lot.

WINNIE SICK

Up in 'Frisco with rheumatism. Winnie Sheehan of Fox has been laid up six weeks. Don't know when he will move around. Too bad.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Painting the Snow

Rhinelander, Wis.—Writing "Sherlock Holmes"—At The State Theater, on snow clad hills throughout the city brought considerable comment and many new patrons to the house during the showing of the film recently. The writing was made possible by means of an air-brush.

Fire Chief Helps Prologue

Durham, N. C.—For the run of "The Third Alarm" at the local house, Fire Chief F. W. Bennett sang "A Fire Lady," the theme song, as a part of the prologue. This was advertised extensively as part of the regular program, bringing many personal friends.

A Front Page Story

Toledo—Two weeks prior to the opening of "A Front Page Story" at the Temple, a blind contest was conducted in the Blade offering prizes for the best front page story each day submitted by other than newspaper people. The stunt drew great enthusiasm from the readers. An announcement of the opening date brought the contest to a close.

Canopy Erected Over Lobby

Toronto — A simple exploitation feature that attracted attention for the run of "The Stranger's Banquet," was the erection of a canopy over the Allen theater lobby. A carpet was spread under the canopy to lend an effective of a fashionable wedding. 20,000 paper napkins, carrying the title of the picture, theater and date of showing were distributed at cafes and restaurants which substituted them for their own serviettes. Diners in this way read of the attraction.

"Third Alarm" Hook Ups

Watertown, N. Y. — To demonstrate the possibilities of "The Third Alarm," G. A. Josephson, F. B. O. exploiter tied up a double truck to insurance concerns, hardware and electrical shops and fireproofing material. Only 9 concerns were required to get the layout, and all used the same trademark.

A safe concern advertised that it was dangerous to wait until the third alarm before thinking about conserving records, a druggist urged you not to wait until the third alarm before you bought your cough cure, and another, a hardware shop, contended that after the third alarm you need tools for rebuilding. The Avon offered firemen 10% of their ticket sales and $1050 worth of tickets had been sold before the City Manager stepped in to forbid the stunt.

An Original

Detroit—T. D. Moule, of the Capitol got a new one of his own for "The Dangerous Age" when he displayed a tiny boy's suit and a perfect 48 on a three sheet board in the lobby, with "4 or 40, which is the 'Dangerous Age?'" lettered in.

Coogan Birthday Contest

Hartford, Conn.—Tying a newspaper to a prize contest for children whose birthday was the same as Jackie Coogan's got a lot of free newspaper publicity for Harry Needles, of the Princess.

So many children suddenly found that their birthdates coincided that birth certificates had to be called for in making the awards.

Some French Statistics

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Paris—The following statistics are the latest, having been compiled by the French government:

In the northern section of the country there are 180 cinemas used by 32,500 people annually, and in the Pas de Calais section there are 95 houses which yield over 17,400,000 paid admissions. Lille, the capital of French Flanders, has but a dozen theaters which gives the government 1,900,000 tickets to tax.

New National Releasing Organization
Now Being Considered by Three Well Known Film Men Three well known film men are considering the formation of a new national releasing organization. While it is true that the company has been talked of as a possibility only, the plan in the minds of its sponsors may bear fruit.

One of the principals has been identified with the export field for a number of years. The second was at one time an important official of an exhibitor franchise organization which is now defunct. The third is an executive who recently resigned an important post with one of the large companies.

"The Master of Man" Bought By Goldwyn-Caine Once Asked $100,000
Goldwyn has purchased "The Master of Man," a Hall Caine novel for which there has been some spirited bidding. It is understood that at one time Caine held the film rights at $100,000. No announcement relate to the director has been made.
It seems likely that there will be at least two Caine novels in film form for the fall, one "The Eternal pny plans to handle the American distribution of foreign producers particularly in England, France and Sweden and advise them on the needs of the domestic market so that they can handle their plans accordingly.

The officers of the company are Samuel J. Barren, David S. Barren,
Sig Schlager and L. E. Schlechter.
There will also be two subsidiaries, one Barren, Inc. designed to take care of the finances of the company and another, Sig Schlager Enterprises, Inc. It is said that Boston and New York financial interests are involved.
Sig Schlager returned a few days ago from an extended trip abroad.

who was elected by the other members. In his election, it was declared that the consent of about two thirds of the creditors has been secured and that the consent of at least 85% of them is desired before putting into effect the scheme to reduce the overhead of the distributing system and secure new revenue from current Selznick productions. The plan of the Committee of Creditors, in the following letter sent to all creditors:

"A meeting of creditors was held, February 16th, at which more than one hundred creditors with claims amounting to over two-thirds of the entire indebtedness were present in person or through representation.

"After full discussion the meeting unanimously selected the undersigned to act as committee for the creditors and a plan of reorganization was adopted without dissent.

"The plan is enclosed herewith and we summarize it for your convenience as follows:

"The plan contemplates that the creditors involved in bankruptcy proceedings, together with the creditors of the parent corporations, some having the bulk of the debts and others having the bulk of the assets, shall be eliminated, and a new corporation will be organized to take over all of the assets, liabilities, and creditors of the parent corporations. The first two years notes bearing interest at six per cent. ($250 per annum and whenever there is sufficient funds on hand, a distribution of five per cent. ($50) of the amount of the notes will be made pro rata.

"It was the opinion of all those present at the meeting that through reorganization the best results could be accomplished and that the plan would be made effective and put in operation by March 1st, if the creditors would act promptly.

"Creditors to the amount of more than Sixteen Hundred Thousand Dollars ($16,000,000) have already given their approval to the plan, which in our opinion offers the best evidence that it is to your interests to give it your heart co-operation."

Preparing for "Uncle Tom"
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Principal Pictures intend filming "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on a large scale. The river scenes will be constructed on the lot and for that purpose, others unmade in the plan have been diverted to different studios. The Guy Bates Post picture will be made at the Ince studio and "East Side, West Side," a new Carl Laemmle picture at the Hollywood studio.

Coming!
The Novelty Melodrama of the Year

Galleons, derelicts, once-proud clippers, stately liners, caught in the grip of the weird Sargasso Sea through centuries and wedged by sea-weed into an island of lost ships. A colony of men and only two women inhabit it, a rabble ruled by a giant with the right of might. Escape is impossible. Each new wreck adds castaways, desperate men—sometimes a woman, and she, by community law, must choose her mate from the men who offer. Two want her—the brute who rules and the man accused of murder.

Director Maurice Tourneur tackled a big job in filming this story of Captain Crittenden Marriott's. Not only was there drama of the strongest kind, but also the unprecedented locale of the Sargasso Sea with its waste world of stagnant weed, its submarine monsters, the hundreds of ships it never lets go. A sailor's myth some call the Sargasso Sea; yet the atlas shows it at the Gulf of Mexico's very door. Thus Tourneur has depicted both island and people in scenes that come as some new, almost incredible wonder.

With Anna Q. Nilsson, Milton Sills, Frank Campeau and Walter Long in the cast, produced at M. C. Levee's vast United Studios, at Hollywood, "The Isle of Lost Ships" will be discovered as that rarest of jewels—a photoplay the like of which has never been seen.

pickler for 2 days. About a dozen kinderlach were waitin with pennies and nickels to go in. I showed for the first time The Great Train Robbery and the serial Perils of Pauline with the Great Star White Pearl in which she herself kills 4 men. A fine Maydel is she Pearl, but mine Idene, Sura, wouldn’t let me look too much on her. She is a Jelisnice.

Mine Wife sells the tickets and I take the pennies and nickels from the kids. Clem, being a business man, helped me to collect the nickels and we pushed in the kids before the Gerry Society had a chance to see that they are alone, without what they call a chapenish. Clem was really surprised what a beautiful Hosey I have. On the inside I have an automatic player piano which I got from the Italian next door for $57 cold cash after he gave up his business pushing it around the corners every morning.

The Theater was packed with baby carriages, kids, nursing bottles and two Neighborhoods, the Kosher butcher and the Tony the Barber. Clem wanted to know the reason for mine success and I told him that it is because I give mine customers freedom. America is a free country, and as I am a good Citizen, I let mine Customers do as they please.

They eat peanuts, oranges, candy, Pastrami sandwiches. The boy, who pays me $3 a week for the priveleges sells them bottles of soda water and believe it to me, every time the gum boys on the picket throw from his pistol, a cork, coming out of a bottle makes such a noise, that you really think some one was shooting and if by chance the kids plays into some kids eye and he starts to cry and yell — a real effect is produced of an holdup. Clem wants to know why Mr. Shmuel Rappotel dont come down to mine Theater to learn how to put on a show with real effects. I told him that next week I have a speshil figure with a personal appearance of Kid Ganuff, so will invite mr. Rappotel.

Maybe I can get a feature for about two weeks for $14 to pay mine rent? Mr. Zukor of the Famous will guarantee, because I am his only cash CUSTOMER, no checks come backs. Will you let know next week how I made out with Kid Ganuff.

MAX ROTH, 1005 Loew Building, New York City
Roth Joins Laemmle
All Known Coast Exhibitor Will Help Universal Production Chiefs Shape Picture Policy
Universal announced yesterday that genius H. Roth, one of the chief town exhibitors in the country had accepted a post with the company and would be a personal representative of Carl Laemmle. His specific duties will be to help production heads at Universal in shaping a policy that will satisfy exhibitors all over the country.

Roth is at present at Universal City conferring with Laemmle, Julius Kleinheim, director general, and Homer Boushey, production manager. He will act as a sort of "listening post" with his ear to the ground to pick up the rumbles from exhibitors. (Continued on Page 2)

Anderson Leaves Intern'l for "U"
Richard V. Anderson, has resigned as sales manager of the International News Reel Corp. producers of International News to join Universal as sales exploiter, in a post designed to create better sales methods.
Harvey Day has replaced Anderson.

Backs Fairbanks
T. D. Van Osten, Official in Northern California M. P. T. O. Says Exhibitors Will Support "Dough"
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—The Times prints a special dispatch from San Francisco, in which Thomas D. Van Osten, managing director of the Northern California M. P. T. O., is quoted as follows:
"The small town exhibitor has been made to pay the losses on picture failures. If Douglas Fairbanks and his associates are really desirous to remedy many of the 'evils' of the industry, they will find hundreds of exhibitors ready to co-operate with them."

Van Osten's remarks relative to the proposed protective association planned by Fairbanks, the Talmadges and other stars is the first expression from exhibitor circles relative to this plan.

"Legit" War?
Adolph Zukor Mentioned as Party at Projected Meeting to Develop Opposition to the Shuberts
A copyrighted dispatch from the Chicago Tribune from its Paris correspondent mentions Adolph Zukor as one of a number of prominent figures who will meet at Nice, to draw up plans for a battle against the Shuberts.

Archie Selwyn, is given as the spokesman. He is quoted as saying that the conference will include Sam Harris, Adolph Zukor, Gilbert Miller and himself and then the dispatch goes on to say:
"The Shuberts have combine with A. L. Erlanger to control the theatrical industry of the United States. (Continued on page 4)

Grainger Leaves; Given Dinner
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—James R. Grainger, was given a farewell dinner by Abraham Lehr, at the Ambassador on Tuesday night, prior to his leaving for the East. He has been here for seven weeks, watching production and will return in May. Grainger says Goldwyn is busier than any other company on the coast and that the outlook is brighter than ever.

More Movie Chats
New Yearly Contract Signed with W. H. Hodkinson—Will Now Run Until Feb. 4, 1924
Following a number of delays, the M. P. T. O. A., and the Hodkinson Corporation, have signed a new contract for the distribution of the Official Movie Chat for another year. The new agreement guarantees the distribution of the one reeler until Feb. 4, 1924.

Charles Urban will continue to prepare them for the M. P. T. O. Release will continue weekly, as in the past. The negotiations between the Cohen organization and Hodkinson were held up one time because of the death of Sydney Cohen's mother.

May Produce Independently
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Myron and David Selznick, leave for New York Friday. There some talk they will withdraw from the Selznick activities and produce independently.
L. J. Selznick said yesterday he didn't believe the coast report was correct. At the same time, he indicated it was possible, basing this statement on the fact that Myron had definitely established a reputation as a producer and could now go out on his own.

Taxes Show Drop
January Business Under That of December—Greater Than Gross for January, 1922
(Washington, D. C.—A total of $6,766,208.75 was collected from the tax on admissions during the month of January, according to a report just issued by the Treasury Department. This is an increase of $12,702,987 over the collections of January, 1922, which totaled $6,453,483.80, but was some $60,000 less than the collections of December, which amounted to $6,825,249.80.

During the month the collection from the seating tax on theaters, museums, etc., amounted to $97,005.81 as compared with $96,202.03 in the corresponding month of last year, and $35,107.24 in December.

Breaks With Hays
Under date of Feb. 27, Sydney S. Cohen has written Will H. Hays, that the M. P. T. O. is not in accord with the uniform contract drawn up by the Hays' organization and approved by the T. O. C. C. and the O'Reilly—N. Y. exhibitor group. Cohen charges the contract is not equitable and that Hays did not carry out the negotiations as he had promised.

Late yesterday no one at the Hays' office could be reached for a statement.

all over the country and help Universal make the kind of pictures he thinks exhibitors demand.

Roth recently resigned from the Rothchild enterprises in San Francisco, which control the Imperial, the Portola, the Granada and the California theaters there. He has been long identified with exhibitor activities and in San Francisco, together with Jack Pattington, he managed those four houses, each a first run. Roth also has spent some time in production, among one of the ventures, the production of "The Rosary," with Sam Rork. "Hunting Big Game in Africa," which has been done doing excellent business at the Lyric, for some weeks is controlled by Roth.

NEW YORK
An Open Letter to Motion Picture Theatre Owners

The accompanying article reproduced from yesterday’s New York “Herald” is a timely warning.

Why take such chances?

You know the danger of exposed film—protect your patrons and your business from such occurrences, by installing Feaster machines—the ultimate development in projection equipment.

You owe it to yourself, your projectionists and other employees, as well as your theatre patrons to safeguard them from the ever present film fire hazard.

Feaster machines prevent these accidents—eliminate rewinding—strain and tension on film—and minimizes film breakage. Order Feasters for your projectors, reduce the fire hazard and avert theatre panics.

The new model Feaster machine with 2000 foot magazine can be seen in operation on Simplex or Power’s projectors at our general offices.

No fires to fear with Feasters.

Yours for Safety-First,
FREDERICK H. ELLIOTT,
Vice-President.

The Feaster machine is approved and recommended by the National Board of Fire Underwriters and the New York Board of Fire Underwriters.

They have formed a $100,000,000 project with eastern and western bankers. They hope to force every artist and producer to accept their terms.

Mr. Selwyn added that the independent producers were pooling their resources, talent, experience and money to fight the Shubert-Erlanger organization. The Selwyn group also comprises A. H. Woods, Morris Gest, George Cohan and David Belasco.

"Under the new arrangements the plays submitted to this group will be turned over to whatever member is most experienced in staging works of the same kind. Mr. Selwyn said, 'Every manager and producer will have the co-operation of every other. Rehearsals will be attended by representative experts of all members and the plays will be moulded under the combined guidance of the keenest theatrical minds in the nation.'

"Mr. Selwyn added that French and British producers will be invited to join the new organization."

Archie Selwyn, was a passenger on the boat that took Zukor and Sidney Kent to Europe. A Famous Players official stated yesterday he couldn't quite figure how Zukor would fit into the operations of a group in the legitimate field, although it is true that Famous Players control Charles Frohman, Inc.

"Salome" in Philadelphia

Philadelphia—When "Salome" was booked for the Aldine the management, in addition to an extensive advertising campaign, covered a mailing list of 5,000.

Those on the list received a handsomely printed card, announcing the coming of the production.

Splurges on "East is West"

Keith's Prospect, Brooklyn, put on an elaborate stage setting for "East is West" using a printed back drop and a company of ten in introducing the Constance Talmadge feature. This is somewhat unusual since Brooklyn picture houses, with the exception of Hyman's Mark Strand, have hesi-tated in adopting elaborate or expensive prolegmes for their films.

Guessing Contest for "Palomat"

Milwaukee — "One Guess — It's Worth It" was the text of a teaser that appeared in the Wisconsin News when "The Pride of Palomat" played the Butterfly.

The contest consisted of pictures of Marjorie Daw, Forrest Stanley, and other players of the production. Their real names were given but a blank left for the character they were to impersonate in the picture. This ran five days in advance of the showing.

Ring Contest for "Zenda"

Clarksdale, Miss.—A ring contest, entitling the winner to an onyx ring, was the feature of a campaign for "The Prisoner of Zenda," when the picture was presented at Saenger's Marion. Awards were also given to other contestants.

An announcement was made by the theater, that the ring would be given to the woman whose small finger of the left hand measured exactly the size of the ring. The stunt drew pretty near every woman in town, the prize being given in the lobby of the theater. Other contestants received pens.

Radio Helps Neilan Film

Seattle—An announcement by radio by the Chamber of Commerce, a new "Claire Windsor Club" the membership of which included the wife of the Lieutenant Governor of the State a tie-up with an automobile show and the attendance of 900 Y. M. C. A. boys, headed by the temporary "King of Seattle," featured the exploitation camaign, the "Strangers' Banquet" that city.
Manager H. B. Wright of the Strand, one of the Jensen & Von Herberg houses, put the campaign over.

Good Stunt for "The Hottentot"

Several tie-ups have been made with local stores for "The Hottentot" the feature at the Brooklyn Strand, this week. One effective angle is an attractive window display in a nearby I. Miller shoe store. The shoe store is situated on one of Brooklyn's crowded streets, people admiring the shoes were thereby informed of the showing.

A Personal Touch

Newark, N. J.—A very friendly looking post-card was received by many thousands in the vicinity of the Rialto, last week, when Maurice Tournier's, "The Christian" opened at the theater. The card bore the written signature of Tournier and in "a draw to you to the theater" way told of the production playing the house.

A Full Page Gratis

St. Louis—"Racing Hearts," had a free page in the Sunday papers recently. The local Cadillac agency footed the bill.

The Cadillac people prepared a film showing the manufacture of the car and using the audience on a journey through the factory. Herschel Stuart, of the Missouri, took the film and sold the agency the idea of a little reciprocity. Both profited thereby.

Convenience for Patrons

Omaha—"Be one of the lucky ones to ride in a sleigh to see 'Quincy Adams Sawyer' at the Sun Theater.
This is the first high ride that has been possible in five years in the city and by being one of the first hundred to phone the theater that you want to join the party."

The above announcement was a stunt for the production, when it was shown for an entire week at the Sun.
Newspapers called attention to the novelty, and public response was immediate.

Short Stuff Exploitation

Hodkinson has launched an exploitation campaign in behalf of the Bray Romances. The first tie-up was made when "The Mystery Box" played the Missouri, St. Louis.

Through the St. Louis Despatch, a message was broadcast locally that the picture would be shown at the Missouri, St. Louis.

Through the St. Louis Despatch, a message was broadcast locally that the

Says Hays Has Not Acted in Good Faith—Claims There Are Now More Evils Than Ever

Sydney S. Cohen, president of the M. P. T. O., in the letter to Will H. Hays, in which he breaks off relations between the two organizations and thus terminates negotiations on the uniform contract, makes a number of specific charges. He very definitely states among other things that Hays has not kept faith; that he promised not to issue any statement regarding the progress of the discussion until the meetings were completed; that abuses discussed at the outset have increased rather than diminished, and that the contract as prepared would not prevent, nor modify, and advance payments of exhibitors.

The letter in part says:

"The members of our committee complain of the violation of your definite promise and agreement made with our organization that no contract or other statement would be (Continued on page 2)

Michigan Won

Censorship Bill Killed—Charles C. Pettijohn Responsible for the Victory

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Lansing, Mich.—Censorship in Michigan has been killed. It is held here that the efforts of Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Hays organization, deserves the credit for the victory.

There was a hearing held before the joint committee on state affairs on Wednesday night at which Pettijohn was successful in ridding the arguments of the censorship advocates. At the conclusion of the argument, he was thanked by the majority of the members of the committee, a thing unheard of here.

The committee with him was crowded to capacity. Many members of both branches of the legislature who were not on the committee attended the hearing.

Ince Film To Metro

Deal on for Distribution of "Ten Ton Love," Originally Scheduled for First National

A deal is understood to be under way for the distribution of "Ten Ton Love," through Metro. The picture is one of the Thomas H. Ince series which was originally scheduled to be released through First National, but over which there ensued some difficulties involving exhibition value.

Ince, it seems, had first offered an exhibition value of $700,000 which was met by First National. Later, however, when the complete First National executive committee met it was decided to reduce the value. Ince refused to consent to this with the result that the eight pictures listed in his contract with First National did not include "Ten Ton Love," in which Madge Bellamy appears.

Ince's New York representative, could not be reached for a statement, W. E. Atkinson of Metro, had nothing to say.

CHARACTER OF STORY....... War widow, to keep child wanted by husband's folks, pretends to be wife of farmer's son, also killed in war
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION........ 6,700 feet

F. B. O.'s latest Ethel Clayton release offers the star in a much more appropriate and pleasing story than her last picture, "If I Were Queen," and undoubtedly it will be better liked by her many admirers. The star always succeeds in putting over a heart interest role such as that found in "Can a Woman Love Twice," where she risks everything to keep the child which her war husband's people would take from her because of her occupation as a cabaret entertainer.

Director Horne starts right out by establishing a fine sympathy for the heroine, showing her at home with her little son and her struggle to maintain herself and the child whom the war left fatherless. The scenes between the mother and child are thoroughly appealing and it secures the spectator's sympathy right off and retains it to the very end. This angle of the story gives the picture a fine audience appeal and it should please a large majority of picture goers. Muriel Dana is a delightful youngster who will attract a good deal of attention.

The production is satisfying and there are numerous attractive shots that give it pictorial value. There is one in particular, a sepia tinted view of the mother playing with her youngster on a hillside, that is very beautiful. The photography throughout is very good and the lightings also, with the exception of being occasionally too bright on close-ups.

The story is told smoothly enough but it drags slightly just prior to the climax, and the continuity at this point, is not especially good. It is slightly difficult to follow the theme and the audience is confused with regard to the attitude of Abner Grant, the farmer who takes the woman and child into his home believing them to be the wife and child of his dead son. But when the son actually returns you cannot decide whether Grant realizes that the woman is an imposter and really knows the young man to be his son, or if he thinks the latter is the imposter. Probably a revision in the titles here would clarify matters.

Story: Mary Grant supports her child by entertaining in a cabaret. The parents of her dead soldier husband try to secure custody of the child on the grounds that she is not fit to care for it. The mother sees a chance to hide away by pretending to be the wife of another man named Grant, also lost in the war, and goes to live with the latter's father on his farm. How this man's son eventually returns, falls in love with Mary and the truth is learned, followed by the forgiveness of her own husband's people who finally locate her.

A Satisfactory Feature—Should Please A Good Many

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors will undoubtedly find this a first rate attraction, at least for the average audience, because it contains elements of popular appeal such as heart interest, mother love, romance and a capable and pleasing star. It is also good to look at and they'll enjoy the performance of the youngster about whom the story revolves.

Ethel Clayton's admirers can be told that she has a story much more suited to her personality than her last, and you can promise them they'll like her work in this. Catchlines will give you a good idea of the story and you could make a point of the war widow who pretended to be the wife of another man's son in order to secure her child from the parents of her real husband who sought to take the child away from her. The title does not give a particularly good idea of the story so it would be well to use catchlines.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Compares present day domestic troubles with those of primeval period

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 9,526 feet

As far as the spectacular and artistic side of it is concerned, "Adam's Rib," is a worthy offering that deserves consideration if you prefer splendor to the degree that Cecil De Mille serves it in his latest extravaganza, a sort of allegorical play that starts out to prove that women of Eve's time carried on just as they do at the present day, but ends up by vexing you because it proves nothing and takes altogether too long to do it. The feature consumes nearly ten reels and despite the elegance of DeMille's production and the continuous display that makes it pictorially appealing, "Adam's Rib" becomes a tedious entertainment about half way through and whether they will wait for the other half depends wholly upon whether or not they can be satisfied with visual appeal alone.

Surely Jeanie MacPherson's story will hardly be sufficient to hold their interest for the ten reels allotted it regardless of the extravagant fixings with which the producer has trimmed it. The basic situation deals with the ever popular discontented wife who craves romance at the age of forty while her husband's business precludes the satisfying of her desires. There is a slightly new angle, however, in that the daughter of this couple plays a prominent part in the entire affair and eventually is robbed of her good name through an act which saves her mother's reputation. But this particular twist is one of the most unconvincing bits in the story. Just why the girl's name should be ruined because she is found in a King's apartment under no obviously comprising circumstances, is not explained.

But De Mille' has made no particular effort, at any time, to make things convincing. His attention is notably concentrated on the artistic side of the production and it is in this respect that he uses most of the footage. There are numerous lavish settings, wholly unnecessary to the story, but which help to build up the spectacular feature of it and the allegorical sequence is another evidence of money really wasted. This sequence only makes the interest drag tediously. The atmosphere, on the whole, is artificial and will probably only please those who can be interested in such an extreme novelty as this offers.

Story: Michael Ramsay offers to buy several million dollars worth of wheat from a foreign government provided their king, who is making love to Ramsay's wife, returns to his own country and marries immediately. How young Tillie Ramsay sacrifices her own name to save her mother's reputation is eventually followed by the reunion of her mother and father and her forgiveness by the man who married her to protect her, but who also really loves her.

Will Only Please Those Who Will Be Satisfied With The Lavish Display

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It all depends upon to what extent you can satisfy your patrons with a novelty film, one that is highly fantastic and, of course, contains plenty of valuable pictorial appeal. If you think the lavishness of settings and general atmosphere of the spectacular will hold them you can consider it. On the other hand "Adam's Rib," will require some thought on your part from the standpoint of your own particular clientele.

You know best whether ten reels of novelty will satisfy them.

You also know whether the lack of strong situations and sustained interest will be a drawback. Decide accordingly. Of course they should know what to expect of Cecil DeMille but he almost outdoes himself in his latest extravaganza, "Adam's Rib." The title will stand exploiting and there is enough to talk about if you really want to get them interested.

CHARACTER OF STORY .... Southern girl comes North to visit son of man her aunt was in love with but returns home because of possible gossip

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 4,488 feet

While the material contained in the screen version of "Gossip," which was published in book form under the same name, is not remarkable either for its novelty or strength of plot, still it will probably find favor with the average audience, particularly if they like Gladys Walton. She is extremely pleasing to the eye, and in her old-fashioned hoopskirts and lace mitts should appeal to the romance-loving portion of your audience.

Although the title of the picture is "Gossip," and it is around this point that the plot swings, the only time it is brought up is in sub-titles when the designing widow tells the girl that everyone is gossiping because she is living in the Ward home. However, of actual gossiping there is no actual shot.

The story has been well mounted, but Director Bag-got in his effort to inject some suspense, has held the sequence in which a bolshevistic workman plants a bomb in a cigar-box and gives it to the girl to give to Hiram Ward, entirely too long. She carries the box around until you begin to believe the bomb will never go off, puts in on Ward's desk only to take it off, and finally brings it back to the workman's home with some medicine for his baby. The clock in the bomb is set for three-thirty and at three twenty-nine a half she is still holding the box. It does finally explode and the cottage crashes in ruins but of course nothing serious happens to the girl.

Story: Caroline Weatherbee, brought up in hoopskirts by her aunt, comes North to visit Hiram Ward, son of the man her aunt was in love with. He is having trouble with the men in his factory; and thinks the girl has been sent by them to compromise him.
His chum Bob, believes her story and they take her in. Later she feeds the strikers in Ward's home, but damage is avoided. Mrs. Boyne, a widowed cousin of Ward's plan to marry him for his money, and Caroline goes back to the South after being told that people are gossiping. Ward follows her and the happy ending ensues.

Title Lends Itself Well To Exploitation

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If your folks like the star they should be well pleased with this one. You can promise a pleasing little story with a romantic flavor, a heroine in hoopskirts and a modern business man hero. In the event that you have played "Crinoline and Romance" a recent Viola Dana feature of a similar order with good results, you should be pretty safe in booking this one, as there is somewhat the same atmosphere.

The title is a fine one and lends itself readily to exploration stunts. A trailer showing the explosion of the bomb should interest them, or one showing the ar-riage of the heroine in hoopskirts. The film is sufficiently short to allow a good supporting program to be used to good advantage.
The New Year's Biggest

Betty Compson’s Latest Very Attractive Pictorially

Betty Compson in “THE WHITE FLOWER”
Paramount

DIRECTOR ..................... Julia Crawford Ivers
AUTHOR ....................... Julia Crawford Ivers
SCENARIO BY ................. Julia Crawford Ivers
CAMERAMAN .................. James C. Van Trees
AS A WHOLE................. Appealing atmosphere, splendid pictorial value and interesting romance the salient features of this

There have been any number of ways of revenge suggested through the medium of photoplay plots but this one is certainly a brand new thought—and incidentally a slightly new light on the present popular theory of suggestion. Whether or not the writer bases her idea on an actual legend is not disclosed but it would appear that she has taken for granted that suggestion can work both ways—both for good and evil. In the case of “The White Flower,” it is for evil and you are acquainted with a “prayer priest,” a native of Hawaii who prays for the death of a certain other native, usually as a means of revenge.

But there is a pleasing and rather interesting romance contained in the story that will probably excuse the improbable sequence of witchery and the author, who also directed the picture, has supplied a thoroughly delightful production with innumerable beautiful backgrounds and a general atmosphere of pictorial appeal that makes “The White Flower” always well worth looking at. Of course since there are two lovers, there is also a villain but his interference is of minor importance.

Betty Compson is quite attractive as the daughter of a Hawaiian woman, her father an American. She displays a vivacious temperament the result of this union and makes the role of Konia Markham pleasing, particularly to those who admire her. Edmund Lowe, suits the hero role splendidly and the cast is satisfactory on the whole.

Story: When Konia Markham finds that her American lover has a sweetheart, his own suitor, Panuahi, suggests that Konia have her rival “prayed to death,” an old native means of revenge. The girl is near death when Konia prevents the prayer from being fulfilled, confesses and is rewarded by the American girl who sacrifices her self that her fiancé may be happy with the one he really loves.

Will Satisfy If They Like A Picture That Is Good To Look At

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Where pictorial values appeal to your audience and you can rely upon them being satisfied with a picture whose chief appeal is in the atmosphere that it sets forth, backgrounds and production in general, you can safely show them “The White Flower.” The title won’t mean very much of itself so use plenty of stills in the lobby and catchlines to give a better idea of what they must expect.

For your admirers of romance you can safely make promises and satisfy them, but if you know your folks take stories seriously and feel that the feature’s splendid pictorial qualities will be insufficient to get it over, don’t be elaborate in your promises. The star’s name can be used to advantage and get her admirers interested through an assortment of pictures of her in your lobby.

Feature That Aims To Correct False Conception of Hollywood and Its People

A. B. Maescher Prod.
“NIGHT LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD”
Arrow—State Rights

DIRECTOR ....................... Fred Caldwell
AUTHOR ........................ Fred Caldwell
SCENARIO BY .................. Fred Caldwell
CAMERAMAN ................... Not credited

AS A WHOLE......Novelty that will probably draw because of subject matter which affords good exploitation

STORY......Essentially propaganda to disprove public’s impression of “movie” city

DIRECTION......Fair; includes touches that make for audience appeal but is far from perfect technically

PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Average
LIGHTINGS ..................... Usually satisfactory

PLAYERS......J. Frank Glendon most important but little is required of him; some screen favorites introduced

EXTERIORS.........Some in and around studios interesting

INTERIORS ............ Adequate

DETAIL ................. Too many sub-titles

CHARACTER OF STORY......“Hick” goes to Hollywood to have a “wild” time and is disappointed when he finds that the wickedness of the place has been exaggerated

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION......About 6,000 feet

The exploitation possibilities and box office value of “Night Life in Hollywood,” seem rather certain in view of the recent condemnation of the “movie” center both by the press and public opinion generally. The public will naturally be attracted by a title which seems to promise a startling exposition of affairs at Hollywood so you should have little trouble getting them in. Whether or not they go out satisfied is largely a matter of conjecture. Those who come in expectant of midnight orgies and “wild” parties may not find satisfaction in the scenes intended to show what folks think the place is like.

This dream sequence is rather tame and some of Cecil DeMille’s spectacles would make these scenes look like a church festival in comparison. The director has not been lavish in suggesting what is usually associated with Hollywood and his denouement of the true state of affairs is disclosed chiefly through the introduction of some of the screen favorites shown in their home surroundings with their wives, children and mothers.

The last mentioned touch is the feature’s most conclusive argument for the picture city as far as the public is concerned. One shot of Bryant Washburn, his wife and two sons, will do more towards convincing them that Hollywood is on the level, than all the sub-titles in the picture put together. And there’s a lot of them. Others who are introduced are Sessue Hayakawa and his wife, Theodore Roberts, J. Warren Kerrigan and his mother, William Desmond and the late Wallie Reid, his wife and their son.

As far as propaganda is concerned, the picture serves its purpose adequately and has box office possibilities particularly when a typical “fan” crowd is catered to. On the other hand it hardly supplies a strong entertainment, sufficient to satisfy a crowd at all critical. Production values are average but the direction is quite faulty. There is a poorly sustained interest and the story told in a somewhat disjointed fashion. A slight comedy twist makes but a faint impression despite Gale Henry’s efforts. Others in the picture are J. L. McComas, Josephine Hill, Elizabeth Rhodes and Jack Connelly.

Story: Joe Powell decides to have a “wild” time so he goes to Hollywood. He is followed by sister Carrie who has also read the home town paper’s accounts of the place. The rest of the picture shows you Joe’s vision of the place and the disillusion when he finds the “movie” folks honest-to-goodness working people with homes, families, etc.

Title Should Bring Them In and Can Be Exploited

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You should be able to judge readily whether or not you can use this one to good advantage. If you decide to show it exploitation should be an easy matter. The title gives you a fine start and in view of current opinion with regard to Hollywood and its people you might arouse interest by promising a picture that tells the truth about Hollywood.

Of course catchlines can be used to let them know more about what the picture is about and the “fan” crowd in particular can be appealed to, telling them that many of their favorites are shown in private life. The picture is a valuable boost to the industry in the way of correcting a false impression of those engaged in the making of motion pictures.

HAL ROACH presents
HAROLD LLOYD
in Safety Last
the first seven reel comedy
Pathécomedy
You have seen "Dr. Jack" and "Grandma's Boy." You have thought that the number of laughs in each could never again be equalled. You have seen the greatest dramatic features where thrill followed thrill, and you felt that the utmost in thrills had been accomplished.

Now you will see a picture greater in thrills than any drama; greater in laughs than any comedy; greater in everything than anything you have ever seen before!
Harold Lloyd and Hal Roach have for years been making comedies that with every picture have been getting better and better.

With each great picture it becomes harder and harder for star and producer to make one even greater.

When "A Sailor Made Man" was released every critic felt that the utmost in comedy had been created.

Yet "Grandma's Boy" followed and exceeded it. Then "Dr. Jack" topped the amazing records made by "Grandma's Boy" both in house receipts and in laughter.

"Safety Last" has accomplished the apparently impossible by being better. It has proven that there are no limits of achievement for Harold Lloyd.

"A Howling Success"—Century—Universal
Type of production .................................. 2 reel comedy

Brownie, the dog is seen to good advantage in this one, and if he is popular with your folks they will like this. Buddy Messinger is pleasing as a bell hop in a hotel but hasn’t very much to do. The theme is slight, dealing with a professor who has a formula for a solution that will kill dogs instantly. Brownie is on the Professor’s trail and is assisted by the friendly bell hop who has a dog of his own. At the finish, after the Professor is foiled, Brownie returns to the meeting of the dogs with the formula and is presented with a medal for his bravery.

"Shoot Straight"—Hal Roach—Pathé
Type of production .................................. 1 reel comedy

This Paul Parrott vehicle has more genuine amusement in it than has been the case with some of this comedian’s recent offerings, and should find favor with the average audience. The reel is helped considerably by the different animals that Parrott attempts to shoot and many and varied are the methods he uses. First he tries squirrels, luring them within shooting distance by means of walnuts tied on a string. But the squirrels perch on the gun when he isn’t looking. Then he tries rabbits but to no avail. Finally stumbling into a river, he attempts to hit some duck decoys put there by members of a hunting club. Told by the indignant members to get his own “blind,” he employs a window frame with a shade, behind which the ducks hide.

"A Jungle Romeo"—John Rouan—Educational
Type of production .......................... 2 reel monkey comedy

This is the best monkey comedy that has been seen in many a long day, and too much stress cannot be placed on the wonderful work done by “Snooky,” properly called the “Humanzee.” Snooky takes almost every role in the two reel comedy and that’s going some. Further, his facial expression actually changes with the different roles. Children of all ages will be delighted with this one. There is no sign of a human being in the picture but the interest is sustained, the laughs gotten over, and one is sorry when the end comes. The sets are exceedingly cute, being made entirely of bamboo thatching, the little houses and miniature furniture included. If you want a real laugh getter, and a novelty besides, don’t miss this one.

Pathé Review No. 9—Pathé
Type of production .......................... 1 reel magazine

An interesting subject of this Review is the analysis of the Water Hyacinth which grows in the Southern rivers and yields paper pulp, ether, oil, tannin, fertilizer and cattle feed. Another subject that will interest the ladies, especially, are dainty vanity cases in use in the French Court of 1750. A series of views along the water-front comprise the "Living Pictures" section; some clay modeling and the Pathécolor section showing views of Tunis complete the reel.

"Tight Shoes"—Hal Roach—Pathé
Type of production .................................. 1 reel comedy

Paul Parrott seems to be sticking to the industries for his material. Past releases have dealt with numerous different lines of endeavor, from a confectionery store to a paper-hangers job. This one, as the title indicates, deals with his troubles as a shoe clerk, and should prove fairly good entertainment. As usual, before the final shot the place is generally wrecked, and the various characters are seen emerging from the debris. There is nothing particularly novel in seeing shoe boxes fall from the shelves and hit everyone on the head, but if your audience is easily pleased, they will probably get a laugh or two out of it. George Jeske directed and Jobyna Ralston is featured.

"Babies Welcome"—Christie—Educational
Type of production .................................. 2 reel comedy

"Babies Welcome" is an example of what can be done by clever handling of material, regardless of the novelty of the idea employed. This Christie comedy provides very pleasing entertainment, not so much because of the plot but because of the way the little farce has been produced, directed and acted. Dorothy Devore is the featured player, with a supporting cast that includes George Stewart and Babe London. Dorothy, given five hundred dollars to buy her engagement ring, loses the money in a black and white taxi. Seeing a baby show at which a first prize of five hundred dollars is offered, she steals her janitor’s baby and wins the money. How she then tries to return the baby without being seen and caught, finally falling into the taxi her sweetheart is returning home in, and discovers it is the taxi in which she left the money, forms the action. Scott Sidney directed and Gus Peterson and Paul Garnett are responsible for the uniformly good photography.

"Sweetie"—Century—Universal
Type of production .................................. 2 reel kid comedy

If your folks liked the first of the new Baby Peggy releases, "Peg o’ the Movies," they will enjoy this one. It is simply a background for the Baby, but she handles the footage in good shape. She is exceedingly cute and "Sweetie" will be enjoyed by your women folks especially. She is seen first as a poor little girl selling newspapers, but a blind man’s music drowns her voice. However, her resentment against him is turned to pity when he is molested by some Italian street singers. To help him Peggy gets an organ and a monkey and follows the street singers around, taking their proceeds when they aren’t looking. She is adopted by a would-be society woman, who takes her home, monkey and all. At a party one evening an Egyptian dancer appears. Peggy is much amused and comes out while the dance is still in progress in a home-made Egyptian costume, consisting of a Turkish towel and a couple of tin cookie cutters. The laughs in "Sweetie" are derived almost entirely from the Baby and her cute facial expressions.
"Pop Tuttle's Polecat Plot"—F. B. C.
Type of production 2 reel comedy
This latest Dan Mason comedy release is probably the best of Plum Center Comedies so far and there are a lot of new laughs in it that will make it a sure-fire number where they like this type of entertainment. The first reel is a trifle slow but plenty of good incident and new gags in the second half easily make up for it and they won't mind the first bit. This time Pop Tuttle, as owner of the only bus line in Plum Center, discovers that he has a competitor, Nosey Nichols. Pop and Nosey race to meet "yesterday's train" which is just arriving and all the passenger's patronize Nosey's new bus until they discover a fair passenger in Pop's bus. Then they all transfer. Nosey loosens the nut on one of the wheels of Pop's bus and when it comes off Nosey drives up and gets the trade. Undaunted Pop gets a kid to throw a polecat into Nosey's bus and once more the passengers return to Pop's, Tillie, the Great Dane, supporting the broken wheel on a wheelbarrow. It's a first rate laugh-getter if that's what they want.

"Before the Public"—Hal Roach—Pathe
Type of production 2 reel comedy
Snub Pollard is seen in this one as a tenor that the town plots to get rid of. To do this they start a movie actor contest and make him the winner of a prize trip to Hollywood. He departs, under pressure, and a year later finds him returning to his home town, a triumphant star. He makes a personal appearance at the theater during the showing of a film in which he rescues everybody in the cast. A novel bit is introduced at this point, showing the actual screening of the supposed film, and its effect on the audience. The folks are so enthusiastic over Snub's horsemanship that he is chosen to ride "Nitro" at the horse race next day. The result is really funny, because Snub cannot ride at all.

Screen Snapshots No. 21—Pathe
Type of production 1 reel fan magazine
This issue of Screen Snapshots opens with a shot of—so a title says—the most popular girl in California—Baby Peggy. Next comes a view of the three sisters, Viola Dana, Shirley Mason and Edna Flugrath at their own home. Follows a scene showing Marion Davies at work on her new production, and then comes Ora Carew's marriage to John C. Howard. Other film stars seen are Louise Lovely, Milton Sills and his daughter, Betty Compson, Pola Negri and Gloria Swanson. A good fan reel.

"The High Flyer"—C. B. C.—State Rights
Type of production 2 reel comedy
One of the Hall Room Boys comedies, this has some sure-fire laughs and will in all probability go over exceedingly well with your folks. Percy and Ferdie are seen as official care-takers of children whose mothers are shopping in the department store, and the opening sequence will enlist the audience's sympathies immediately. A very pretty girl leaves her young baby with the boys and Percy who is holding the child suddenly sees his sweetheart outside the store. Not wishing her to find him with a child in his arms he ties the baby to a bunch of balloons. While he is talking to his girl, another child comes along and swaps her doll for the baby, which she puts in her little carriage. Percy unaware of the change, after a few minutes makes a grab for the baby only to find the balloons sailing up way beyond his reach. Then the fun begins and continues. The audience of course, knows that it isn't a baby, but the doll, and therefore can enjoy the boys' agony to the utmost. It's good stuff.

Jungle Film to "U" Takes Over "Hunting Big Game," Controlled by Eugene Roth Now Laemmle's Representative (Special to THE FILM DAILY) Los Angeles—Universal has purchased "Hunting Big Game in Africa," from Eugene H. Roth and will distribute it throughout the United States. The picture is now playing at the Lyric in New York. It was produced by H. A. Snow, but Roll. took over the distributing rights. DANNY.

"Hunting Big Game in Africa" has been playing for a number of weeks at the Lyric. Its success there has occasioned a good deal of comment in local film circles, in view of the fact that the picture was first released to practically every distributor in New York and rejected by all. Since the picture evidenced its drawing power in the Lyric the interest of distributors has been again aroused. J. J. McCarthy is handling the New York presentation for Roth. The plan for general release some weeks ago called for road shows. Roth last week joined Universal as special representative in Laemmle. His specific duties involved a close working policy with the heads of production at Universal City, the point being that Roth's experience as an exhibitor would serve the company in good stead in formulating a production policy that would meet the needs and demands of exhibitors.

Chamberlin Off for China (Special to THE FILM DAILY) Seattle—F. V. Chamberlin has just left for the Far East, where as president of Dragon Film Co., he will make films entirely for the Chinese people. Chinese in every detail. He will organize a staff of Chinese scenario writers, directors and camera men.

Buy Half Interest Ackerman and Harris Get 50% Share in Grauman's Million Dollar Theater, Los Angeles (Special to THE FILM DAILY) Los Angeles—Ackerman and Harris have purchased a 50% interest in Grauman's Million Dollar theater at Broadway and Third. It is expected that instead of straight pictures there will be a combination policy of vaudeville and films.

Despite published reports, it is understood that the relations between Sid Grauman and Famous Players are the friendliest, and that the 50% purchase of Ackerman and Harris in the Million Dollar theater was negotiated with the full knowledge and acquiescence of Famous Players who are interested in the Grauman properties. Northwest Booking Combine (Special to THE FILM DAILY) Seattle—Plans are being discussed for a booking combine, composed of exhibitors in Omak, Chelan and Okanogan, to increase efficiency and reduce expense of shipping. Present arrangements call for buying six months ahead. Mentioned prominently in connection with the plan are C. P. Sates, R. A. Kelsey and Mrs. R. E. Culp. A meeting is scheduled for early in June.

Stanley Answers Replies to Amended Complaint of Trade Commission—Stanley Not Majority Stockholder (Special to THE FILM DAILY) Washington—The Stanley Company of America, the Stanley Booking Corp. and Jules E. Mastsbaum have filed their answers to the amended complaint of the Federal Trade Commission against them, Famous Players and others.

One interesting paragraph reads as follows: The allegations of paragraph 4, so far as they refer to these respondents, are admitted, except that if the respondent, Jules Mastsbaum, is intended to be described as in any sense a majority stockholder of Stanley Company of America, that description is incorrect. (Continued on Page 3)

Washington Seeks 10% Tax (Special to THE FILM DAILY) Olympia, Wash.—Over two hundred exhibitors and exchange men made up a special train in Seattle, under direction of L. O. Lukean, president of the Allied Amusement interests, and traveled to Olympia to enter a protest against the proposed 10% state tax on admissions. The bill has not come up yet, and so the outcome is still doubtful. However, a measure proposing a state income tax was defeated.

Denies Charges Famous Players Answers Vitagraph—Claims Company is not Responsible for Drop in Earnings Famous Players, through its attorneys, Cravath, Henderson, Leffingwell and De Gersdorff, has filed its answer to the $6,000,000 suit brought by Vitagraph against the company alleging damages to that amount and a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Laws.

The answer filed in the District Court late Friday goes into detail regarding the various allegations made in the Vitagraph complaint, which refer to the financial situation throughout the country and for the most part, are the perfunctory responses indulged in with the filing of the first papers in actions of this kind.

The general tenor of the reply, so far as the first suit situation is concerned, seeks to impress the point that, in those cities where Famous Players interested itself in theater properties, this was done in order to secure for its product, an adequate representation. The answer cites the instance of the Criterion in New York as representative of the New York theater situation. The papers allege that Vitagraph in 1916 controlled the theater and showed in it motion picture releases by the Famous Players does. It is further claimed that when Vitagraph withdrew from that theater, that company announced it would secure another high-class house for its attractions exclusively. The claim is that Vitagraph at one time did the very thing that it now accuses Famous Players of.

Contract Expires May, 1925 A statement from Alice Brady says that she is under contract to Famous Players until May, 1925, and that that company has loaned her services to Charles Frohman, Inc., in accordance with its contract rights.

Educ'1 Films Damaged Suit Educational Files Damaged Suit (Special to THE FILM DAILY) Los Angeles—Educational has filed a suit for $100,000 damages and seeks an injunction to restrain S. M. Herzig from producing or selling Coue pictures. Educational claims that they control the sole rights to films of that kind.

S. M. Herzig is the producer of "Day by Day," a picture dealing with the Coco method of auto-service, which played at Grauman's Metropollian, Los Angeles, recently.
Denies Charges

Another portion of the answer deals with the earnings of Vitagraph. It is alleged by Famous Players that the earnings of Vitagraph in 1916 were only one sixth of the earnings for 1913, due to the fact that their earnings were immediately cut by the breaking up of the old General Film Co., of which they were a part and which the government sued successfully under the Sherman Act as a trust in 1913 and that Famous Players could not be held responsible for this, because the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. was not formed until 1916.

The Film Year Book is quoted in the reply to indicate that if the Vitagraph earnings dropped it was because of the company's product and not because of any alleged monopoly on the part of Famous Players and the other defendants named by the plaintiff. That portion of the answer which deals in the long list of facts appearing in the Film Year Book which express the ideas of photoplay editors on the ten best pictures of 1922, not one produced by Vitagraph is mentioned.

In connection with the points raised over "The Little Minister," Famous Players alleges that Vitagraph attempted to sell to the company an old version of the Broadway story, produced in either 1912 or 1913 for $60,000, and that when Famous Players refused they hastened to rush another picture into production and hastened its release to compete with the Famous Players' version. Famous Players also claims that Vitagraph "had no right on 'The Little Minister' in this country, it payed Sir James Barrie, the author, a certain royalty on their photoplay, while Vitagraph did not.

In this connection, the reply embodies an advertisement appearing on April 23, 1921, in this publication, then known as Wil's Daily in which Vitagraph said:

"The undersigned, the Vitagraph Company of America, Inc., hereby announces that it is the sole owner of the motion picture rights for the world in and to the book and dramatic composition entitled 'The Little Minister,' by J. M. Barrie, and that it will take all necessary legal measures to prevent any infringement of said rights."

The answer alleges that the advertisement was a misstatement of fact, since there existed no copyright on "The Little Minister" in this country.

It is admitted that Sidney R. Kent wrote the letter Vitagraph alleged he did to M. S. Wilson, sales manager for Paramount in Denver. In this communication, Vitagraph quoted Kent as instructing Wilson "to kick out every Vitagraph account you can find, irrespective of the terms you may have to make, just so you cancel the contract and get them out of the way. As long as they insist on a fight, let's give it to them." Vitagraph in its complaint gave as one of the reasons for its drop in weekly business a $22,000 loss which continued for about 40 weeks, this letter. The answer claims that this letter was sent to Wilson by Kent because Vitagraph had deliberately entered upon a campaign to discredit and unfairly compete with Famous Players in every manner possible.

William M. Seabury, attorney for Vitagraph, could not be reached for a statement on Saturday.

Famous Players has extended its exploitation activities to Mexico City. E. E. Shaner has appointed Leon J. Bamberger, assistant manager of exploitation, as Mexico City representative.

Bomb Charges Dismissed
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Seattle—Judge John B. Gordon has dismissed charges against James McNab and Norman Williams, who were charged with the placing of chemical bombs in a leading theater last October, on the grounds of insufficient evidence. The men are Lasky employees.

Drastic Measure in Tenn.
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Memphis—A drastic censorship bill is now before the Legislature. One of the extreme features is a reviewing charge of $50 a picture without regard to its length. This means that short reels of all kinds would be subject to the same fee to be exacted of features. Another drastic clause provides for a 5% tax on the gross income of theaters to be paid as “a privilege tax for exhibiting films censored by the Tennessee censor board.”

At present exhibitors in the state pay a total of 13 taxes amounting to over 16% of their gross income. This 5% increases this to over 21%.

Non-theatrical films cannot be shown without a permit, costing $10, secured from the commission, which will be composed of nine members, receiving an aggregate salary of $19,800 a year.

The answer goes on to say: “We do not believe that Famous Players-Lasky Corp. ever concealed its interest in Realart Corp. We deny that we ever entered into any program of acquiring or controlling motion picture theaters throughout the United States, or of compelling or coercing exhibitors to book and exhibit any particular motion picture films, or of inducing or compelling exhibitors to book any ‘block’ films. As a matter of fact, Stanley Company of America did not even exist in the years 1918 nor until July, 1919.

Indeed, from the standpoint of these respondents, it would be a misfortune for any particular producing company to be able to control the industry, as fair competition is necessary in order to maintain high standards of production and fair dealing between producers and exhibitors. We have not acquired or controlled, or attempted to acquire or control any motion picture theaters by coercion or intimidation, and have not used the means and methods specified in paragraph 10, or any of them, or any other unlawful means or methods to that end.”

It is felt that with the Metropolitan and the Klawto in downtown Los Angeles, Famous Players are very well represented, and that the Million Dollar theater could easily be diverted to another form of entertainment without impairing the interests of either Grauman or Famous Players.
A Paramount official Saturday decried reports which indicated that Grauman and Famous Players had split. The reports stressed the point that Sol Lesser and associates were now tied up with Grauman. As a matter of fact, Lesser and Grauman have a working arrangement covering the situation in Hollywood. It is also a fact that Lesser owns a 50% interest in the new Hollywood theater, with Grauman controlling the remaining interest.

Local Exhibitors Charge Cohen With Bad Faith—Say He Agreed to 17 Clauses of Contract

Some of the T. O. C. C. and those who have followed the progress of the negotiations leading toward the completion of the uniform contract are frankly wondering why Sydney S. Cohen changed his attitude and what prompted him to turn Mr. H. Hays that the M. P. T. O. could no longer continue negotiations.

Those exhibitors do not care to permit themselves to be deserted but they say they would like to know from Mr. Cohen why he had verbally agreed to 17 of the 21 clauses embodied in the uniform contract as it now stands, why he took no pronounced exception to the remaining four and now finds that there are a number of points involved that threaten the interests of the members of the M. P. T. O. (Continued on page 2)

Uniform Distributing Contract

A press story from Richard Thomas Prod., now working at the Hollywood studio on the coast states that Thomas is signing a uniform contract between independent producers and distributors to rid the field of evils in that direction.

F. P. Signs Willat

Famous Players has signed Irving Willat for a year, during which time he will direct four or five pictures.

He is at present in Florida working on a Dorothy Dalton subject, following which he will direct Tom Meighan in "White Heat."

Stardom Soon for Miss La Marr

Before many months, it is understood Barbara La Marr will have signed a starring contract. She is under personal contract to Arthur H. Sussman of S. A. Pictures, who at present "farming" her out to various producers on the coast.

Simpsons Bellamy for Three Years

Thomas H. Ince has signed Madge Bellamy for three more years. He plans to star her in a series of features including at least one Ince special a year. Miss Bellamy has finished two pictures for Regal Pictures for release through Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

Activity

There is more going on in production in Hollywood at this moment than at any time since the boom period of 1919.

Everybody is happy. Casting agents are having their troubles finding the right kind of people and prices for all kinds of help are soaring. Producers are complaining bitterly of the cost of production. Several of them are outspoken and insist that the actions of several independent producers have had much to do with this. But others argue that it is simply a natural condition due to the increased production. Be that as it may, there is a tremendous lot of activity around the studios. At Goldwyn last week there were over 1000 carpenters and other workers busy. This, exclusive of the professionals. Eight companies were at work. And so it goes at all of the other studios.

The most interesting development of this is the activity of the so-called independents. At the Fine Arts 14 companies are at work including Victor Halperin, High Dierker, Finis Fox, "Big Boy" Williams, Clifford Elfelt, Jess Robbins and others.

At Goldwyn Rupert Hughes' "Souls For Sale" is in its 11th week. They had a big bonfire there a few nights ago when Hughes shot the burning of an immense circus tent and several were injured. It was a big sight.

Neilan is in his eighth week on "The Eternal Three." Other productions in work include "Three Wise Fools," "Red Lights," directed by Badger. "Metheague," Charley Brabin, who will handle Corinne Griffith in

Why The Change?

The claim is made that although Cohen and his attorney, Francis Gibbs did not agree in writing to any of the clauses in the uniform contract, they did agree verbally to 17 paragraphs. It is further said that of the remaining four, the objections raised did not involve the principle for which the libel recovery only.

There is some interest in learning what Cohen meant in his letter to Platts when he said:

“We expect to demonstrate shortly that there are some producers and distributors within the industry independent of your organization who are sufficiently far-sighted to realize that this business cannot be benefited by a continued disregard of the principles of right or wrong, of fair or unfair dealing with the theater owners, and that they owe to our public and to our industry a code of practice and a standard as fair and honorable as that used in any other business.”

An effort made to reach Cohen for a statement yesterday failed.

Breaks Record!

Beats Capitol Theatre attendance receipts of "Robin Hood" and "Passion"

THE BIGGEST BUSINESS IN NEW YORK'S HISTORY!

Pola Negri in "MAD LOVE"

"The throngs which stood six deep swinging away a block and a half down Broadway with their eyes upon the lobby of the Capitol Theatre at 6 o'clock last night constituted, we thought, something that resembled a kind of Pola expedition.

It is a mark of rare distinction for any motion picture player to be able to fill the gigantic Capitol and congest Broadway outside. And there is no hesitancy on our part in saying that at the moment Miss Negri is unquestionably the most popular woman screen player in the world. As a cinema play "asset" there's no one to touch her. Of course, her title writer and bedroom decorator are great little helps. "Mad Love," we believe, is a play far superior to "Passion."

Quinn Martin, N. Y. World

Exhibitors! This is a rare opportunity. Pola Negri is the most-talked-of star in the world. She admits "Mad Love" is her "unparalleled screen success."

"Six Days," Lambert Hill with "The Spoilers" and Seastrom is getting ready as is Hugo Ballin. Mac Murray is also working there.

At Famous-Lasky, Fitzmaurice is finishing "The Cheat." Sam Wood is on "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," Jimmy Cruze is on "Hollywood," Herb Brenon is working with Betty Compson on "The Rustle of Silk" and Walter Hiers is on "Sixty Cents an Hour." The Melford company arrived this week from the East and had great difficulty in finding places to sleep. Never in years has the town been so crowded with tourists.

AT UNITED

First National has its units well under way. Earl Hudson will be on the job for the company and will act as a sort of production manager. At present he is just organizing. First National will have a number of units at work shortly. At present Walton Tully will finish "Trily," started in Paris. James Young is working on "Wandering Daughters" and Eddie Carewe is busy with "The Girl of the Golden West." Arthur Jacobs is hustling on "Terwilliger" and the Talahadge girls are resting in between production.

At Universal City five units are at work and Carl Laemmle is watching the development of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," which, by the way, promises to be one of the big ones for next season. It is running into a big cost. Incidentally at Universal City they are busy with three serials indicating that they still believe in the power of the serial as a box office. One of these is said will be shown in England and her Colonies only and will never be seen in the States. Unusual and interesting.

At Fox seven feature units are at work and five comedy units. Warners are finishing "Main Street" which promises to be another big attraction, and Harry Beaumont is working day and night. Incidentally Beaumont is staging "snow stuff" right in the studio and is giving Hollywood a treat. They never have snow out here. But Beaumont makes it order.

The Schulberg organization has four pictures in work for Al Lichtman and Louis Mayer is busy with his units. Hal Roach is hustling with five units and while Metro is temporarily quiet within the next few weeks it is expected that things will be humming with "Scaramouche" and Jackie Coogan at work together with the others. On the Century lot four companies are at work. The Pickford-Fairbanks organization is quiet but Mary will start shortly on "Rosita," a Spanish story to be directed by Lubitsch. At R-C four units are at work and at Christie's four companies are going full speed. Sennett also has several units at work. "Teddy" the big dog will be featured in one of these.

Five independent companies are working at the Hollywood studios and Charley Ray and Madge Bellamy are busy at the 16th lot. Chaplin is busy with "Public Opinion" featuring Edna Purviance and is in his 14th week, and this is only a part of what is going on. All of the smaller studios are loaded with work and it will be impossible to get studio space for several weeks at least.

The big question is: where is all the money coming from? But it sure is here in big gobs and things are all to the merry.

DANNY.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
St. Louis—William Christy Cabanne has interested St. Louis business men in a $250,000 trust estate to produce a picture in New York. If the production is successful, Cabanne plans to open a studio here. He stated a few days ago that $88,000 of stock has been subscribed and hopes to complete negotiations in time to start production May 1st.

The trust agreement provides that Cabanne’s life is to be insured for $50,000. The trustees shall have the power in managing the enterprise. It will be known as the William Christy Cabanne Motion Picture Trust, Ltd. The trustees are Cabanne, Col. George W. Goode and former U. S. District Judge Henry Priest. Offices have been opened at the Central National Bank Building.

Judging from a film angle purely, a good many feel that the creation of the uniform was the important deed. It is true that the contract has not had a real chance to show how it will work out actually, but the impression seems to be that it will function satisfactorily and through actual operation, point out the impracticable phases.

The Hays office feels that it has gotten its “better pictures” program definitely under way and that the present releases of its members offer sufficient proof that the plan to elevate the standards of production was not mere talk.

Newspaper Opinions

"Mad Love"—Goldwyn

Capitol

DAILY NEWS—Mme Negrì does some splendid and vivid pieces of acting in this film, but one good performance in a cast of characters does not mean a good picture. On the contrary, all that saves "Mad Love" is Pola Negrì.

EVENING WORLD—It is beautified in spots (the X marking the spot where Pola Negrì has a bit, drollily photographed, so practically all foreign films are; not so well directed), as is the case with nearly all across-the-seas pictures, and the story merely gives Pola a chance to vam a little and love much.

GLOBE—So it is just another vampire picture. * * * And if it is not a very notable vampire picture, either.

MAIL—Mme Negrì, however, cannot afford to overlook "Mad Love." * * * For it exceeds the efforts of some of our best stage stars.

Her acting in her latest picture, however, is not what we saw in "Passion." There is a touch of artificiality in her work in many scenes and a lack of spontaneity.

ANX—Far above ye, even the bizarre settings, rises the transcendental figure of Pola with that fine tragic mask of a face glancing with fascination and so full of appeal that the audience yesterday almost wept tears when she raised an expensive gown in the salt water.

TELEGRAM—In "Mad Love," which is on the screen of the Capitol Theater this week, there may be found warm-blooded action, vibrant beauty and thrilling reality of characters, the like of which the silver screen has rarely seen.

TIMES—* * * the same vivid, vital, virtuous Pola who has made du Barry, Carmen and Camille live on the screen as real people whom you might like to know, or, if you are wise, keep away from. * * *

"Mad Love" is one of those Sappho stories. And the chances are you don't like that kind any more. But the odds are that you will like this one.

TRIBUNE—* * * looked like the perfect vehicle for Pola Negrì. * * *

Pola is just about the whole show. But there are some splendidly directed carnival scenes with nonchalant vampire action.

WORLD—But in "Mad Love," which we believe is a play fair superior to the screen "Passion," there are moments of emotional acting by Miss Negrì which come mighty near to making a believer of us. * * *

This tragic story of the romance of the vampire and beauty, Lanre, is acted ideally but daringly, with a sure touch and tempo, and does things to the emotions of the person on whom it looks. Which few will acknowledge the picture screen is capable of doing.

WOMEN'S TELEGRAPH—"Mad Love" offers Miss Negrì abundant opportunity to display her charm, at the same time emotional control made it unnecessary to tone down the picture in many places.

"Mr. Billings Spends His Dime"

F. P. L.—Rialto

AMERICAN—He is funny, but principally because he is fat. Lean, he would be perhaps somewhat melancholy. However, his facial expressions and his invariable demeanor of surprised mirthfulness help him a great deal.

He worked very quietly in this new film and, though it was difficult to laugh at him, one could see what he was up against.

EVENING JOURNAL—Although Mr. Ruggles has made quite a fat man, he is not Mr. Arlucke. That he is fat, has an amiable voice and innumerable comic turns are undeniable facts, but he does not have the inimitable mannerisms that made the drolleried obese star a success.

The picture is an agreeably novel concoction of fun and plot.

GLOBE—* * * takes up the work in splendid fashion of proving that a fat man's capacity for loving is as great as that of any other man. He has an unusual facility of facial expression, is quick to take advantage of a situation, and is exceptionally good at sly and sly and sly and sly.

THE INITIALS OF THE VEHICLE * * * is nothing more than adequate and is not quite up to the standard of light comedy the Paramount Company has set.

EVENING WORLD—True, Walter is a fat comedian; a very, very fat comedian, but his methods are so utterly different from those of (and we almost wrote the late Paul Arlucke) that there is no comparison. Walter Hiers is an actor through and through, and we predict that he will, in the course of time, make millions laugh.

MAIL—It is one of the most wholesome pictures we have seen, with a story that is highly entertaining. The laughs arise from truly humorous incidents which contain the slightest suggestion of the slapstick or the vulgar.

TELEGRAM—* * * really a burlesque of the popular yarns of American heroes in South American revolutions, a term of fiction which was in vogue a score of years ago.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—He is a bally comedian and will possibly take the place in slender form left vacant by Roscoe Arbuckle. He is not particularly funny himself, but by brilliant direction he is placed in amusing circumstances and is made to appear funny. Speaking of the direction, it must be said that Wesley Ruggles has handled the situations very well.

TIMES—Does Mr. Hiers land in Arbuckle's place? And the answer is, He does. Or rather, he doesn't—nor he goes beyond Arbuckle, higher or further, whichever way you choose to measure his distance. Mr. Hiers is a real comedian, which means that he is an actor. Arbuckle at his best was only an amusing clown with a foolish smile. Hiers, on the other hand, has the smile and the joke, but not the clown. He should go much further than Arbuckle ever did.

A comedy in which he makes his first starring appearance is a diverting piece.

TRIBUNE—To this reviewer, he always seems comically inadequate. If our tastes are not immediately considered as we are concerned, the star of the picture, * * * Jacqueline Logan, who is lovely beyond description.

SUN—* * * his promotion should prove a most profitable venture for the Paramount Corporation.

According to the N. Y. American, Ann Luther will head her own company.

The Troubles of An Exhibitor
Split Lip, Nev.
Dear Danny,
I have been busy butchering and haven't had time to write but now that I'm back in harness, I want to tell you about a few happenings that have happened in Split Lip in the past week or so.
As you know, the Cinegraphical Film Co. called and wanted me to buy some stock in his company. Said the purpose of his concern was to produce pictures of unusual educational value. Here are a few of the releases already released: The Babbling Brooks of Brooklyn, Three Days From Dayton, Shooting Scouries in Singapore. The Correct Way to Snatch a Purse, Making Collars in Colorado, How to Make a Sponge Cake Without a Sponge, etc. He claimed that the dividends would pay my film rental.

Harry Asher and Sam Grand Close Deals—Federated Exchanges May Handle Material
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Harry Asher and Sam Grand have left for Boston, having completed a number of deals which involve a considerable amount of production.

It is reported that they have taken over the Chester studio and will produce features there with Elliott Dexter and Bryant Washburn. The plans also include two five-reeler features starring Monty Banks and a series of two-reeler comedies. Billie Rhodes, it is understood, has been signed.

It is understood that these productions will be released through independent exchanges by Grand, who, together with Asher, will handle New England distribution. Federated exchanges in the territories may distribute the product, but this is not at all certain.

Hal Roach's Features May Go Through That Organization—No Definite Schedule
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—In all likelihood, Hal Roach's feature productions will be distributed through Pathe, the company that handles all of his short reels.
Roach's venture in the field of long features is his first. As noted, the initial picture will be "The Call of the Wild," which Fred Jackson is directing for Hal Roach. Roach and Long have the leading roles. There has been no definite production schedule drawn up covering features. They will probably be made as long as they prove popular.

Trust Busting

Players-Lasky and other moving picture concerns and their officers, on the basis of amended complaints issued a few days ago.

The complaint against the picture industry covers substantially the same points as did the original complaint, alleging that Famous Players-Lasky, through unlawful monopolies, combinations and illegitimate methods of competition, has secured a virtual control of the moving picture industry in this country.

The Government, ever since the advent of the present administration, has been threatening to take up its fight against the so-called trusts. Much of the matter involved in these cases was gathered prior to the war and it is believed that not all the war intervened the cases would have been brought before this because of the fact that the companies involved would have had better opportunity to further their plans, which it was necessary for them to do until after the war. It is indicated that if the case against either the packers or the moving picture companies is successful, another era of trust busting will be inaugurated which will be second only to the famous trust busting campaign of the late Theodore Roosevelt.

but I told him the only stock I would be interested in was cattle. He hadn't no more than got out of sight when another peddler wanted me to buy one of his new patented film stretchers. He said that when I got a short he would stretch it out to any length desired. I told him that anytime my shows were short I filled in with snappy presentations. I examined the "Two Flags," and got a girl who looked like Prisella Dean, except her hair, and had her pose in the center of the room under six flags. What a few flags when you are trying to please your customers? I played "Ollie Tread" and hired a contortionist to do his tricks for a prologue. On a "Tailor Made Man" I was fortunate in securing the services of Len Limp, the town bully, and had him strut across the stage in his new Sears & Roebuck suit.

If Clem Denker gave his customers class shows like I do instead of gadding around the country and showing off, he could afford to build a real theater like mine. With the new improvements recently installed, the Smellshad makes the Elite look like a checkroom. I hung new curtains in front of the doors, washed the windows in the ticket office and put yellow lights over the exit doors. Red is too common.

I tried to pull a new stunt but it didn't work. I booked "Broad Daylight" and advertised a free matinee in my air dome.

I played "Love in the Dark" and used a novel idea. I stopped the show at the end of the third reel and turned out every light in the house for five minutes. Folks are still talking about it. Almost caused a riot. Suit for divorce have been filed to date on account of it.

I asked the Petrial Exchange to send their "window trimmer" down here to assist me in my campaign on "In the Summer When the Theaters Begin to Fail," but he didn't show up. I guess he figured I knew too much. I got a letter from him in which he regretted his inability to cooperate with me personally, but was enclosing a suggested campaign which if put into effect, would "knock 'em dead." He muttered a mouthful when he said "knock 'em dead," for if I was eggplant enough to follow out his ideas, I wouldn't take in enough to make the first payment on a one-sheet.

Where can I trade a glass case for a train effect? I am going to play "The Fast Mail." ZEKE BEEZWAX.

May Compromise

Censor Law May Stand But Present Commission Removed—Local Option Talked Of

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Albany—Opponents of censorship who came here to argue in favor of the bill repealing the censorship act evidently failed to convince the Assembly Ways and Means Committee. A prominent member of the committee states that it would not be released and that there were not votes enough in the House to compel the committee to report it out.

Doubt is expressed that the repeal bill will pass the Senate, as it is understood, two Democratic Senators, in obedience to requests from their constituents, will not vote for the measure.

Says Hiram Abrams About "Rupert" and "Common Law"—Thinks They Are Fine Pictures

Hiram Abrams returned from California yesterday where he held a number of conferences with members of United Artists.

Mr. Abrams said yesterday that contrary to report he had made no offer for the distribution of "Rupert of Hentau" and "The Common Law." He did add, however, that the pictures are very good. So good in fact, that he said they were suitable enough to be shown in any theater in America.

"I'll say that much for them," he said.

Myron and David Selznick came East on the same train with Abrams.

An Old Melody Week: Appropriate (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Melody, Saturday, March 10, 1923

St. Paul—The Astor made a strong heart appeal to its patrons by holding an "Old Melody Week" when "Jack Holt in Nobody's Money." The idea brought tie-ups with dozens of music stores, creating unusual interest in the showing and drew to the Astor many of "The Old Home Folks" who rarely went to the movies.

Press Showing Helps Springfield—For the showing of "The Christian," at the Princess, a special performance was given for the members of the Ill. Press Assn., comprising over 150 editors. This was the result of a tie-up made with the State Journal, which gave a front page story announcing the invitation.

Passes Increased Receipts Erie, Pa.—Manager Vance Minton, of the Columbia and Mike Vogel used 1,000 heralds for "Nobody's Money" imprinting the following: "Thank you, Nobody's Money. If it is returned to the box-office of Columbia Theatre, you will be admitted free to see the picture for "Nobody's Money." The heralds resembled dollar bills and were all returned.

Buddy Stuart at It Again Providence—When "The Stranger's Banquet" played Keith's Victory, recently, Buddy Stuart, Goldwynner, tied up with six Waldorf lunch rooms, using 15,000 napkins worded—"The Stranger's Banquet"—Victory Theatre—Now — 10,000 novelties were distributed, drawing a big pull in every big club in the city. Several street hollies helped put the picture over.

A Real Horse Race A real horse race on the stage, used as a "cut-in" on "The Hotentot" was an effective novelty at Keith's 8th St. last week. The presentation of "The Sin Flood" at the Orpheum, a tie-up was made with the Courier-News which offered daily prizes for the best accounts of perilous situations in which the writers found themselves. The News ran this contest for five days, giving the contest a two-column lead with a short account of the story. Several hundred replies were received, the best of which were published in the paper, thereby gaining the attention of the readers to the showing of the picture.

Antiflirt Crusade (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Marc Lachmann, Universal exploiter, had every paper in the city tied up with the Anti-Flirt letter for Sunday and Tuesday for "The Flirt." Front page stories and photos were used for several days causing a great deal of comment. The picture was not showing in any house at the time.

Preparing for Winter "If Winter Comes," will soon be released by L. B. and an elaborate campaign is now being prepared. Exhibitors will have a number of plays to work with. M. Witmark & Sons, the music publishers, will place a song number throughout the country on behalf of the Hutchinson novel.

250 in Prizes Offered Washington—A tie-up was recently made by the Columbia and Berwick's show store for "Adam's Rib." Leslie & Whelan sold the shoe people the idea of running a big display in the window for a limnerk contest. Two hundred and fifty dollars in prizes were given for the 25 best limners tying up the picture and the foot-ware.

Effective Newspaper Tie-up Marion, Ind.—For the showing of "The Message of Emile Coue" at the Luna-Life Theater, Bill Conners, manager, tied up with the Daily Chronicle, which carried a four-page spread in the show, and a limner contest, a large amount of advertising from local merchants, hooking up with the Cone principle of optimism.

Answering The Third Alarm Alhambra, Calif.—On the opening date of the "Third Alarm" at the Temple, Rudy Schlesinger arranged with Fire Chief Frank A. Bovet to turn in an alarm. The engines dashed along the main thoroughfares of the city, bearing a banner reading: "We Are Answering The Third Alarm at the Temple Theatre!" Crowds followed the route of the trucks, "standing up in front of the house.

Hyman Uses Billboards A billboard campaign and a tie-up with the Miller Shoe Co., played a prominent part in the stunts used by Ed. Hyman during the run of "The Hotentot" at the Brooklyn Strand.

Two weeks before the picture opened there were over thirty 24 x 36 posters scattered around Brooklyn announcing the opening of the picture. And, in addition to the display in the daily papers, the Miller Shoe Co. cooperated with the house by advertising a "Hotentot" shoe in all of their stores.

Ad Copy Escapes Censors (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—Although the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, through C. E. Armstrong, one of the members, is regularly applying the official stamp of approval to all advertising posters and advertisements for use in Ontario, it has been intimated that the regulation requiring the submission of all advertising material for pictures has not been made applicable to newspaper copy through the "grace" of the censor board in order to facilitate matters for exhibitors and newspapers in cities outside of Toronto, the headquarters of the censors. All exchanges at Toronto are having general advertising matter examined by Armstrong.

In the Courts

Fox Film has filed suit in the Supreme Court against L. & A. Mandel, of Stapleton, Staten Island, to recover a balance of $2,707 alleged to be due on a contract for films amounting to $2,707.

A suit brought by P. P. Crafts, producer, for $100,000, filed against Edgar Rice Burroughs, author of the Tarzan stories, has been dismissed from the Supreme Court by Justice Erlanger. Crafts alleged a breach of contract, on the part of Burroughs, for the screen rights to the Tarzan stories, "as his allegation on a telegram sent him from Burroughs stating that if he produced a good picture the rights to the remaining stories would not be disposed of until after (Crafts) had a chance to offer to bid for them. The court ruled that no contract existed.

Cecile Maya filed an application in the Supreme Court for an order compelling Milton G. Work, president of World Film to testify before trial in a suit against World Film for damages. She alleged that he coerced her into the scenario, "The Web of Life," and that World Film used it and called it "The Moral Deadline." and has made a large profit. She wanted to prove by the testimony of Work how much the profits in the United States and Canada have been. She alleged that the denial of the application on the ground that the defendant cannot be examined until the plaintiff proves at the trial that she has a right to an accounting.

star of “Kiki” Will Appear in “Tiger Rose” by Arrangement With David Belasco

Through a partnership arrangement between Warner Brothers and David Belasco it was learned yesterday that Lenore Ulric will be starred in a screen version of “Tiger Rose.” Miss Ulric has been appearing for the past two seasons in “Kiki.” Miss Ulric planned to go to Europe this summer for a vacation, but on receiving advice of Belasco she will remain at her engagement at the Belasco theater the latter part of May and leave immediately for Los Angeles to be starred in “Tiger Rose.”

An important feature in connection with the arrangements is that Mr. Belasco will personally and for the first time go into a studio in connection with the production of a film. He is expected to leave for Los Angeles about June 1st.

J. R. Grainger Says the Fall Will be the Best Yet—Business Good

Now, He Found

James R. Grainger, head of the Goldwyn sales force, is back in New York after a ten weeks’ tour which took him throughout the entire country and changes all over the country. He states most emphatically that the fall will witness the best business ever enjoyed by the industry.

“Exhibitors all over the country,” he said yesterday, “are making money, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. I visited every key center and everywhere I found that exchanges were enjoying fine business. This applies to exhibitors as well.”

Grainger will remain in New York until about May 1st and will then return to Hollywood for a month’s stay during which time he will discuss sales plans for the fall selling campaign.

Chaplin has often expressed his desire to perform in a serious vein. He has frequently stated his wish to make “Hamlet.”

ALLEN THEATER/DEAL

Canadian Houses Expected to Change Hands Soon—Another String A Possibility

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—The assets of Allen Theaters, Ltd., are being offered for sale by G. T. Clarkson, the authorized trustee of the company, and it is expected that the 36 picture theaters comprising the Allen chain will change hands within the next six weeks, according to an announcement by Clarkson. The decision to sell the Allen houses comes as a surprise in view of the fact that the majority of the company came to an agreement early last fall to grant an extension of time to the Allen for the settlement of claims. The liabilities to be covered in the sale amount to approximately $1,250,000.

F. P.-L. Statement Shows $564,512 Less Profit Than in 1921

Assets 48 Million

The 1922 financial statement of Famous Players-Lasky was issued yesterday afternoon and showed a drop in profits of $584,512 as compared with 1921.

The consolidated statement which includes the earnings of subsidiary companies owned 90% or more covers the fiscal year ending Dec. 30, 1921. Profits for the year were $4,095,990. The earnings for 1921 while the 1922 earnings are below those of 1921, the figures indicate that business generally is improving.

Those for 1921 were $641,630 under those of 1920 and the 1922 earnings $584,512 under those for last year.

Several deals are under way for new product.
Warners Get Ulric
Practically every producing organization in the industry has attempted to induce Miss Ulric, through Belasco to appear in motion pictures. A few weeks ago Warners announced that Belasco would collaborate with them in the production of "The Gold Diggers" "Deburau," and "Daddies." It was then stated that Belasco would supervise the making of the productions. The same arrangement has been entered into in connection with "Tiger Rose." Sidney Franklin has been selected to direct the production and Edmund Goulding, the task of writing the continuity. With the completion of "Tiger Rose," Miss Ulric will return East this fall to resume her performance of "Kiki."

Hoy by the various supply dealers for collection. It is understood that this means of eliminating large loss was taken because of the amount of money outstanding a sum placed at $80,000 in one quarter yesterday. Eventually the credit idea will be developed nationally by the Hoy service. J. O. Hornstein of Howells Cine Equipment, who is the New York zone director of the national organization, is expected to leave for Chicago next week with Charles B. Hoy to introduce the new plan in the Illinois territory. The active members of the local zone include Howells, Independent Movie Supply Co., United Theater Equipment Co., Behrends M. P. Supply Co., Capital M. P. Supply Co., Crown M. P. Supply Co., Otto Greenbaum and Sam Kaplan.

Allen Theater Deal
The assignee has issued a statement in which he points out that the operation of the Allen theaters across Canada will not be disturbed. The Allems own a number of the theaters outright and have leases on a few others. The majority of the theaters are owned by subsidiary companies and the controlling interest in these houses will also be affected.

No indication has been given of the identity of prospective purchasers of the Allen theaters, but last year several of the assets were made by the Famous Players Canadian Corp. through N. L. Nathanson. These were finally withdrawn. It is also reported that Fox is arranging for the control of the numerous theaters.
The theater plans of the Allems are problematical, it is said. During recent months several stock 9-7 of Jule and J. J. Allen bought up a number of houses on their own account, the largest purchase being the chain of theaters in Eastern Ontario operated by O'Brien interests of Renfrew, Ontario. Theaters in Toronto and Western Ontario have also been acquired by members of the Allen family, and it is believed that there is a possibility of the organization of another chain of Allen-controlled houses in the Dominion.

Earnings Fall Off
After allowing for payment of dividends on the preferred stock in 1922, earnings are at the annual rate of $14.73 on the common stock outstanding. As noted, the earnings on the common were expected to total about $14.50 per share. The board of directors in meeting yesterday declared a regular quarterly dividend of $2 per share on the preferred payable on May 1, to stockholders of record at the close of business on April 16. The financial statement places the company's assets at $48,092,418.98.
The market yesterday was quiet. The range on the common was 90 high, 88 1/2 low and 91 3/4 closing. Sales amounted to 1400. The preferred reached a high level of 96 3/4, closing at the same figure. About 100 share changed hands.
Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

When Everybody Has The Gimme's

Toledo—Eddie Carrier, local Golden Gate man, recently put on a very effective stunt for "Gimme," when he gave away some souvenirs. Carrier said the Owen Bottle Works make up 5,000 bottles, each about three quarters of an inch high and an exact replica of a quart whiskey bottle. The bottles were filled with Beno or earing specially prepared "Gimme" nel. After a few of these were distributed "Gimme" was the most popular word in town.

Bonns Worked Hard for This

Boston—The following is a line-up of exploitation stunts that Eddie Bonns and Buddy Stuart used to send over "The Christian" at the Palace for $1.50 top.

An extensive newspaper campaign opened letter to the public which he used on a three-sheet board in front of the paper also contributing several free columns.

180 twenty-four sheet posters, mostly illuminated. 2,000 block 2 sheets. 2,000 one sheets. 10,000 window cards in addition to several hundred cloth bannors. This covered the outdooirs, within a radius of 25 miles, including street cars, subway stations and railway terminals.

Over 10,000 doorknob hangers were placed on Saturday night, hanging until Monday.

Newspaper Opinions

Jesse L. Lasky,
Paramount Pictures, New York.

Rescued here today with copy of "The Covered Wagon," on my way to New York for the Criterion opening Friday night. It was near here that the attack of one thousand Indians on the Wagon train took place. I showed this morning some photographs from "The Covered Wagon" to an elderly woman, sitting across the car aisle. She told me she had crossed the plains in one of the wagon trains of 1848, when she was a little girl of five. She is now eighty years old and this is the first time she has gone back east. The route is over the old Oregon Trail, and she is covering in four days the territory which as a little girl she spent a year in crossing. Vividly she pictured to me the sorrows, the hardships and long weary sufferings of those pioneers, whose lives are so interestingly portrayed by James Cruze in his production. "It is all so real, so real," she said. "My father was massacred by the Indians, and mother and I went to Oregon alone. And now, when I look out the car window I see great wheat fields, and cattle ranges, and splendid roads, and Fords and Buicks. Young man, it is wonderful to live in America!" Will wire tomorrow, regards,
John C. Flinn

Changes To Goldwyn?
Deal Reported on for Allen Distributing System in Canada—No Information Here

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—Intimation has been given that Goldwyn has taken over the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., one of the oldest exchange systems in Canada. This exchange is an Allen enterprise with the head office here and branches in Montreal, St. John, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. Goldwyn has released in Canada through this system for years, but it is understood that since the company is one of the principal creditors of Allen Theaters, Ltd., which is now in liquidation, this is the reason why Goldwyn has stepped in.

Educational also released through Famous Players Film Service, until a few months ago but it has now established a separate company under name of Canadian Educational Films, Ltd. Associated First National has also been interested in the Allen situation in Canada because of the fact that the Allen's had First National franchises for practically all of their theaters from Montreal to Vancouver.

No information was obtainable from Goldwyn yesterday relative to the above. It is understood that shortly before the Al- len's financial difficulties, the Goldwyn contract expired and that, later, with the consent of the court, a new arrangement was entered upon with G. T. Clarkson, the receiver. That contract is now in force and while it is very likely Goldwyn has been approached on the purchase of the Allen exchanges as well as the theaters, it is likewise true that other companies have been informed that the assets are on the market.

Lasky Signs Mary Astor

Jesse L. Lasky yesterday signed Mary Astor under a five year contract to play leads. The contract was closed simultaneously with the settlement of the litigation between Miss Astor and Harry C. Los Angeles—Clyde Cook is the first star of Lou Anger Prod., the new comedy organization which Anger promised some weeks ago. The Cook unit will be the first of five. Production will be at the Keaton studio.

F. P. L. Cuts Liabilities

$3,470,154 in a Year

$1,000,000 Note Held by S. A. Lynch Wiped Out—1920 Indebtedness Was 16 Million—Down to 10 Million in Current Statement, or Six Million Less in Two Years

While it is true that the 1922 statement of Famous Players shows a drop of $584,512 in net operating profits as compared with the earnings for 1921, the detailed statement places the total liabilities for 1922 at $10,665,558.52 or $3,470,154.76 less than 1921, when the figure was $14,135,713.28.

The $1,000,000 held in the name of the Amusement Finance Corp., which was included in the liabilities for 1920 and 1921, does not appear in the current statement. Its removal, of course, came about as a result of the recent deal with S. A. Lynch. The condition of the company as revealed by the comparison of the last three annual statements indicates improvement. The 1920 statement lists liabilities of $16,838,312.59; that of 1921, $14,135,713.28 and the 1922 statement $10,665,558.52. A substantial reduction in the amount held in advance payments from exhibitors has been made since last year when the total was $1,509,400.70 as compared with $1,145,995.92 at the end of 1921.

Ince Renews

Will Remain With First National For Another Series—One Film Goes to Metro

Thomas H. Ince will continue distribution through First National, as indicated in THE FILM DAILY last week. A definite announcement covering the new deal was made yesterday jointly by Ince's office and First National.

Although not mentioned in the announcement, it is understood that the deal was closed late Monday afternoon. Clark W. Graham, Ince's general manager left for the coast yesterday carrying the agreement with him.

Like the existing contract between Ince and First National the new arrangement covers a series, said to be either six or four. Ince has two more negatives to deliver to the circuit before finishing the current contract. These are "A Man of Action" and "The Sunshine Trail," both to be released before June. The first picture of the new series will be released in September. Ince, as noted, plans to make six pictures next year.

"Ten Ton Love" will be distributed through Metro, as indicated, the deal having been definitely closed.

Herbert Signs With Cosmopolitan

It is understood that Victor Herbert has signed a year's contract with an option for another year to direct the orchestra at the Cosmopolitan theater, formerly the Park, which opens in a few weeks under auspices of the Hearst organization.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

Jesse L. Lasky,
Paramount Pictures, New York.

Arrived here today with copy of "The Covered Wagon" on my way from California over the old Oregon Trail. This thriving city in the old days was only a small trading station and was called Westport Landing, a "jumping off" place for the old Wagon Trains of 1848. James Cruze shows a reproduction of the old settlement in "The Covered Wagon." The country we have crossed in the past twenty-four hours is full of interesting historical association. Kansas and its great expanses of wheat fields only a few years ago comparatively was the buffalo hunting grounds of thousands of Indians. A buffalo hunt is shown in the picture. We also crossed the Platte River by a wonderful steel bridge, where many a pioneer of the forties came to grief in attempting to ford the swift stream. The river fording scene in the picture is its biggest thrill to me. Don't think I will ever forget my impressions of the west, its great plains, its magnificent mountains, its gorgeous rivers. What a panorama was unfolded before the eyes of the pioneers who are visualized in "The Covered Wagon." Will wire from Chicago. Regards,

John C. Flinn

Williams' Deal On

Off for Florida for Rest and Then to California After Product—Own Sales Force

J. D. Williams left for Florida Tuesday night in order to recuperate from an annoying attack of bronchitis from which he has been suffering for some days.

From there he will go direct to California, where, it is understood, he expects to close an important production deal. Just how long he will be gone from New York is doubtful. But upon his return here it is expected he will at once begin to organize his own sales force.

Mr. Williams' secretary stated yesterday it was true he had gone to Florida for a rest, but that was as much as she knew about his plans.

Thomas Rejoins Blank

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—Regret is voiced here over the departure of H. M. Thomas, general theater director for Famous Players here who will rejoin the A. H. Blank enterprises at Des Moines. Thomas has been here for four years.

It was stated at Famous Players yesterday that N. L. Nathanson, managing director of the Canadian company, has the active operation of these houses in charge and that it was for him to decide on Thomas' successor.

Some Foreign Sales

Arbitration Set

Rules Drawn and Agreed To—Equal Representation for Both Exhibitors and Exchanges

Rules governing the operation of the board of arbitration under the uniform exhibition contract have been approved by both representatives of the distributing companies and representative exhibitors.

A meeting was held last week at the Hays office, the details of which were divulged yesterday. Present were Al Steffes of Minneapolis, Harry Randall of Washington and Claude Cady of Detroit, Bernard Edelheit, Leo Brecher, Charles L. O'Reilly and William Brandt representing the exhibitor element and the attorneys of the distributors. Steffes is an important figure in the Minnesota M. P. T. O. and Cady in the Michigan unit both of which are part of the Famous Player division.

Contract Up Soon

Betty Compson's Paramount Agreement Near End—Company Holds an Option

Betty Compson's present contract with Paramount expires in a few months. The company holds an option on her services, but whether that option will be exercised is a matter that will be discussed by Jesse L. Lasky when he returns to Hollywood on Saturday.

Famous Players officials will not discuss the matter. It is known, however, that representatives of Miss Compson have informed several producers, at least, that her present contractual relations with Famous are near an end. Whether Lasky wants to keep Compson's services under the present contract is not known. In all events, a decision will be reached in a few weeks.

Patten Nips Immorality Claim (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Thomas G. Patten, of the Hays organization, was instrumental in squelching a claim made by a George Brockwell that immoral films were made here for exclusive showings abroad. Patten said that any specific instances were revealed to him, he would see that the practice stopped.

More For Goldwyn?

It is Reported Distinctive May Release Through Godsy's Organization—No Deal, Says Friend

When Arthur S. Friend was asked late yesterday whether or not he had closed a distributing deal on behalf of Distinctive Productions with Goldwyn, he replied he had not closed any kind of a deal with anybody.

It is understood that Friend and F. J. Godsy have been discussing distribution for some time and that although the actual contract may not have been signed, the negotiations are about closed.

Neither Godsy nor James R. Grainger could be reached about dinner time yesterday for a statement. Distinctive plans 12 pictures for next year. "Backbone" and "The Ragged Edge" are the first two.

Distinctive Buys "The Weavers"

Distinctive has purchased Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Weavers." It will be one of the first six of Distinctive's 12 releases for the coming year.

Los Angeles—Lionel H. Keene, the official representative for Marcus Loew, now adds his denial to that of A. C. Blumenthal that any change of ownership is contemplated in the Loew houses on the coast.

New F. B. O. Dep't

F. B. O. has organized a non-theatrical department and intends making a determined bid for business in that field. A. P. Meyers, formerly with Nat'l Non-Theatrical and the educational department at Fox will handle the sales.

The physical distribution will be handled through the existing exchange system.
Arbitration Set

of the 1922-23 school year, which recently broke off negotiations with Hays on this very matter.

The rules as drawn up are as follows:

1. "The Board of Arbitration shall consist of six persons, three of whom shall be managers of local offices of the distributors, called distributors' representatives, and three of whom shall be proprietors or managers of theaters in the theater in which the Film Board is located, called exhibitors' representatives; provided, however, that in the event that such exhibitors' representatives be managers of theaters owned or controlled by producers or distributors.

2. Each of the three distributors' representatives shall be selected by the members of the Film Board of Trade to serve for one year or until his successor is appointed. The three exhibitors' representatives shall be selected and appointed by the local exhibitors' association. In the event that the Film Board of Trade shall request the president of the Chamber of Commerce, or if there is none or if he fails to appoint, then the mayor of the city in which the Film Board of Trade is located, to select and appoint the three exhibitors' representatives. Failing such selection, and appointing the designated exhibitors' representatives shall be by the president of the Film Board of Trade. Each of the exhibitors' representatives shall serve for one year or until his successor is appointed, provided, however, that any other representatives designated otherwise than by the local exhibitors' association shall be replaced by exhibitors' representatives designated by such exhibitors' association as soon as such designation is made.

3. No member of the Board of Arbitration shall sit in any case or controversy in which he has an interest direct or indirect.

4. In case of a refusal or disqualification by reason of interest or sickness on the part of a distributor's representative to serve on the Board of Arbitration, the remaining distributors' representatives or representative may appoint a substitute for such member, provided such vacancy exists in respect of an exhibitors' representatives, or representatives, or representatives of exhibitors' representatives or representative may appoint a substitute.

5. In case of a tie vote the Board of Arbitration shall appoint a seventh arbitrator, and in case they are unable to agree then the chairman of the Board of Arbitration shall appoint the president of the Chamber of Commerce, or if there is none or if he fails to appoint, then the mayor of the city in which the Film Board of Trade is located to appoint a seventh arbitrator, who shall be neither a distributor nor exhibitor nor interested in the motion picture business.

6. The Board of Arbitration shall have general power over all thorough and impartial hearing of any dispute or controversy, to determine such dispute or controversy, to make findings thereon, to direct what shall be done by either or both parties with respect to the matter in dispute, and in the event of the failure of the exhibitor to comply with the award, to fix the maximum amount that each distributor may demand pursuant to Article Nineteenth of the uniform exhibition contract. It shall adopt its own rules of procedure and evidence. These rules shall provide for reasonable notice to the parties of the time and place of the hearing and of the nature of the dispute, and afford the parties an opportunity to be heard in person or by counsel and to submit evidence. The findings, determination and direction of the Board of Arbitration upon such controversy shall be conclusive and binding upon the parties thereto.

These rules are the broad principles on which the Boards of Arbitration will operate. The rules for the operation of the local boards will be prepared locally by those who operate under them and will be in line with the principles set out herein.

DeMILLE DID IT!

"ADAM'S RIB"

has broken records in every city where it has been shown!

PITTSBURGH

"Adam's Rib," in face of rain and snow Tuesday and cold weather Wednesday, exceeded "Manslaughter" figures by $1,107 at Olympic Theatre. Also exceeding "Manslaughter" figures at Capitol Theatre Altoona, and in Erie.

LOS ANGELES

In its first four weeks "Adam's Rib" beat "Manslaughter" for same period by $751. It’s still doing capacity.

SALT LAKE CITY

Broke all records for attendance at Paramount Empress Theatre. Showed to over 18,000 paid admissions in four days in 1,400-seat house.

OMAHA

Gross business over twenty per cent better than "Manslaughter." Capacity business prevailed. Critics and audience applauded.

NEW YORK

"Adam's Rib" on its opening date took in 8,992 admissions. "Manslaughter" drew 8,939. It’s now in its third week, doing capacity.

CHICAGO

"'Adam's Rib' opened Monday at the McVickers Theatre. Looks as if it will be biggest week since opening of the theatre." . . . Jones, Linick and Schaefer.

AND IN A SMALL TOWN

"'Adam's Rib' is unquestionably the finest photoplay ever made. I thought I was hard-boiled, but it got me. Take all you can of the greatest pictures since 1912 and "Adam's Rib" is greater than all combined. Have never seen anything like it."

Atlanta—W. W. Anderson and W. T. Yoder have returned from a visit to the Florida key cities.

Atlanta—The Weekly Film Review, a regional publication, has moved into new quarters in the Howell Building.

Says Credit Belongs to Wyckoff
Cecil B. DeMille yesterday wired from the Lasky studio that Alvin Wyckoff should have received credit for the photography of "Adam's Rib" and not Guy Wilky, as stated in this publication's review. De Mille states that Wilky was used in a scene requiring 10 cameramen, but that his material was later cut out of the completed picture.

The press sheet issued by Paramount credits both Wyckoff and Wilky with the former's name receiving first mention.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

Jesse L. Lasky, Paramount Pictures, New York, Chicago, Ill., March 14, 1923

Reached Chicago from the Pacific coast with copy of "The Covered Wagon" for the Criterion theatre tomorrow after following the Oregon Trail over which the pioneers travelled seventy-five years ago. In three days I have gone as far as they travelled in ten months. Tomorrow will arrive at Grand Central via the Twentieth Century with this great epic of America's making. Every adventure, every hardship that the brave pioneers endured is lived again in "The Covered Wagon." The buffalo hunt, the fording of the river, the prairie fire, the Indian attack—all these will provide thrills and entertainment such as the people of New York have never seen. And they all happened on this very ground which I have just flashed across. Out of the great west which the pioneers built with blood and sacrifice has come the enduring and monumental film record of their immortal achievement. The motion picture industry is proud to pay lasting tribute to the builders of the western empire. "The Covered Wagon" is greater than any imagined story, because it is the record of life—of the most romantic and thrilling years in all America's history.

Sees Favor for British Films

Fred Leroy Granville, producer of "Shifting Sands," says:

"English exhibitors favor American-made films because they are produced by finished technicians. But the American exhibitors, I predict, are going to take a great fancy to forthcoming British productions, because we have learned, abroad, in the last year to make what has been the aim of British producers since the beginning of the industry—Showmen's Pictures—stories with big dramatic situations, filmed against original backgrounds, and only such stories as provide exceptional exploitation features.

420 DAYS FOR EACH FILM
BY MASTBAUM-KEITH DEAL

More Than Vaudeville Tie-up in Recent Deal—Head of Stanley Co. Will Book Keith's Pictures—May Be Forerunner of Important Producing-Distributing Scheme

Philadelphia—There is something further to the recent vaudeville arrangement between the Keith circuit and the Stanley Company of America than a working agreement regarding the booking of acts here.

A combination has been effected between Stanley and the Keith interests which may be the beginning of a tremendous development touching upon the production and distribution of pictures. Before Jules Mastbaum left for the coast, it is understood, he arranged with Keith to contract for all pictures for the 40 houses in important cities where Keith books vaudeville.

Mastbaum will have either personally or through a representative of his organization a complete set of offices with the Keith organization and will buy all of the pictures used by the vaudeville chain. The Stanley Co. will, for the 20 years during which the agreement will be effective, book all of their vaudeville through the Keith vaudeville exchange.

Stanley has over 20 full weeks of first-runs and together with the 40 Keith houses will be able to offer a picture 50 full weeks of first-run showings or a total of 420 days per production. It is expected that this will prove of special value to independent producers inasmuch as after the first-runs, distribution should be easily obtained in the various territories.

The plan will become effective in the Fall. Stanley has 148 houses in its chain and with the 40 week vaudeville stand will thus be able to furnish heavy bookings to those productions desired.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Jules Mastbaum could not be reached for a statement yesterday relative to his arrangement with Keith.

DANNY.

At present, all film purchases for the Keith houses are made through Peerless Booking Corp., of which B. S. Moss is the active head.

George Trilling of Peerless, stated yesterday he had not heard about the Mastbaum move. It was pointed out that if the agreement should prove workable the Mastbaum-Keith combination would be able to offer more total days per picture than any other factor in the business. In one quarter, it was doubted whether such a huge buying organization would function properly with the actual purchases made in New York for out-of-town points where local conditions often alter first-run arrangements.

A Flirting Campaign
St. Louis—For eight days prior to the opening of "The Flirt," at the Rivoli, Maurice Engel conducted a flirting campaign in cooperation with the Times. A young woman flirt, accompanied by a girl reporter, visited all the important functions held during the campaign. Her experiences with male flirts were printed in the paper. Mention of "The Flirt" was made.

"Robin Hood" in The Eastman House.

Rochester—A press campaign for the coming of "Robin Hood," at the Eastman theater, conducted by Fred T. Harris, brought heavy newspaper attention to the opening of the theater. In the line of exploitation a great deal more than the ordinary representation was obtained all through the city. A window display was obtained, talking machine dealers and United Cigar stores co-operated, while department stores displayed an equal degree of interest.

School Tie-up Effective
It was during the showing of "Remembrance" that M. Greenberg, who operates the Livonia in Brooklyn, made a very effective tie-up with P.
S. 109.

Greenberg took pictures of different school activities and then showed them in his house, this started them coming. He then filmed the children entering and leaving the theater, which brought them to the house for two more weeks. The stunt increased the box-office receipts 100.

The theater owner, in a letter to THE FILM DAILY, praises the cooperation he receives from Goldwyn people, who play a part in the Goldwyn production. Charles Cohen, of the Goldwyn staff was responsible for the school stunt.

"Find The Man" Contest
Omaha—Twelve stores contributed a total of 204 inches of newspaper advertising space in a "Find-the-man" contest arranged recently by Natha friend, of Distinctive, as an exploitation feature for "The Man Who Played God" at the Brandeis theater.
The Evening World-Herald co-operated in the news end of the tie-up.

Photographs of the back of a man impersonating John Arden, the character taken by George Arliss in the picture were published in the posters, with announcements that Arden would appear at the various stores, near the Brandeis theater on the streets at appointed hours.
Prizes ranging from $5 to $50 were given for the proper identification of the man by a person carrying a copy of the World-Herald.

Shopping hours brought a general search for "Arden" and consequent publicity for the stores and for the picture.

DIRECTOR .................. Sydney Franklin
AUTHOR ..................... Chas. G. Norris
SCENARIO BY ............... Julien Josephson
CAMERAMAN ................ Norbert Brodin
AS A WHOLE...... A very good audience picture made obviously to satisfy the picture-going public

STORY...... From the popular novel; has undergone many changes in transference to the screen but probably suits requirements to better advantage

DIRECTION...... On the whole very good; at times drags sequences and overdoes sentimental bits but otherwise satisfactory

PHOTOGRAPHY ............. Excellent
LIGHTINGS .................. Good PLAYERS.... Irene Rich probably the most sincere and convincing with Monte Blue splendid, as usual; Marie Prevost a suitable type and others
Harry Myers, Frank Keenan, Helen Ferguson;
Miss Dupont, Cyril Chadwick, Margaret Seddon,

EXTERIORS .................. First rate
INTERIORS ................... All right
DETAIL ....................... Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY...... One of the many angles on the marriage question, in which a quiet country fellow marries a city girl fond of jazz

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....8,400 feet

When Warner Brothers secured the rights to Chas.
G. Norris’ popular novel “Brass,” they certainly purchased a money-making title, for the book had already achieved so much fame that a film adaptation should draw good business just through the announcement of the title. And undoubtedly the Warners’ picture will do a thoroughly satisfactory business and prove a good box office attraction because it deals with an ever popular subject—marriage—and has been given a first rate production by Sydney Franklin.

Julian Josephson, who wrote the scenario, has, however, made many changes in Norris’ story, but with the box office apparently in mind. In most instances the revisions provide for a more definite audience appeal and the tragedy of a suicide, which occurs in the novel, has been omitted, together with certain other twists that were evidently considered not the best sort of audience appeal. There is just one unsatisfactory angle about the theme as rearranged and that is the ending. The spectator, at least the average person, wants to know definitely what is what at the close, but “Brass” leaves it to your imagination, so you do not know whether or not the hero marries the woman he chose as his second wife. That folks are not quite satisfied with this sort of an ending might be gleaned from remarks passed in the theater at the close of the picture, such as “Is that all,”
“That can’t be the ending,” etc.

The story deals with one of the many popular angles on the marriage question and the moral is nicely given without any undue preachment. There is a splendid combination of comedy and drama, with the latter reaching some high spots, both for the maner in which it has been handled and the way it has been played. The humorous business is occasionally silly, but there are many who never fail to get a laugh out of the mother-in-law situation.

Story: Philip Baldwin, a country fellow, marries Marjorie Jones, but they are divorced after Philip learns that their tastes are different and Marjorie prefers jazz to her baby. Marjorie marries again and is divorced again. Meantime Philip falls in love with Mrs. G., who cares for his boy and they are about to be married when Marjorie returns. Whether Philip marries Mrs. G. or remarries Marjorie is left to your imagination.

Exploitation Should Be Easy With Title and Players’ Names

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

With an already popularized title and a picture adapted from a novel that was a certain success, it should be easy to do a thoroughly satisfying business with “Brass.” The picture contains a degree of audience appeal, situations that always interest people and give them something to talk about, and the production is satisfying.

Besides an excellent title that should draw business just through your announcements of it, you have an unusually worth while cast with many names that mean a lot at the box office. Almost the entire cast is well known, but of the more prominent players use the names mentioned in the chart above, with particular stress on the performances of Irene Rich, Monte Blue and Marie Prevost. Exploitation should be easy, but the results depend upon your effort. The picture is worthy of your best and will bring satisfactory receipts.

INTERIORS ............... All right
CHARACTER OF STORY .. Adventures of ship-wrecked trio who drift into the "Isle of Lost Ships"

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION 7,425 feet

This latest First National release is decidedly one of the most novel and unusual productions so far this year and sufficiently unusual and absorbing through its subject matter and fantastic atmosphere to almost entirely cover up the highly improbable nature of the situations contained in it. The entire film is a thoroughly interesting novelty that will suit a big variety of preferences and should offer and AI entertainment, particularly to those who constantly demand something new and different.

The basic situation of Crittendon Mariott’s story is not what makes his theme different but it is the distinctive treatment and the introduction of wholly unfamiliar twists and by-plot that give it individuality. You have a hero and heroine and what, minus its trimmings, would be the popular island formula but novelty of the following sequences completely dispel all similarity.

Maurice Tourner had more than an ordinary task upon his shoulders when given the production of this story, especially in view of the difficulties that must have presented themselves when it came to picturing the actual "Isle of Lost Ships." And with the exception of an occasional painted drop being obvious, his work is splendid. The atmosphere of this episode is mighty fascinating and the scenes so entirely different from the usual, that it can hardly fail to prove interesting. The storm is a wonder and the shots from the rear of a vessel ploughing through a rough sea create the feeling of actual experience.

There is action in the picture and thrills of an unusual order, together with a suspense in the latter reels that will be sure-fire with the majority of audiences. The submarine sequence in which the escaping islanders are trapped in a sea of kelp, a form of water vegetation, and the subsequent rescue brings the story to an exciting conclusion.

Milton Siills, as the escaped convict whose innocence is finally proven, gives a capital performance and will surely please his many admirers. Anna Q. Nilsson is excellent as the girl. Walter Long is the villain, as usual,—this time as the ruler of the unique island colony. With Long’s introduction there is a sex appeal episode that might be toned down to advantage.

Should Go Well In View Of Its Unique Atmosphere, Production And Cast

Exhibitors who are looking for a novelty will surely not want to miss "The Isle of Lost Ships." The production is one of the most unusual that has been released so far this year and it certainly supplies a novel entertainment for those constantly in search of something that gets off the beaten track. You can talk about the fantastic nature of this, the unique atmosphere and the action and thrills. Promise them a sea story that is totally different. The highly improbable character of it should easily be overcome by the novelty of it.

The title is good and can be used in connection with special announcements and whatever exploitation you can give it, or stunt advertising which should also be worth while. Use the producer’s name and you have a splendid cast to talk about with the names of Milton Siills, Anna Q. Nilsson, Frank Campeau and Walter Long to interest them. Play up the novelty angle of the production in particular.
Plays 2 Weeks to the Largest Business in Spokane in 2 Years

—all the remarkable records that two previous Nell Shipman productions made for the first-run theatre box-offices are now being exceeded by the biggest personal production Nell Shipman ever made in her career.

Pre-released in the largest cities of the Pacific Coast it has established new house patronage records for this season, as well as all other seasons. In the East in Newark, Erie, Pa., in Providence, as each exhibitor plays it, the fans pile in because—it's real entertainment, real amusement, real drama and contains genuine thrill.

The GRUB-STAKE

A Story of the Klondike

Directed by Bert Van Tuyle

in collaboration with the author

Moving Picture World's critic tells you the real reason for its success, saying: "Taking the cue from the big success of her previous picture with its unique assortment of wild animals, Nell Shipman is again presented in a picture of this type, 'The Grub-Stake.' Taken all in all, it will please the majority of audiences everywhere and with intelligent, right exploitation will prove a good box-office bet."
Satisfactory Production But Story Is Quite Commonplace

DIRECTOR .................. Clarence G. Badger
AUTHOR ..................... Willard Mack SCENARIO BY ............... Winifred Dunn
CAMERAMAN ................. Rudolph Bergquist
AS A WHOLE .......... Rather commonplace situations and familiar atmosphere that doesn’t make for satisfying entertainment

STORY .. Just the old eternal triangle a little difdifferently told but not sufficiently different to be distinctive

DIRECTION .... Ordinary; tells story smoothly and maintains good continuity; allows too much over acting

PHOTOGRAPHY ................. All right
LIGHTINGS ...................... Usually good PLAYERS ............ Enid Bennett pleasing and as convincing as the role will permit; J. Herbert Frank overacts most of the time; others Huntley
Gordon, Rosemary Theby and Willard Mack

EXTERIORS .................. Few
INTERIORS ................. Rather over decorated
DETAIL ......................... Suffices

CHARACTER OF STORY ... Woman, neglected because of husband’s business, is about to “fall” for artist when friend’s play saves her

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ..... 5,750 feet

“Your Friend And Mine,” has been adapted from a sketch by Willard Mack, and with certain elaborations and by-plot, the rather slight situations contained in it, have been rounded out to suit the requirements of a feature film. But, in spite of the more or less careful production and the capable handling which the story has received, it hardly measures up as a satisfactory entertainment.

There is nothing new in the theme, and except that it is just a little differently told, there is little about it that might be called distinctive. Once more you have the pretty young wife who craves romance, and the very much occupied husband, whose business affairs are constantly calling him out of town. The triangle is completed by the artist who paints the wife’s portrait, and proceeds to make love to her in the absence of her husband. That is essentially all there is to the story, but the elaborations include one or two other situations which, while not original, sufface fairly well to build up the main idea. The supposed-to-be artist has ruined the life of a young girl whose father paints the portraits for which the artist takes the credit. This sequence comes to an unpleasant conclusion in the death of the girl. Her father places her body in the artist’s establishment, and after he has allowed the latter to gaze upon the girl, he has his revenge by shooting him.

This is not altogether objectionable, nor is it a very wholesome twist. Villains have been known to go unpunished in motion pictures, and it would have been much better to have done so in this case, rather than to resort to the fairly unpleasant medium mentioned above.

Director Badger has sustained the interest as well as he could in view of the familiarity of the story.
There are several scenes such as the tableaux in the home of the artist, that will please those who like picture display. Production values are up to standard, and the cast, on the whole, is capable. Enid Bennett looks far too intelligent however, to have been so easily trapped by the artist, especially since she does not indicate any love for him. Willard Mack appears as the friend who saves the young wife from her folly, and Huntley Gordon, as the husband is kept busy going off on business trips.

May Do For Certain Class Although Its Appeal Is Very Limited
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can’t promise them anything new in “Your Friend And Mine,” so if you know in the old eternal triangle situation will bring some kicks from them, you had better not try to get it over. Regardless of the effort to dress the situation up with by-plot, it is not enough to make it at all distinctive. Of course if you think the rather liberal scenic display contained in the offering will be a compensating feature, it might be possible to get the picture over on the strength of this.

The sub-titles make a point of the friend who comes into the house and wins the admiration of the husband and then during his absence, tries to steal his wife.
Of course catchlines along this line can be used if you they they will prove attractive. Enid Bennett’s name can be used and mention her appearance in “Robin Hood.” Willard Mack’s name might also get them interested.
Conventional Theme Nicely Handled And With Good Characterization

B. P. Schulberg presents “ARE YOU A FAILURE”
Preferred Pictures—Al Lichtman

DIRECTOR .................... Tom Forman
AUTHOR ........................ Larry Evans
SCENARIO BY ............... Eve Unsell
CAMERAMAN .................... Harry Perry
AS A WHOLE........... Moderately acceptable, the strength of which depends mostly upon the class of patronage before which it plays

STORY....... The popular hero theme in which characterization is the chief appeal; adequately presented

DIRECTION..... All right for the story he had to work with; supplies several good touches; hard to make it convincing

PHOTOGRAPHY....... Standard; one cut-out insert very obvious

LIGHTINGS ........................ Good
PLAYERS...... Lloyd Hughes gets over Charlie Ray type of role very well and Madge Bellamy is a pleasing heroine; others Hardee Kirkland, Hallam Cooley and Tom Santschi

EXTERIORS .......... Scenes of log jam good
INTERIORS ................. Suitable
DETAIL ....................... Ample
CHARACTER OF STORY....... Son of intrepid river boss is weak-kneed clerk until he realizes his cowardice and suddenly becomes hero of the town

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 5,700 feet

The Horatio Alger sort of theme has always been one of the popular picture themes and a kind of story that appeals to a good majority of picture-goers. For this crowd, “Are You A Failure,” will undoubtedly prove thoroughly interesting and somewhat thrilling. Larry Evan’s story runs pretty true to formula with characterization the most prominent feature of it, a bit of romance and a climax that may furnish a fair thrill but it has been done so many times that the suspense is rather well worn off.

Type Of Story That Is Still A Popular Choice With A Good Majority

But Tom Forman has supplied an effective production and handled the material to good advantage. There are many first rate twists and touches that help alleviate the triteness and also make for a better sustained interest. The opening is just a trifle slow but once it gets going, things move along at a satisfying pace. And it isn’t especially easy to maintain the attention evenly when characterization is the chief point of appeal. But Lloyd Hughes and Forman co-operate to this end with successful results. The audience will get some amusement out of the hero who lacks the initiative to do things and assert himself. The idea of his maiden aunts forcing him to wear a raincoat, rubber and carry an umbrella in clear weather is a good touch and there are others also that succeed in being amusing without entirely destroying sympathy for hero.

Lloyd Hughes does very well in a typical Charlie Ray role and although his personality never permits his early characterization to be entirely convincing, still he makes the best of it, and comes out a sure enough hero at the close when he saves the town from a flood by dynamiting the log jam. This sequence contains a fair thrill, although an old one, but the scene in which hero is shown overtaken by the onrushing logs, is especially poor inasmuch as the insertion of Hughes is badly done and quite obvious.

Madge Bellamy is an attractive heroine who never gives up hope that hero will disprove the popular opinion that he is a coward. Tom Santschi hasn’t much chance at villainy and Hallam Cooley is always a good type for the city “slicker.”

Story: It is really because he has been reared by two maiden aunts that Oliver Wendall Blaine lacks the nerve to assert himself and follow in his father’s footsteps. Instead he clerks in the local store while Phyllis, who admires Oliver, still believes in his ability. Oliver takes a correspondence course in how to make good. How he wins out, proves himself a true Blaine and also wins Phyllis, completes the story.

There is a good market for this type of picture despite its weakness as far as originality is concerned. It is more or less of the old school variety of picture play but there is still a large portion of the picture going public who still prefer this conventional, hero and heroine style of photoplay entertainment. For them “Are You a Failure” will spell entertainment of a sure-fire order.

You have a rather attractive title to work with and one that can be played up nicely with catchlines or equally effective would be teaser ads with just the query “Are You A Failure?” followed later by “Are You A Failure?” If so go to the blank theater and find the road to success.” You can use the names of Madge Bellamy, Lloyd Hughes and Tom Santschi of those in the cast.

AS A WHOLE......Highly melodramatic production staged in Klondike with plenty of thrills in last few reels

STORY.........Contains plenty of opportunities for star and holds interest in spite of length

DIRECTION.........Good but allowed too much footage in some sequences, especially in opening reels

PHOTOGRAPHY............Excellent

LIGHTINGS............Generally good; some interiors too dark

STAR......Does good athletic work and plays with wild animals very attractively

SUPPORT......Walt Whitman and George Berrell do fine character work. Alfred Allen typical heavy. Player cast as “Dawson Kate” gives excellent performance

EXTERIORS..........................Beautiful

INTERIORS..........................In keeping

DETAIL.................................Fair

CHARACTER OF STORY......Girl “grub-staked” by man, lost in Alaska woods accidentally discovers lost gold mine and wins happiness with son of dance hall woman

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...........6,408 feet

The opening scenes of “The Grub-Stake,” take you back to the “movies” of five or six years ago, with the regulation “bad man” villain and the innocent girl who asks him for a loan so that she may take her invalid father to Alaska and “start fresh.” According to rule, the villain attacks her and she leaves his rooms dejectedly. However, the next day the bad man repents and really takes them to Alaska with him, going through a marriage ceremony with the girl on board the ship. Once in Alaska his true colors begin to show and the girl is informed by a dance hall woman, “Dawson Kate,” that her husband, LeRoy, has a wife already.

With the girl leaving town with her father whom she calls “The Skipper” and a half-crazed old prospector, however, the picture peps up considerably and from this point on to the finish there are thrills and romance enough to please those who like exciting entertainment.

Lost in the snow-covered forest and beaten by rain, Faith finally falls into a valley which faces south and is free from both snow and inhabitants. In this reel Miss Shipman introduces some very fine wild animal work. She handles and caresses bears, deer, porcupine and all sorts of animals in a delightful manner.

Walt Whitman contributes a good character study as the “skipper” whose rheumatism prevents him from aiding physically the “Mate” as he calls his daughter. George Berrell as “Malamute Mike” and a player whose name is not mentioned but who is cast as “Dawson Kate” add local color and excellent performances to the picture.

There is a twist at the finish that is rather unexpected when the villain, in a struggle with the girl, tells that she really his wife, his first wife having died two days before they were married, and there is a quick climax with the girl luring him out on a ledge of a cliff knowing that it will give way. The ledge collapses and LeRoy falls to his death but the girl hangs on and is rescued after some well-sustained suspense.

There are some wonderful shots of the snow-covered Alaskan hills and in absolute contrast to these are the scenes in the valley which is verdant and green. A cute finish shows different animals and their new “babies,” and then the cabin with its new cradle.

Plenty Of Action In Nell Shipman’s Latest

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is the first Nell Shipman picture in over a year, the last one being “The Girl From God’s Country” which your folks may remember. You can tell them that this one contains plenty of thrills and is a story of the Klondike in the days of the gold rush.

If they like thrillers and serial stuff they will in all probabilities be pleased with “The Grub-Stake.” Mention the wild animals that are shown, and the really beautiful exteriors, in addition to the story. Tell them about the girl who is befriended by a wild bear when lost in the heart of the wilderness. A lobby display of cut-outs of animals would be effective.

a Hollandia Production
Her brother was in trouble and only she could save him!

A gang of international crooks had said that unless she obtained certain papers, papers that if put in the hands of the proper authorities would incriminate persons high in diplomatic service, and deliver them into their hands, they would kill her brother.

To make matters worse they had stolen a valuable necklace her husband had just presented to her, about which she dared not tell him without implicating him in this terrible affair.

How was she to escape from their grasp and free her brother without bringing disaster and unhappiness to her home?

A helping hand in the time of need brought her the assistance of “The Lion’s Mouse” who from that moment became a dangerous foe of the blackmailers.

The tracking down of the leaders and the recovery of the papers and the necklace unfolds a melodrama of thrills and suspense that will grip any audience.

“THE LION’S MOUSE” is a picture that will make money in any theatre.
Pleasing Western That Contains Elements of Popular Appeal

William Fairbanks in
"THE LAW RUSTLERS"
Arrow—State Rights

DIRECTOR ...................... Lewis King
AUTHOR ........................ W. C. Tuttle
SCENARIO BY .............. Ben Wilson
CAMERAMAN ................ Not credited
AS A WHOLE.............. First rate western with sufficient action, good atmosphere and romance to make it interesting

STORY......Moves along at good pace and will please a majority; not startlingly new but very well handled

DIRECTION......Supplies many effective touches and is always smooth and to the point

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Good LIGHTINGS ................. All natural

STAR........Splendid hero type and should gather admirers for his work in this SUPPORT.......Ena Gregory pleasing but emotional scenes quite unconvincing; usual western types and a cute little girl

EXTERIORS................Fine shots of rolling western country

INTERIORS .................. Few

DETAIL........Sub-titles poor; otherwise ample

CHARACTER OF STORY......Cowboy, in search of adventure, finds it unexpectedly and after plenty of excitement wins the fair heroine

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ............ 4,900 feet

As westerns go, "The Law Rustlers," fulfills requirements adequately and will safely satisfy the majority of picture goers, especially those who favor the sort of atmosphere and action contained in this latest William Fairbanks production. The story is of a fairly familiar order with the customary ingredients such as action, thrills, suspense and romance all making their appearance in the course of the plot but the theme does not appear conventional as it might seem because of first rate direction and obvious good judgment in its handling.

The director starts out by immediately securing the spectator's interest in hero and his pal, both of them ranch hands who feel the urge of spring and decide to start out for somewhere, they don't know just where. This bit is singularly appropriate just at this season when folks are beginning to experience the same sensation as hero and his pal so that there should be a first rate appeal in this introduction. Thereafter the story progresses smoothly and without waste of footage.

Besides having used the material to good advantage, the director injects several original twists and effective touches that will not go unnoticed and the locations, ideal shots of "God's country," give the feature something definite in the way of pictorial appeal. There are numerous mighty beautiful views of wonderful western country with the mountains rolling away in the distance. Another noticeable thing in the picture, a surprising fact to associate with a western, is the absence of shooting and incidents that the censors like to say "tend to incite crime." Despite its title "The Law Rustlers," is about the most censor proof western that you could imagine. Hero even captures a whole band of outlaws at the point of a smoking pipe. What could be more harmless? The sub-titles are not always appropriate and in a few instances need to be rewritten.

Fairbanks is a pleasing hero who will thoroughly satisfy most any audience and his supporting company is first rate. Ena Gregory can't be convincingly sad but she is rather pretty. A cute little girl is another attractive feature.

You Can Safely Talk About It and It Should Satisfy

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is a first rate offering that should please the majority of audiences and exhibitors who know their folks like western entertainment will surely be able to satisfy them with William Fairbanks' latest, "The Law Rustlers." It is not at all a pretentious offering but it has thoroughly satisfying qualities that will make it an agreeable entertainment and because of its atmosphere, it should be quite appropriate for the present season. Incidentally you might interest them in catchlines such as: "Feel the call of Spring? See what happens to William Fairbanks' who has had a bad attack of spring fever in his latest attraction, 'The Law Rustlers,' at the blank theater."

If you folks are acquainted with the star play up his name and if they aren't it might be a good chance to introduce him and gets your patrons interested in him. His pictures are always reliably clean and afford good family entertainment.
Attractive Atmosphere And Some Good Action In Lumber Camp Story

Ernest Shipman presents
"THE MAN FROM GLENGARRY"
Hodkinson

DIRECTOR ..................... Henry McRae
AUTHOR ........................ Ralph Connor
SCENARIO BY ................... Kenneth O'Hara
CAMERAMAN ........................ Jacques Bizuel

AS A WHOLE.....Fine lumber camp atmosphere and interesting incidents in and around camp that make it rather attractive

STORY ......Not new or distinctive except for plenty of good detail and atmosphere that makes it worthwhile

DIRECTION ......Satisfactory, gives fine idea of lumber jack's life and otherwise provides attractive detail

PHOTOGRAPHY .................... Usually good

LIGHTINGS ........................ All right

PLAYERS ......Capable and well suited cast that includes Anders Randolph, Warner P. Richmond, Harlan Knight, Marion Swayne, E. L. Fernandez and Pauline Garon

EXTERIORS ........................... Pretty

INTERIORS ........................ Suitable

CHARACTER OF STORY ......Lumber camp boss is killed by boss of rival camp who repents when former's son is prevented from killing him by sweetheart

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........... 5,800 feet

Lumber stories always contain more or less the same plot with a feud between rival concerns providing the action and a log jam an exciting feature of the climax. In this respect Ralph Connor's "The Man From Glengarry" doesn't differ greatly from the regulation drama of this type, but with a thoroughly satisfying production and a capable cast, it makes a rather attractive entertainment that should please a majority.

Henry McRae has certainly secured fine atmosphere for the picture and the scenes of the river with its burden of logs and the numerous views of the lumber jacks at work, also at play, furnish a realistic idea of life in a lumber camp. Folks are going to marvel at the agility of the men on the logs, their daring in riding a single log in the rapids and other equally intrepid stunts that supply some of the action and thrills of the production.

The story is smoothly told and for the most part the interest is well sustained. Events following the climax are slightly confusing and the plotting gets a little beyond the spectator. This is not a conspicuous fault though and the ending clears up any uncertainty. The confusion may be due to the cutting. The picture looks as though it had been cut quite a bit in the latter reels.

Of the dramatic moments the fight of hero and villain on the logs is the best and also the rescue of hero's sweetheart from the rapids. This is a typical form of suspense with intermittent views of the rapids and then shots of the girl headed for them. It is effective nevertheless and the explosion of the jam is another good touch. There are a few comedy touches also that are appropriate.

Anders Randolph, as the boss of the camp, does good work and is the right type as is Warner P. Richmond, his son. Marion Swayne is satisfactory as the girl but she does not screen attractively. Pauline Garon is a pretty mischief maker and E. L. Fernandez is the villain.

Story: Ranald MacDonald becomes the boss of the St. Clair Camp when his father is killed by Lenoir, leader of the men of a rival concern. The persuasion of Ranald's sweetheart, Kate, prevents him from killing Lenoir. Later the owner of the camp offers Ranald a proposition to make a false report of the camp to Thorpe, a prospective buyer. Ranald refuses and on top of this is told by the owner's daughter that Kate no longer loves him. How Lenoir, seeking Ranald's forgiveness, brings about the reconciliation of the lovers and wins Ranald's forgiveness and Ranald becomes head of Thorpe's camp, completes the story.

Play Up Atmosphere Or Whatever Angle You Think Will Interest Most

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"The Man From Glengarry" offers a pleasing variation in dramatic entertainment and as such should please the majority of picture goers. The atmosphere of the lumber camp is realistic and thoroughly interesting. You might make a special effort to interest them in the picture through a trailer of these scenes, particularly those of the lumber jacks at work on the river. Play up the lumber camp atmosphere and for those who may be familiar with Ralph Connor's story, use his name. Of the players you can mention Anders Randolph, Warner P. Richmond who are probably the best known but do not rely on players' names to get them interested. Still, in the lobby should also attract attention.

Fairly Interesting Picture With Some Good Comedy Touches

G. S. Haskins
“JUST LIKE A WOMAN”
W. W. Hodkinson Corp.

DIRECTORS ........ Scott Beal and Hugh McClung
AUTHOR .................. Grace Haskins
SCENARIO BY .......... Hal Conklin
CAMERAMAN .......... Lyons Brothers and John Leezeur
AS A WHOLE ...... Fairly entertaining picture not distinguished by good or bad points

STORY .......... Somewhat unconvincing plot; situations hold a certain amount of interest, but a few thrills would help “pep” it up

DIRECTION .......... Did fairly well with story but maintained too even a tenor; some good comedy touches

PHOTOGRAPHY .......... Good
LIGHTINGS .......... Occasionally too dark

PLAYERS .......... Marguerite de la Motte gives good characterization, other Ralph Graves, George Fawcett, Jane Keckley and Julia Calhoun

EXTERIORS .......... Satisfactory
INTERIORS .......... All right

DETAIL .......... Sufficient

CHARACTER OF STORY .......... Orphaned daughter of actress masquerades as “prude” to teach aunt a lesson

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 4,900 feet

Produced by Grace Haskins, this latest Hodkinson release starts by being a drama, changes its mind and becomes a farce with pleasing comedy touches, and finally resolves itself again into near-tragedy by giving the hero a broken heart. This is, of course, finally mended before the last close-up.

Despite all this, however, “Just Like A Woman,” offers nothing particularly exciting in the way of amusement or entertainment, being satisifed to amble its way through almost five reels without being either very good or very bad.

Except for the bit in the opening reel in which the brother gets entangled in the shooting of a gambler in Mexico and flees across the border, there are few high spots.

Marguerite de la Motte gives a pleasing performance in the role of girl who masquerades as a prim, proper miss to teach her aunts whom she is visiting, a lesson.
There are some good comedy touches in this portion of the picture, and the scene in which she drapes a nude statue in the garden in ivy leaves because she “doesn’t approve of nude figures” will undoubtedly get a laugh.

There are slight incongruities here and there that could have been remedied. For instance, there is no explanation of what happens to the brother, who simply drops out of the picture, and another unconvincing bit is the fact that Graves is in love with the girl whom he sees daily in two different roles, and yet does not tell her that he knows she is masquerading. A title used here to the effect that between Peggy (her real name) and Marguerite (as the prude) he has little time for business, does not imply that he is aware that it is the same girl. George Fawcett is amusing as the Judge, and Ralph Graves a good-looking but slightly too tragic lover.

Story: Peggy Dean, orphaned daughter of an actrix, decides to teach her spinster aunts a lesson. She arrives in high collars and spectacles, far different from the wild young thing they expected. She meets James Landon, the Judge’s son, a lawyer and a woman hater and wagers the Judge’s car against a kiss that she can make him love her. Posing as a woman seeking a divorce she fascinates Landon, who, meeting her again in spectacles, does not recognize her but loves her in that role also. Peggy’s brother fleeing from Mexico comes to her for financial aid. Landon sees her in his arms and broken hearted leaves for China. Peggy, winning the car and the wager overtakes him on the steamer, the Captain of which marries them after the three-mile limit.

Play Up Your Cast But Make No Promises
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The cast is probably your best bet in this one, as both George Fawcett and Ralph Graves have a following in addition to Marguerite de la Motte. You can tell them it is an interesting feature, but don’t make any promises.

The title holds a certain amount of interest and you can tell them that a flapper masquerades as a would-be missionary, but she wins her man either way. The picture can stand a good supporting program because of its briefness and it could also be used on double-feature day.

You know what your folks like and if you think they will be satisfied with a pleasant enough little story that hasn’t any particularly strong situations, go ahead with this one.

Pathe Review No. 12—Pathe

Type of production..........................1 reel magazine

Interesting and varied subject matter, well photographed make this issue of Pathe’s Review a mighty good number. A subject entitled “Silhouettes,” composed of animated silhouette cutouts is amusing; the opening shots under the heading “Photographic Gems,” are pleasingly tinted; the weird Harvest Dance of the Senegambians of French West Africa will interest your folks and some of the newest hats being worn abroad and pictured in color will find favor with the ladies.

“Rob ‘Em Good”—Stromberg—Metro

Type of production..........................3 reel burlesque

Hunt Stromberg’s travesty on “Robin Hood” with Bull Montana in the title role has been produced on a lavish scale, and will undoubtedly entertain those who like burlesque. There are several laughs and considerable cleverness has been used in handling some of the gags. However, “Bull” is not as funny as “Rob ‘Em Good” as he is in his familiar pugilistic roles. There is a large supporting cast with some good names. Chuck Reisner, in particular, as the always-eating King Dick will come in for his share of laughter, but this is more because of the combination of food that he constantly eats than anything else—sauerkraut and ice cream being the finishing touch.

You should have no trouble in getting them in to see this, and it looks like a good box-office bet. The kids, especially, will enjoy it.

“Maid To Order”—Universal

Type of production..........................1 reel comedy

This is a fair-to-middling comedy starring Lewis Sargent and while it will probably amuse his followers there is nothing particularly funny or new in it. The idea of the table-tapping is probably the funniest incident in the reel and this bit will get a laugh. Jimmy Flanagan borrows the neighbor’s fine furniture for his mother when she tells him that his rich uncle is coming from London and, thinks they are rich. He also dresses up as a maid and his mother tells the uncle that Jimmy is dead. The uncle tries table-tapping to get in touch with Jimmy’s spirit. Jimmy adds a touch of realism by getting under the table and answering the call in person.

“The Alley Cat”—Aesop Fable—Pathe

Type of production..........................1 reel animated cartoon

This is an average number of the Aesop Film Fables and contains a fair amount of entertainment. It deals with farmer Al’s troubles with the mischievous mice who play football with eggs stolen from his ice-box. He goes to bed leaving Fanny the cat in charge, but a quartet of Fanny’s suitors come to serenade her and farmer Al is forced to drown Fanny in the well. But Fanny stages a come-back and drags the farmer off to a Cat Kiu Klux meeting. The moral of which is, according to Pathe and Aesop, “What can’t be cured must be endured.”

“God’s Law”—Tales of the Old West—Universal

Type of production..........................2 reel comedy

Universal is releasing from time to time two reel dramas under the brand name of “Tales of the Old West.” This one entitled “God’s Law,” stars Roy Stewart and has a supporting cast that includes Gertrude Olmstead, James Welsh, Leonard Clapham and others. Duke Worne has directed from a story by Anthony Coldewey. It deals with the trials of Dick Andrews who, traveling in an expedition to the West, is set adrift because he has killed a man in self-defense. There is plenty of excitement and those who like serials will be well pleased with this offering. The second reel is in a different locale entirely from the first and seems slightly disconnected but this should not bother them much. There are Indians aplenty and “covered wagons” that can be played up.

“Bowled Over”—Hal Roach—Pathe

Type of production..........................1 reel comedy

This Paul Parrott comedy contains a fair amount of laughs, which are obtained chiefly from slap-stick stuff which is staged in a bowling alley. Parrott is playing a championship game and his rival does everything possible to prevent him from winning—pouring glue into the balls, etc. There is a grand mix-up at the finish and everybody slams everybody else with pins, including a couple of cops who come in to see the game. If Parrott’s stuff finds favor with your folk, they will like this one. You can tell them there is a bowling tournament in it and this will draw the bowling fan.

“Shakespeare’s Country”—Great English Author Series—Kineto

Type of production..........................1 reel literature

Lovers of the “Bard of Avon” will be interested in seeing actual scenes of the places in which he spent his life. Kineto’s film shows the school that Shakespeare attended, the exterior of the house in which he was born in Stratford-on-Avon, and Anne Hathaway’s cottage together with numerous other places of interest in and about the town. This week at the Rivoli it was a fitting prologue to the showing of Shakespeare’s “Othello.”

“Bed Time”—Max Fleischer

Type of production..........................1 reel cartoon

This one of Max Fleischer’s “Inkwells” comedies shows the little imp from the inkwell annoying the artist who is trying to sleep. To punish the imp, he draws a high cliff and puts the little clown on its pinnacle so that he cannot get down. The clown goes to sleep and dreams—wild cartoon dreams of a giant and a cave and other things and the artist goes to sleep and dreams that the imp is chasing him all over the city in his pajamas. There are numerous laughs and the reel should have no difficulty in amusing your folks.

While in their bedrooms, Giselle and Gerard had their own thoughts of fluctuating values in the marriage market.

"I am making a great sacrifice for you, my dear. I am going to marry a rich American girl, so that you can have plenty of money."

Allied Laboratories Stick to American Raw Stock—Eastman Withdraws Objection

Despite reports to the effect that members of the Allied Film Laboratories, Inc., had altered their ideas about using American raw stock to the exclusion of foreign makes, it was stated on Saturday that such was not the case and that the original decision had been adhered to.

It developed that a few days ago, Tom Evans, president of the organization, received a letter from George Eastman in which Mr. Eastman declared he no longer had any objection to the use of foreign-made raw stock, if the Allied members desired to use it.

In the fall of 1921, when the agitation between those laboratory owners who later banded together in the Allied Film Laboratories, Inc., and Eastman Kodak reached its culmination in the withdrawal of Eastman from the laboratory field, the question of the use of foreign raw stock was important.

Eastman claimed it was essential for the company to combat the foreign invasion, as-called at the time, and so deemed it necessary to actively enter the laboratory field and commercially compete with laboratories that might use foreign stock.

When the Allied members declared they would use only American stock, an agreement was reached with Eastman with the result that the Sen Jac, the G. M., and the Paragon "labs," representing millions were closed by Eastman.

New Fox Studio

For West Coast—Present Plant Will Be Turned to Commercial Uses—Only Specials Next Year
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—The West Coast studios of the Fox organization covering 14 acres on Western Ave., and Sunset Boulevard will be discontinued and turned to commercial uses, including a number of building projects. This will be done because of the tremendous real estate value of the land.

Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the company, announces that a new studio to cost $2,000,000 will be erected here, construction to start in the summer. It is planned to have a laboratory for handling of prints in quantity lots.

Fox will not make any program releases for next year. The production schedule calls for 26 pictures, all specials. John C. Eisele, treasurer, is here attending to the detail relative to the new studio project and the disposition of the present plant.

Charles A. Bird has resigned as business manager and casting director of the studio. He has been replaced by Ben Jackson as business manager and Arthur Ford, as casting director.

Pathé Holds Three Year Contract

Although no word has come from Pathé which would indicate whether or not the company will handle the features Hal Roach will make, it was recalled on Saturday that on one of his Eastern trips Roach had signed a three year contract with Pathé covering all of his product. This occurred in February, 1922.

It was impossible to learn on Saturday the possible reason for Eastman's letter in which he withdrew the objections to the certain foreign stock. The letter came as a surprise to the Allied members.

It is reported that, upon inspection of the representatives of foreign raw stock interests, governmental agencies had interested themselves in the likelihood of an existing agreement between the Eastman Kodak Co. and the Allied Film Laboratories, Inc., looking for the use of domestic raw stock only. This was reported as an indirect reason for the Eastman letter.

As a matter of fact, it is understood that the decision to use only American raw stock was reached by the Allied members in conference and was not influenced by any outside pressure. Efforts made locally to ascertain if any federal body was examining an investigation were without result.

The Eastman Kodak Company was requested by a statement by telegraph, but in response East a letter the matter requires no comment at present.

News to Washington
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Washington—No complaint has been lodged with the Federal Government regarding the reported agreement between the Eastman Kodak Company and laboratories to bar imports of raw stock, so far as can be learned. It is possible that the matter has been brought to the attention of officials here, but so far no steps have been taken in the matter and at all departments where inquiry was made, it is denied that the subject has been broached.

The Department of Justice which, from time to time, has taken some interest in the activities of the Eastman Kodak Company, has not received any complaint of this nature, it was stated, while at the Tariff Commission where such a complaint might go under the flexible provisions of the tariff law nothing had been heard of the matter.

So far as the Federal Trade Commission, the Department of Commerce, and the Treasury Department are concerned, it was professed that the matter had never been brought up. Of the three, however, the Federal Trade Commission is the only one likely to receive such a complaint formally.

Newspaper Opinions

"The Covered Wagon"—F. P. L.

CRITICISM

EVENING JOURNAL—Praise is due to two reasons: first, because "The Covered Wagon" is about the best lesson in Americanization that the screen has produced since the Great War, and secondly, because it is wonderfully good drama. It helps to immortalize a hero of America that has been forgotten in the swirl of to-day's problems and high spots are so numerous that it is impossible to dilute on more than one or two. A remarkable scene is that of the rossing of the North fork of the state.

EVENING WORLD—The picture in many of its scenes is breathtaking. It has a genuine appeal. Mr. Tully Kerriag, for years one of the screen's outstanding stars. And the performances he gave last night made the question meaningless: "Where has been better?"

GLOBE—"The Covered Wagon" appears to be one of the best efforts that the art of cinematography—a yet very young art—has given us. It is worth seeing. This may sound extravagant, but when a really excellent film shows its head above the dead sea of mediocrity it is hard for a reviewer to restrain his praise.

HERALD—"The Covered Wagon" is therefore a remarkable tribute from one generation of gold getters to another; what James Cunningham has done is gold. And the picture itself is gold. It is a wonderful extravaganza, but when it is really an excellent film shows its head above the dead sea of mediocrity it is hard for a reviewer to restrain his praise.

MAIL—As a motion picture spectacle "The Covered Wagon," which opened last night at the Criterion, will be remembered for a long time. "The Covered Wagon" is for the most part a spectacle. The love interest is not absent. It is contained in a trite story entirely unworthy of the picture, serving only to give Tully Marshall and Ernest Torrence several opportunities for excellent characterization.

WORLD—We take great pleasure in throwing back our head on this occasion and uttering a peeping "Bravo!" in recognition of the arrival from one of our own cinema cameras of a picture play which is as good as gold with no reservations of importance to talk upon. "The Covered Wagon" is a stirring romantic document. It takes its place as a joint work of historic and artistic importance far in the lead of anything that ever has been filmed. Mr. Wilson is admirable as the heroine, and Mr. Kerriag is properly gallant.

about June next is going to give more than one sales manager a headache before this time next year. It's going to be tough sledding for somebody if you, Mr. Ex-hi-bi-tor, just keep your nerve and mean it when you say: "I guess I'll wait a bit."

There are many reasons for this. First you never can tell and a big price doesn't mean a big picture. Again, advance promises are only promises. You know what percentage comes through. And lastly you never know what unknown concern director, or producer, is going to turn out the sweetest lily of the valley. And you want to be able to take advantage of this if it does develop.

LOOK WHO'S HERE

You can depend on this: Famous will have about 80 for next season. You know about the average Famous holds. You know there will be the usual DeMilles and all the rest, although Fitzmaurice will be out from under the banner. Incidentally Famous can be expected to have some independently made pictures for next season. The tip is out that the old line policy will be changed and independent producers will probably be able to "break in" on the releasing schedule. But they will have 80 anyway. Metro promises something like 30 or 32 now and will probably have a dozen more if independent producers show anything they particularly like. Coogan will be one of the big bets and there is Ingram and the Fred Niblo specials from Louis Mayer, together with the other well known product. Keaton's four or five reels will also go through Metro, and Mae Murray's specials cannot be overlooked.

Between Famous and Metro there will be about 120 pictures, and Goldwyn is rushing enough production to make them very important both in quantity and quality. The Goldwyn lot is busier than any other spot in Hollywood this moment. Led by Neilan there are a flock of well known directors working. Von Stroheim, King Vidor, Seastrom, Tod Browning, Brabin, Hughes, and others are sure to turn out something like 30 or more; so now the total is around 150.

MARY AND DOUG

Can be counted on for two pictures at least, Chaplin is uncertain and the entire United and Allied producers, including Griffith, may present something like 15. You have no alibi for forgetting them. Warner Brothers who will probably release a dozen surely, and First National is speeding production with seven or eight units of their own, which, with the Talmades, and the possibility of taking in independent pictures will certainly give them something over 30. You are now certain of over 200 productions, a large number of which promise to be better than usual. To this you add Universal's Jewels which will number 12 at least, and the Fox super specials will probably reach eight or ten. At Lichtman's group promises about a dozen. Warren's American Releasing will have a lot. From 60 to 72. Associated Exhibitors can be figured on 26 minimum; F. B. O. is uncertain but can be figured for a lot. Hodkinson's producers will give him somewhere around 20.

The independent market, with state right features hasn't even been touched, nor have the regulation releases of Universal and Fox. But passing these by there will be in the neighborhood of 300 pictures, all of which, at present, are termed "big."

Of course you know that of all of these something like 25 or 30 will stand out conspicuously, with a dozen or more leading the list as unusually worth while. But the big point is that there will be a lot of good pictures. An unusually important lot. And you cannot afford to block yourself out. You must give yourself a fair chance at a lot of them.

P. S.: Tear this out. Paste it in the date book somewhere after July 1. It should come in handy.

WHISPERINGS

They say: that Joe Schenck will spend about $750,000 on his next for Norma "Ashes of Vengeance"—that incidentally (Continued on Page 5)
Keep Time Open

— expects to make "The Next Corner" by Kate Jordan, which could be a real box office bet—that Eddie Lincoln is doing a Western with Edgar Lewis handling the production in his well known way—that Randy Bartlett is looking serious and dignified, and is wearing his hair a new way—that Bernie Fineeman about to become a Benedict—that there may be a change in the studio management of Fox at Hollywood—that Pola Negri will next make "The Flame" which she made abroad, but which will have the benefit of American studio methods and lens—that Earl Williams never looked better than he does day—that C. Gardner Sullivan is with Joe Schenck on a long time contract—that Louie Mayer intends giving Irving Thalberg much of the work to handle that he has been doing a long time—that Anita Stewart may make a series here for Cosmopolitan.

LUBITSCHE

Ernst Lubitsch who is directing Mary Pickford is one of the biggestest names in Hollywood. "Directing in America is a lot simpler; so much easier and better than in Europe" says Lubitsch, "that I think I will never return to the other side. I am very, very happy here." Lubitsch now speaks English fluently, and his wife is making decided progress in adopting English.

THE PILGRIM SHIP

The Mayflower. On which the Pilgrim dads arrived. Reduced faithfully. And used by Charley Ray. In "The Courtnip of Miles Standish." Some ship. Cost $62,500 to build. And won't sail. But it is a peach of a set. And so faithful in reproduction that the city authorities want it for one of the parks.

Built by Robert Ellis. Who spent a long time in Paris. And knows his Latin Quarter. Like a book. Incidentally Ellis painted a panorama 300 feet long. For the picture. Showing forest effects. And then repainted it to show the snow falling. Largest panorama ever used in a picture.

A STUNT

Tom Mix is just full of ideas. Put his yacht in commission last Sunday. And celebrated by having Tony. His famous "hoss" help. By pulling the yacht in the water. And all his cowboys. On their wild steeds. Were on hand. To celebrate. With a barbecue 'n everything. As all we editors say: "A good time was had by all."

PRODUCERS AND PUPS

Any time a producer out this way isn't buying real estate. He looks after his dogs. Some of them so interested they forget all about everything else. Take the Christie's for instance. Charley Christie takes a kennel East. And cleans up all kinds of ribbons in New York, and other points. Returns in time to take the Kennel to Pasadena. And get a lot of other prizes.

Hal Roach also has a lot of prize winning pups.

POLA IN "BELLA DONNA"

Surely proving a tremendous bet at Grauman's Rialto here. Crowds throng house long before show opens, and particularly do they seem interested in how she appears. She has been photographed to look like a million dollars, and the lighting given her makes her appear as someone new and delightful in contrast to the sharp lighting and poor make-up used in her foreign productions. She will prove a sensation. She is already proving it despite that some Los Angeles newspapers did not like the story of "Bella Donna."

Vants $50,000 or R-C Stock, Claiming He Brought Rufus Cole and Powers Together in Deal
Charles R. Rogers, now of Resolute Film Sales, Inc., and Patrick A. Powers for $60,000 or 4,000 shares of Class B common stock of R-C Pictures. The action was originally filed in Bronx County but has been transferred to New York County.
Rogers alleges that he was general manager and distributor of R-C Pictures and that Powers told him in December, 1921, that he had conceived a plan whereby the affairs of the corporation could be conducted in a manner that the profits could be increased and the value of the stock enhanced. Rogers says he agreed to arrange a meeting for Powers with Rufus S. Cole, president of (Continued on Page 2)

"Covered Wagon" Seats to Agencies
The sale of seats for the "Covered Wagon" has been placed in the hands of agents. It was reported yesterday that $20,000 worth of tickets had been disposed of in this manner.

Heerman Leaves Soon
Victor Heerman leaves for the coast soon to start work on "Dudley" starring Constance Talmadge.

Deal With Allied?
Reported "Rupert" and "Common Law" Sold to Abrams' Company—General Denial Made
It was reported yesterday that "Rupert of Hentza" and "The Common Law," two of the three Selznick specials which were completed on the coast and never released had been sold to the Allied Prod. and Dist Corp., the United Artists' subsidiary.
This was denied generally when inquiries were made. Hiram Abrams stated it was not true but that he wished it was because, repeating what he said upon his return from the coast, he feels the pictures are fine enough to be shown in any theater in America. At Selznick, it was said by David Selznick that "there was nothing definite" to say about the pictures at this time.

Both productions have been shown to distributors on the coast in the past few weeks. It was reported not so long since that both United Artists and First National entered bids for the distribution.

Joint Booking Plan
Hits St. Louis—Forty Exhibitors Considering Scheme to Offset Skouras Bros.

St. Louis—Negotiations looking to the formation of booking arrangement whereby about 40 houses would combine in contracting for films have been under way for the past few weeks. Those behind the movement are not yet ready to announce their plans.

The principal purpose of the new organization, if the plans are consummated, is to combat the growing influence of the St. Louis Amusement Co., which is controlled by the Skouras Bros. and Harry Koster. The independent exhibitors fear that eventually they will be put out of business by the chain-theater competition unless they pool their strength. It is understood the new body would be controlled by a board of directors, and that the individual theaters would continue under their present management, merely paying a 5% book-in fee to the "ool fund."

Show Baird Film in Washington

Washington—"Is Divorce a Failure," Leah Baird's new picture was shown to a number of prominent clubwomen last week by arrangement with the educational department of the Strand theaters.

Estabrook Returns
Howard Estabrook, production manager of Distinctive Pictures, is back from Florida where the "Sagged Edge" company shot exteriors. With him came Fay L. Fau- rote and William S. Leavcroft, both connected with Miami studios, where the Distinctive company worked. The new plant is located at Hi-A-ile-Ah, a suburb of Miami.

Watch Woman's Angle, Says Saxe
Tom Saxe of Milwaukee, is in New York serving on First National's rotating committee: This is what he says about patronage at picture theaters:

"It is the women and young girls who are supporting the theaters today. Get them in and your success is assured. The men follow as a matter of course. Consequently, the thing for the vigilant theater owner to do, as we are finding it in our experience, is to look at the booking of pictures from a woman's point of view."

"We have been noting quite a few points of interest in our theaters this last year. Business is considerably better than a year ago. So are the pictures."

Despite the fact that there are five first runs in Milwaukee now, Saxe will open a new one on Jan. 1. This will be the Wisconsin, a 3,300 house in a six story building at the corner of Grand and Sixth Sts., Milwaukee.

Fay Rothman is now connected with the Mutual Brokage Corp.

J. Stuart Blackton Again Vice-President—Expected to Make Features for Company

The board of directors of Vitagraph held a meeting on Wednesday, at which Commodore J. Stuart Blackton was elected a vice-president of the company, an executive post he had held before going abroad to produce.

Blackton, who has just returned from England where he spent two years producing three pictures, has always said his stock interest in Vitagraph, but has not been active in its affairs for some time.

Following the meeting, Albert E. Smith, president, left for the coast to start two new producing units. While no deal has been consummated as yet in all likelihood, Blackton's active association with Vitagraph will result in a series of pictures. He will leave for California in several weeks to start work. His stay in England resulted in the gathering of a large amount of material which he expects to use in future films.

Capitol Feature a Surprise

Goldwyn officials make no attempt to conceal their surprise over the gross at the Capitol where "Lost and Found" is now finishing a week's run. The picture was put on there without any fuss and since Sunday, the total has been mounting steadily. At the present rate of business, the gross for the week will be about $40,000.

Plan New Advertising

First National has reduced its exploitation force from 22 to nine men and with the money saved in that direction, will launch what is described as a new angle in national advertising.

Before Ned Holmes, head of the staff resigned, the idea in the field was: presented with a beautiful gold watch.

Aschers have leased the Vista from Gumbiner Bros.

Preparing For Fall

Zukor and Kent to Take Up New Schedule Upon Return April 15—Two Conventions Planned

Adolph Zukor and Sidney R. Kent are due back from Europe about April 15th. One of the first matters they will take up will be the line-up for the fall season. It is claimed between 80 and 85 pictures will be released next year.

Robert T. Kane, head of the production department, has been lining up material. Jesse L. Lasky has returned to Hollywood to get a number of plans under way there. When the schedule is set, there will probably be two sales conventions held, one in the East and another in the West to acquaint the selling force with next year's plans.

On the schedule, will be a series of Zane Grey stories and at least four Glenn Hunter starring pictures.

Will Safeguard Deposits

As a result of a conference with Sydney S. Cohen, W. C. J. Doolittle of the Selznick reorganization committee, has told Cohen that deposits held by Selet are in no danger and that exhibitor interests will be properly safeguarded.

Maybe you’ve noticed that we haven’t said much yet about our plans for next season—

But Oboy!
How we are sawing wood!

We’re going to knock’em dead.

Sure’s Shootin!

P.S. Have you read “BLACK OXEN”?
Gertrude Atherton’s novel all about how a middle aged woman became young and beautiful—and had some love affair.
All the women are talking about it.

Y’ought to read it.
Puttting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over.

Send along your ideas. Let the editor know how you cleaned up.

Ticket for a Joke:

Jamaica, L. I.—For the showing of "My American Wife," Fred V. Greene, Jr., managing director of the Rialto, began a stunt that started a number of fans contrib to his "house organ," "The Rialto Theater News," thereby enhancing the value of such exploitation.

On the last page he runs a joke column, and Fred claims that first-class humor was getting scarce. Anybody sending in a respectable and acceptable joke would receive a free ticket.

Getting Behind a "Repeat"

Seattle—Although "Smilin Through" has played almost every theater in town Danz and the Colonial exploited it when he "repeated."

The twenty-four sheet cutout heads of Norma Talmadge, the garden wall, elaborated so as to surround the box office as well as the theater entrances and a canvas awning from above a news sheet of the upper part of Norma Talmadge, gave the effect of the star leaning out of a window to wave a greeting.

Cheap But Effective

Topeka, Kan.—A pep stunt that cost nothing yet held the interest all week for "The Flirt," was suggested by L. D. Balsly, exploiter for Universal, and executed by E. D. Kehlmann, manager of the Grand.

A merchant tie-up between the Grand and Harry Edlich Millinery Shoppe is another good stunt. Edlich offers a sport hat to the most became-in girl in Topeka.

The hat was displayed in the window with a card explaining the contest. Stories got into the newspapers. On the fifth night of the engagement, 12 pretty girls came forward to be fitted and the winner was decided by the applause from the audience.

Results Through Private Showing

Brookton, Mass.—Through the efforts of Charles E. Mansfield, of the Gordon, and the Daily Enterprise, the teachers, clergy and representa tives of the town were invited to a special Saturday morning showing of "Down to the Sea in Ships."

Mayor Manning, the Board of Aldermen and Merchants, John F. Scully, of the School Department, the school teachers and the clergy as well as the office employees of the Chamber of Commerce all attended. For three days preceding the private showing the newspapers in the town carried notices announcing the coming of the film. With this foundation to work upon the result was beyond all expectation, according to Mansfield.

Big Fox Plans

J. Gordon Edwards, as noted, is in Panama shooting scenes for a melodrama, which will be included in next year's schedule. Jack Ford will continue his work on the coast on "Cameo Kirby," while another contemplated feature will be a race track drama based on "The Blue Boy." Tom Mix will appear in two Zane Grey stories, work on which starts soon.

The fall list will be headed by "Hi Winter Comes," which opens at a Broadway house soon. John Gilbert and Barbara La Marr appear in "St. Elmo," which has been completed on the coast. J. Gordon Edward's "The Shepherd King," is also part of the schedule, as are "The Eleventh Hour," with Charles Jones and Shirley Mason and "Hell's Hole."

"Monna Vanna," a German picture which has been held in the Fox vaults for some months, will be released next fall as a special. Fox bought it on its last European trip.

Jean Arthur, Ruth Dwyer and Peggy Shaw have been placed under contract to play leads. While unconfirmed, it is understood the studio has secured options on all stage plays of three well-known producers and that they will stage these plays as soon as their Broadway runs are completed.

The foreign distributing system will be augmented with offices in Cuba, Mexico, Holland, Czecho-Slovakia, and Japan. The theater end of the enterprise will likewise become active with the erection of two new houses, one in Boston and one in Chicago. The Philadelphia theater is now well under way, while the Oakland theater, which B. Barrett McCormick will manage, opens in April. Meanwhile, Winfield R. Sheehan, John C. Eische and Vivian M. Moses are in Hollywood preparing for the fall. Sheehan and Moses will be back in town in about two weeks.

Doty With Palermo Photoplay

Los Angeles—Douglas Z. Doty has succeeded Eugene B. Lewis as editor of the advisory bureau of the Palermo Photoplay Corp.

Leave for the South

The Wesley Ruggles company making "The Heart Raider" left for the South last night. The party included Agnes Ayres, Ruggles and Jack Cunningham.

Mosher Heads Industrial Unit

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Buffalo—Mrs. Mosher, R. W. Elmes and Elmer C. Winchgar have formed the E. M. W. Pictures Corp. to produce industrials.

Ohio Referendum

Planned for Sunday Shows—Sam Bullock Says Exhibitors Will Sponsor Move

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Columbus, O.—Ohio exhibitors intend carrying on a campaign for Sunday shows to the voters of the state.

This announcement was made by Samuel Bullock, Cleveland, of the public service department of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio, after the House Judiciary Committee had refused to hold a public hearing on the Ramey bill, providing local option on the question of Sunday shows.

The bill is slated for death before the committee. It would prevent the stopping of Sunday shows in municipalities where theaters not open, except through referendum, and would prohibit Sunday shows where there are now none without legislative action.

"Initiative petitions will be circulated and the matter of Sunday movies put to the voters of the state," said Bullock.

Cuts And Flashes

John G. Adolf has gone to Hollywood.

Harold Lloyd's "Safety Last" opens at the Strand on April 1.

Louis B. Mayer has signed Norman Shearer. She has already left for California.

Bela Lugosi has been engaged by Fox for the heavy role in the new J. Gordon Edwards production.

"A Wife in Name Only," now being made by George Terwilliger, has Arthur Housman heading the cast.

The feature at the Rivoli next week will be "Grumpy." At the Rialto, "The Leopards" will be the attraction.

Two productions are scheduled for release on the Hodkinson program for March 25, "The Man From Gengarry" and "The Lion's Mouse."

Virginia Lee has completed her engagement in "Underpaid," a new production featuring Walter Miller and herself. Joseph Levering directed it.

Baer to Help Grauman

Emanuel Baer, one of Hugo Riesenfeld's staff of musical directors, left yesterday for the Pacific Coast to assist Sid Grauman there in the presentation of "The Covered Wagon." This picture will open at Grauman's Egyptian theater in Hollywood, following a 3-weeks' engagement of "Rohin Hood."

Start Three Houses at Once

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Pottsville, Pa.—Plans are being drawn for the three theaters in Pottsville, Tamaqua and Mahony City, to be erected by Anthracite Amusements, Inc., Circuit, of which Al Gottessman, the proprietor of the Strand, Shenandoah, is active head. The new company will spend from $8,000 to $40,000 in remodeling the Strand. The Mahony City theater will seat 1,400. The Pottsville, 2,000, and the Tamaqua 1,400, also be fronted by stores.

Space Half Sold

The actual business meetings of the convention will be held in the Coliseum. The exposition will open on May 19 and run through the 25th. The business sessions open on the 21st. Equitable manufacturers and accessory firms as well as producers and distributors have contracted for space.

The Departments of Labor, Commerce, Agricultural and interior will have official representation. Motion pictures illustrative of the work being done by these departments will be shown during the exposition. Every modern mechanical device within recent years will be shown. The spycroscope, new stereoscopic inventions, talking pictures, cameras, projectors, safety appliances, printing machines, lighting effects and innumerable other developments will be on view.

$92,061 Gross in Six Weeks

According to United Artists, a gross of $92,061.80 was rolled up in six weeks at the Chicago theater, Chicago, by "Robin Hood." The theater seats 1,500. It is estimated that about 250,000 saw the picture in that period.

In the Courts

Suit has been filed in the Supreme Court by the Barnes Printing against the Oliver Amusement of Freeport, L. I., for $399.

Supreme Court Justice Newby has directed a verdict for $4,239 in favor of Carl Harbaugh, in a suit against the Oliver Print, which failed to make a payment. He alleged that he made a duplicate of the film and was starting the eighth, and was to get $40 a week.

Supreme Court Justice Wagner has denied an application by Herbert N. Schwartz for summary judgment in his behalf against Mrs. George M. Merrick, William J. Gons and Irving Messing on a note for $2,500 made by Cohen. Colm says he made the note and gave it to Messing for an assignment of Messing's interest in Monopol Pictures, and that the note was not paid unless the assignment was executed, which he says was finally refused to do.

(Special to the FILM DAILY)
Alton, Ill.—James R. Drake, who planned to reopen the Temple, has met with opposition from the city officials. It will be recalled that Building Commissioner McKelvey of St. Louis put him out of business by condemning the Ozark a few weeks after Drake had purchased the house. Drake contends that the official was persecuting him for personal reasons, and has filed suit for damages against him in the circuit court.

Berlin Exhibitors in Arms
(Special to the FILM DAILY)
Berlin—All Berlin theaters closed down last December as a protest against the oppressive entertainment taxes, and succeeded in enforcing a reduction. Now a repetition of this strike is threatened, but this time the measure is directed against the rental firms who request an increase of 7,000% above original rentals. Exhibitors say they are unable to support this increase which would necessitate a minimum entrance fee of 1200 to 1400 marks.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

“Robin Hood” in the Northwest

Seattle—An extensive newspaper campaign has been started by “Robin Hood” in preparation for its appearance at the Liberty. The campaign started with small notices of the coming attraction, and by the time of the opening over 30 solid columns of free space had been obtained.

Scenario Contest Puts This Over

Sioux Falls, S. D.—When “Broken Chains” was shown at the Colonial, a scenario contest tie-up was made with the daily Argus-Leader, in which cash and ticket prizes were offered for the best new endings to the picture.

The contest was advertised daily under a double column head for four days, with all entries getting at least 250 new endings to the photoplay. Several of these were published in the columns of the Argus-Leader with the name of the writer. The prize for the best new ending of the picture was $10 in cash. Additional prizes consisted of groups of ten and five tickets to “Broken Chains” at the Colonial.

Mardi Gras Atmosphere

Wichita, Kan.—An interesting plan was devised by “Just Walt,” the exploitation man for the Kansas theater, recently in putting up “While Paris Sleeps.”

The picture is a story of Bohemian night life in the city of Paris, including a reproduction of the famous Mardi Gras with its accompanying revelry and gaiety. This Mardi Gras atmosphere has been created by the use of colored balloons and Japanese lanterns with various colored lights. Lattice work around the front of the theater covered with flowers, and pots of palms in the lobby and on top of the marquee added to the general atmosphere. It is said that at night the effect was particularly attractive with all the various colored lights shining through the artistic arrangement of lanterns, balloons, streamers, etc.

Effective Front For “Omar”

Yakima, Wash.—Harry Gillespie, of the Liberty, usually uses lobby displays to exploit his pictures. When he played “Omar the Tentmaker,” this is what he did:

He used a fantastic Persian design with the youthful Omar making love to the fair Shirleen in a bower of roses and what-nots. This was hand-painted in a four strip cardboard front that covered the main portion of the exterior. Hand painted designs were also used on the entrances, the ideas, for the most part, having been gained from stills and posters on the production.

The Best Picture So Far This Year And A Mighty Fine One

James Cruze Prod.
"THE COVERED WAGON"
Paramount

DIRECTOR .................................. James Cruze
AUTHOR ................................. Emerson Hough
SCENARIO BY ............................. Jack Cunningham
CAMERAMAN ......................... Karl Brown

AS A WHOLE .... Stupendous production that is about the biggest thing attempted in recent years; a hundred per cent American picture STORY ........ It's so much what the story is but the way it has been done that makes it a winner DIRECTION .... Needs a lot of big words to describe it adequately; the atmosphere of pioneer days unbelievably real PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Excellent plus LIGHTINGS .............................. The same

PARAMOUNT'S advertisement and well announced "The Covered Wagon" lives well up to even the exvagant promises made for it and it is a safe bet that there has never been anything more thoroughly American than James Cruze's production of Emerson Hough's novel. Besides the stupendousness of the picture and the vast spectacle that it is,—facts that in themselves make it one of the biggest things accomplished in recent years—the picture is delightful entertainment; a combination of elements that cannot fail to please everyone.

And the biggest share of credit rightfully belongs to James Cruze whose masterful handling of the novel has been responsible for the remarkable results obtained.
Of course it is obvious that Cruze had liberal access to famous Players' treasury which made it possible for him to make a big picture but so often directors fail to use this privilege to advantage. In "The Covered Wagon" every penny spent upon the production makes itself felt and although the cost may have run way up in the hundred thousands, it looks it.

And besides Cruze's fine work from a production standpoint, his telling of the story is such that he wont be many who will recognize the theme as on which, in the main, has been the meat of many pictures. There is a heroine, a hero and a villain, with the latter two both in love with the girl. But the idea loses all evidence of commonplaceness under skilful direction. And the thrills, the action, the suspense, the romance, pictorial appeal, and above all, the laughs
— it requires more space to describe it all adequately.

But to mention a few specific bits that are knock-onks: There are the numerous views of the wagon train, a long line of white covered caravans that stretch so far in the distance they seem to touch the horizon, the attack of the Indians and one thrilling shot where horse and rider topple over the cliff; the prairie fire; the blizzard; the fording of the river; the massacre; the fight between Banion and Woodhull; the buffalo hunt and the death of Woodhull. There is a thrill unique in every one of these and more that are not mentioned.

One of the important factors, and next to the bigness of the picture, one of the best entertainment elements, is the comedy injected through the performance of Ernest Torrence who gives one of the best portrayals the screen has ever seen. He is Jackson, a fierce looking, jovial scout who supplies the laughs of the offering. Torrence really carries away the acting honors and there was a roar at the Criterion every time he tried to kill off the villain and almost a riot when he finally succeeded. But J. Warren Kerrigan comes back to the screen as Will Banion, the hero, in fitting fashion and does very well. Lois Wilson is a pleasing Molly Wingate. Tully Marshall contributes some laughs as Kit Carson and little John Fox as the tobacco chewing youngster who plays "Oh, Suzanna," is a good treat also. The cast is splendid and it is a huge one, including many real Indians.

Should Be A Clean-Up Everywhere—Big And Sure-Fire Entertainment

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It looks like exhibitors have a big one coming to them once Paramount is ready for general distribution on "The Covered Wagon." And by that time your patrons will have heard plenty about the film. The rest should be easy. Undoubtedly the picture is one of the biggest of its kind that has been made and because of the subject matter it should carry a strong appeal for American audiences. Its atmosphere of the pioneer days is so realistic and so big it cannot fail to leave a lasting impression. Furthermore, it contains elements of entertainment that picture goers want. And it has a variety that about covers the list,—unusual thrills, pictorial appeal, romance, action, suspense—it has them all. And in a big way.

Mention some of the big moments of the picture and get them interested well in advance of the showing. The returns should be heavy. The fact that the story ran in the Saturday Evening Post is another big asset. Patriotism is strong in the theme and if your crowd is enthusiastic you will have a busy time of it with your S. R. O. sign. Above all secure a fitting musical accompaniment for it certainly sends the picture over in smashing style, although this isn't to say that the picture relies upon it at any time. Use the names of those in the cast. Put your best efforts into exploitation.
Scenically Beautiful and Interesting in the Narrative it Tells

Robert C. Bruce Prod.
"WHILE THE POT BOILS"

DIRECTOR .................. Robert C. Bruce AUTHOR ..................... Robert C. Bruce
SCENARIO BY ................. Peter Milne
CAMERAMAN .................. John M. Lamond

AS A WHOLE... A distinctly novel entertainment; its material unique and its atmosphere picturesque

DETAIL .......................... All right

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Five hoboes relate how they happened to "hit the road"

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5,000 feet

Although Robert C. Bruce has already produced many very beautiful and attractive short reel scenic pictures, and particularly his recent "Wilderness Tales," this latest effort "While the Pot Boils," is his first attempt at a feature. The production is a decided novelty and while it does not essentially contain a plot, it is narrative of the most interesting and absorbing kind with a variety of atmosphere and color that makes it a delightful entertainment.

The life of a hobo has a certain fascination about it that is unusually well brought out in "While the Pot Boils," and the episodes in the lives of the five "weary knights" pictured in it are nicely woven together and told against some of the most beautiful backgrounds yet photographed. While Bruce's feature includes some scenes similar to those in "Wilderness Tales," there is a greater variety of views and a more generous amount of them.

The picture opens with the gathering of the hoboes in their rendezvous and the suggestion of one that "some of you guys tell how you happened to hit the road—"it'll help kill the time" gets it into the narrative that proves thoroughly interesting and in which the director has succeeded in holding the attention all the way. In two instances the speaker's downward path started at the desertion of his wife, another was brought about by the loss of a son and still another through brutality to a dog, for which act the speaker killed the antagonist and made his escape.

With the telling of the first two "why they hit the roads," there are many beautiful shots of the mountains; another is devoted to views of the sea; another includes interesting scenes of a fish hatchery, and toward the close there are some views of a lumber camp. But the outstanding pictures are those taken from a sluice-way, the cameraman traveling down the water path from the mountain top to the base. Besides the beauty of this sequence there is a real thrill in it. The photography is excellent at all times.

The cast is not an important feature of the production, but those who appear are adequate and fulfill all requirements. There may be some confusion through the same girl appearing as the wife of two different men. The sub-title at the close in which the men recognize her picture is hardly sufficient.

Fine Novelty Offering and Should Please Your Folks

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Another of the season's novelty offerings is "While the Pot 'Boils," so exhibitors catering to a clientele that wants something new will do well to book this first Robert Bruce feature. You can make plenty of promises for the pictorial value of the production and stills in the lobby will serve to give them an idea of the picture's beauty.

If you have shown the "Wilderness Tales" you will be in a fair way to know whether or not your folks like the sort of entertainment contained in the Bruce pictures. If they like picturesque offerings you can be quite sure they'll be pleased with "While the Pot Boils." A trailer of the sluice-way sequence should easily get them interested, sufficiently so to bring them back for the showing.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 4,861 feet

Herbert Rawlinson’s latest release, “Nobody’s Bride” affords the sort of role that he appears in to best advantage, and the action throughout is kept going at a good pace, all of which helps to make this one satisfactory entertainment for those who like crook melodrama.

The plot, though complicated, contains some situations that are not new, but the speed with which the action is developed holds the interest. The idea that a woman, living alone, takes a starving man to her apartment and allows him to make his home there may cause some comment, especially as one or two titles bring this point out strongly. These could be eliminated with good results as could a few, presumably spoken by one of the gang of crooks that may be objected to by a high class clientele.

The producers have seen fit to have a death-bed scene in the finale with the big hearted “other woman” lying shot and the hero and heroine, sad, but to tgether at last, walking out of the darkened room, and this tends to add an unnecessarily gruesome touch at the finish. This is the first picture Herbert Blache has directed for Universal, and with the exception of this final shot, he has used the material offered to good advantage. It doesn’t look as though much money has been spent on the production.

Rawlinson will be liked in the role of Jimmy Nevin and Alice Lake gives a good performance as the kind hearted crook who befriends the starving boy, while Edna Murphy makes a pretty heiress.

Story: With his father’s death, financial ruin and the loss of his sweetheart, Doris, Jimmy Nevins is starving in a park. Mlle. Mary Darnay, supposedly a painter of miniatures, really one of a gang of crooks, takes him to her apartment and feeds him, allowing him to stay there. Doris’ uncle is forcing her into a marriage with Cyrus Hopkins. The crooks plan a haul of the wedding presents and Jimmy, unaware of the plot, is asked to drive the machine. Doris at the last moment refuses to go through with the wedding and slips out unseen, taking with her a suitcase that she has seen the new butler slip under a table and in which are the stolen gifts. Seeing Jimmy waiting in the machine, she begs him to drive her to a hiding place. Jimmy takes her to Mary’s flat. The gang finds the loot has been taken and go to the flat. They hold Doris for ransom, but after several complications, Mary allows Doris to escape, telling her she is doing it for Jimmy. The crooks are caught, but not before a bullet ends Mary’s life.

Will Please Rawlinson’s Followers Or Those Who Like Crook Meller

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors catering to people who like “crook” stories, and who will not mind an implausible plot, will undoubtedly be able to please them with “No-boby’s Bride.” The title isn’t particularly attractive but it will let them know it is a melodrama and you can play up the “crook” angle by using catchlines.
Tell them it is a fast-moving story with a supporting cast that includes Alice Lake, Edna Murphy, Harry Van Meter and Phillips Smalley.

You can arouse their interest by using catchlines like: “She was young, attractive, and in love. But she was ‘Nobody’s Bride.’ Come to the blank theater and see why.”
Good Oriental Atmosphere But Weak And Artificial Situations

Jack Holt in
"THE TIGER'S CLAW"
Paramount

And while the "Tiger's Claw" isn't a sheik tale, strictly speaking, it savors of the Oriental sufficiently to make it attractive from a standpoint of atmosphere, if for no other reason. And frankly, there isn't any other for not even the appearance of Jack Holt serves to make the picture interesting because of the artificiality of the theme. It may appeal to some folks but the majority are not interested in ancient mysticisms and care little whether the ancient Indian people had thugs in their time. The story doesn't suit Jack Holt, nor does he suit it.

The star has little to do but walk about in the usual costume of the American in India, and the greater part of the time he's on horseback or convalescing from an attack by a tiger, an attack by the natives, or as a result of being nearly drowned during the flood. Certainly Holt hasn't much variation in this and his admirers will undoubtedly be disappointed to see him more or less wasted on such material.

Director Henabery has tried to inject pictorial appeal probably in an effort to save what he realized to be a pretty weak story and his efforts at injecting dramatic suspense have not been very successful. The picture is rather good to look at but there are many dull moments in the maneuvers of the natives and their elaborately planned revenge on the white man.

Story: Sam Sandell, an American engineer in charge of the construction of a dam in India, marries the half caste Chameli who saved his life. Sam's former sweetheart, Harriet, follows and Chameli, though jealous over the white girl, plans with the natives, who also have a grudge against Sandell, to kill him. Chameli's mother warns Sandell who finds Chameli with her native lover, the latter shooting Chameli by mistake during the quarrel that follows. How the natives blow up the dam and Sandell and Harriet are saved for each other, completes it.

May Get Over With Star's Following But They'll Be Disappointed

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You will have to trust to them being satisfied with the Oriental atmosphere in this one and if you happen to know that this will not appeal to them, there isn't very much you can do about Jack Holt's latest. It might possibly get by with the star's following but even they will be disappointed with what he is asked to do in "The Tiger's Claw."

Undoubtedly the title promises a much more actionful picture than it really is but if you want to get them in on the strength of the title, it should not be hard. Where exhibitors cater to regular patronage and they have been successful in the past with pictures dealing with such improbable but fairly colorful stories it might be well to let them see this one. Of course the star's admirers will probably want to see it anyway.

AS A WHOLE..... Would be a much more attractive offering if there weren't so many like it of late

STORY....... Familiar revolutionary business but undoubtedly will go first rate with a certain class

DIRECTION..... Gets off to very slow start and drags ending but cutting would help this; otherwise satisfactory

PHOTOGRAPHY ................ Very good
LIGHTINGS .................... Good

PLAYERS..... An A1 cast with the exception of Alice Lake who isn't quite the right type; good work is done by Robert McKim, Gaston Glass, Joseph Dowling, Noah Beery and others less important

EXTERIORS ................. Pretty to look at INTERIORS .................... Well suited
DETAIL ........................ Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Son of governor joins revolutionists but their plans are thwarted for a while by a clever trickster who has the governor in his power

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 7,200 feet

Eternal triangle themes, Northwest Mounted Police stories and lumber camp plots have side-stepped for the present to allow a number of mythical kingdom revolutionary films to come to the fore. Among them is B. F. Zeidman's production "The Spider and the Rose," a first rate entertainment of its kind and probably a sure-fire attraction for a certain class of patronage,—those who like the serial sort of atmosphere contained in it, the fights, action and villain-over-the-cliff suspense that comes with the climax. All this goes big with the regulation "fan" crowd. For them the picture is a good number.

For those who are fussy about their picture entertainment, want something new all the time and are annoyed with repetitious themes, the picture will not be likely to meet with a favorable reception. Gerald Duffy's story is not unique in any sense but director McDermott has supplied a suitable production, pleasant atmosphere and a good cast, all of which helps to make it interesting. But McDermott would have made a much better job of it if he had used about six reels to tell the story instead of over seven. The action needs speeding up at the opening and at the close. The start is much too slow and the climax is draggy.

Of course there is an obvious attempt to keep building up suspense and toward the finish it is very much after the fashion of a serial, with first villain Mendoza holding the winning hand and then hero. They take turns at this until finally the ever popular finish for a villain carries Mendoza over the cliff. But there are thrills in all this for the right audience.

Alice Lake, as the heroine, is not the best type and she does not appear to good advantage in such a role. Gaston Glass is a splendid hero and of course Robert McKim is at his best as the villainous Mendoza.

Story: Paula, sweetheart of Don Marcello, who has pledged himself to the revolutionists seeking freedom from the tyrannical moves of Mendoza, who influences the real ruler, Don Marcello's father, is double crossed by Mendoza. Don's comrades are arrested. Don is thrown into the sea by Mendoza's men but is saved. He rushes to the rescue of his comrades and returns in time to find Mendoza in his father's place and about to be married to Paula. How Don is thrown into prison but later is the cause of Mendoza's death furnishes some good excitement in the climax.

Will Do First Rate For The Regular "Fan" Audience

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

With "The Spider and the Rose" it all depends upon your particular clientele. It's up to the exhibitor to decide if he has the right crowd for it. If he has, the picture should go over very well and they'll be thoroughly satisfied with what it has to offer. On the other hand where they are critical and you have regular patronage to deal with, it isn't likely it will do so well.

Of course there is a cast with many good names to use and if it is only a matter of getting them in, the title with your exploitation of the picture, should easily do it. Use the names of Gaston Glass, Robert McKim and Noah Beery particularly to get your crowd interested and catchlines will give an idea of the story if you want them to have an idea of what it is all about.

CHARACTER OF STORY . . . . Sea captain finds man who stole his wife after years of searching and is in time to save his daughter from native chief

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION . . . 6,333 feet

South Sea Island stories are steadily gaining in popularity, at least with producers. There have been quite a few of them released in the past few months, with R. A. Walsh's "Lost and Found" the latest. Carey Wilson's theme is one of the more familiar tropical island formulas in which the usual elements are found. There is a variety of incident that includes action, thrills, revenge, torture, and of course, romance.

With this material R. A. Walsh has made a picture that will appeal for its pictorial beauty and for those who don't object to a very fictitious plot, it will probably prove a satisfying entertainment. But there is considerable about the situations contained in "Lost and Found" that is highly fictitious and consequently it has not been possible to make them convincing. Paul Bern, who wrote the scenario, provided for plenty of colorful island sequences that will undoubtedly prove interesting but the long episode at the close in which two island tribes go into battle are rather tedious in that the conflict is mostly a matter of helter skelter action with shots of the native hordes surging in one direction with the opposing tribe heading off the attack. To be sure Walsh has used many extras and the mob scenes are well handled but the sequence is too long drawn out.

The climax of the picture might be considerably shortened to speed up the ending. The shots of grass huts on fire are interesting and the coloring in these views adds to the attractiveness of them. The cameraman have secured many splendid shots of the shore and the sea that are particularly beautiful.

The action rests with House Peters, the sea captain who is searching for his wife, Faulke, a white trader who stole her, and Waki, a native chief who is ready to trade a pearl for Faulke's permission to take the woman's daughter, Lorna. There is also Tommy Warren, a white man, who is sentenced to listen to the monotonous native drums until mad, because of his love for Lorna. Through this complex there is fighting, plotting and enough intrigue to supply excitement of the typical order but in between the bits of action there are dull stretches that make themselves felt. There are one or two occasions when the meller is slightly lurid, such, for instance, as the torture of Faulke and the death of Waki. There is also more or less definite sex appeal in the desire of Waki for the white girl, Lorna.

May Satisfy The Average Crowd But Cutting Would Greatly Improve It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

In spite of a story that doesn't reach any high spots for its dramatic value or for its originality, there is a certain amount of audience appeal in "Lost and Found" that will make it a very desirable number for certain exhibitors. But they will have to know that it will go with their patrons. And this depends upon the class they cater to. In the picture there is a good variety of elements and although not outstanding in any particular one, it does boast of exceptional pictorial value.

This is your big talking point in the exploitation of it. Play up the tropical island atmosphere, use stills showing some of the very pretty shots obtained, show them Pauline Starke as the white girl reared as a native and a trailer of the fight between House Peters and George Siegmann should give them an idea of the action.

The artistry of "The Tents of Allah" is comparable to the pictorial perfection of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood."

Massive walls and towers, graceful mosques and minarets; exotic Morocco with all its lure and bizarre beauty. The extravagant luxury of the Sultan's palace; the slinking squalor of low-arched, water front cafes. Cloud-banked skies and wind-swept wastes. Life with the wandering tribes of desert bandits, plunderers of caravans.

A tale of wild adventure and intrigue. Ferocious fighting, passionate romance, powerful drama, glorious entertainment.

Beautiful, stirring and distinctly different.

"The Tents of Allah" boasts of Monte Blue in a characterization which rivals his marvellous Danto ton in D. W Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm"; Mary Alden in her greatest mother role, different and romantic.

It presents a supporting cast of tremendous dramatic talent:—
Mary Thurman, Macey Harlam, Sally Crute, Frank Currier, Charles Lane, Martin Faust and others.

It reveals the adventures and rodesert bandit who plundered caravans for riches but who had

CHARACTER OF STORY......A Kentucky feud which is finally broken through a young girl's love for an engineer who forces law in the gap

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION........5,695 feet

Even before Famous Players made the first production of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," back in 1916, with Charlotte Walker as June Tolliver, the Kentucky feudal business had already served as the nucleus of several screen stories, even to the extent that a review of the picture at that time mentioned the fact that the material was already rather hackneyed. However, in spite of the triteness of the material, the John Fox novel has been given an attractive production by Charles Maigne and serves as a suitable vehicle for Mary Miles Minter although she is much more pleasing as the frightened mountain girl than she is after hero John Hale sends her away to school.

While Maigne has given the story a good production in the sense of making the picture good to look at, he has not developed the dramatic possibilities of the situations to any great extent. The only really important dramatic moment is the capture of Rufe Tolliver and when he is shot by one of his own clan rather than be hung according to law. And even in this instance there is no accumulated suspense. In this latest presentation the director has played up the romantic element of the story rather than the dramatic, which probably is a little more effective since the latter quality is of such a familiar order. At any rate the romance is delightfully handled and should serve to give the picture a satisfactory audience appeal.

The pictorial value of the feature is of a high standard and the picture is good to look at at all times.
There are numerous splendid shots of the mountain country and the little shack of the Tollivers with the big windmill at the side it is a very beautiful view.
The photography is first class.

The star will please her admirers as June but more so in the early reels than when she returns from school wearing the regulation 1923 outfit. Miss Minter has a splendid supporting company which includes that sterling performer Ernest Torrence who is scoring a personal triumph in "The Covered Wagon," Antonio Moreno who is a well suited hero and Cullen Tate as Dave Tolliver.

Story: June Tolliver, daughter of "Devil" Judd, meets John Hale an engineer, who is the first to start law and order in the gap, long rife with a feud between two clans, the Falins and the Tollivers. How Hale becomes an important factor in the feud and with June, with whom he is in love, is the cause of its abandonment, completes the story.

The Majority Will Undoubtedly Be Satisfied With This
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" offers a satisfactory average entertainment that will please enough people to get it over without any great trouble. You have pictorial appeal to talk about, a good title to work with and the name of the star will prove an attraction if she is popular with your folks.

It would be well to revive the song of the same name in your musical accompaniment. The title of the picture should be familiar and in case they may have forgotten or didn't see the first Famous Players' "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" they might be particularly interested in seeing an adaptation of the famous novel.
Mystery Drama That Confuses More Than It Mystifies

AS A WHOLE ....... Poorly made picture of obviously foreign origin despite the appearance of two American players.

STORY ...... Mystery drama in which all the time is spent in accumulating suspense but situations are never adequately explained.

DIRECTION ...... Ordinary; had fair material but constructed picture badly and created too much mystery.

LIGHTINGS .......................... Fair

PLAYERS ...... Wyndham Standing and Marguerite Marsh handicapped by material and surroundings; others apparently European players.

EXTERIORS .................. Probably Holland
INTERIORS .......................... Adequate

DETAIL .......................... Poor
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Woman's mysterious association with a pack of letters arouses husband's suspicion until she explains.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 5,000 feet

This latest Producers Security Corp. offering, produced by Hollandia Films, is considerably below the standard of present day entertainment and it is doubtful if it will carry any definite appeal, even sufficient to get it over with the less critical. The trouble is very faulty direction and it is surprising that a director who has made pictures in this country and should be aware of the standard expected, should turn out as poorly constructed an offering as "The Lion's Mouse."

The story is a mystery drama in which an envelope containing written matter is the object about which the suspense is built. But it is in connection with the suspense that Apfel seems to have lost all trace of a continuity and just kept on adding incidents which tend to confuse more than mystify and the spectator is never given a satisfactory explanation of what occurs, especially in regard to the envelope and its contents. The essential of a good mystery drama is to have a foundation for the mystery and then to build toward a climax in which the preceding events are fully explained. Such is not the case here. The development has a tendency to increase confusion rather than suspense.

Very likely the incoherence of the picture could be greatly eradicated by a more careful editing and some new sub-titles, especially in the latter reels. It is rather unfortunate that the picture loses force in this way; because the material is fairly good of its kind and might readily have served to a better purpose. There are instances where the anti-climaxes supply real enough thrills such, for instance, as that in which the young girl risks her life to retrieve the famous pearls, the property of the woman who befriended her.

Wyndham Standing, whose ability is worthier of better material, is handicapped in the role of the suspicious husband and Marguerite Marsh, although she does good work, fails to make any marked impression. Mary Odette and Rex Davis are not known in this country.

Story: Roger Sands becomes jealous of Justin O'Riley who possesses certain papers which Beverly Sands is anxious to obtain. Beverly is assisted by Clo Riley, a girl she has befriended. During the efforts of Beverly and Clo to get the papers, Beverly's pearls disappear and once more Sands suspects O'Riley. Later Sands finds the coveted papers in his wife's possession and returns them to O'Riley. Eventually Beverly explains—but this is gleaned chiefly from the synopsis—that she was protecting her brother from blackmailers.

Too Incoherent To Be Entertaining But New Titles Might Help

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Unless they can do something to relieve the incoherence of this story, it will be difficult to try and interest them in it because it would hardly do to make any sort of promises. You could not play it up as a successful mystery drama nor is there any other angle of the picture sufficiently strong for you to talk about.

But the picture can be improved without any great trouble. In fact the synopsis as given out by Hodkinson contains, in its first paragraph, a more definite explanation of the mystery than the sub-titles, so it should be an easy matter to inject one or two new, or additional titles, to clarify the ending. Of the players you might mention Wyndham Standing and Marguerite Marsh. The title of the picture might be used to fair advantage with catchlines.
Self-Sacrifice Theme Rather Extreme But With Good Moments

Mastodon Films—State Rights
DIRECTOR .................. Edgar Lewis
AUTHOR ...................... Roy Middleton
SCENARIO BY .............. Roy Middleton
CAMERAMAN ................. Edward C. Earle

STORY........ Self sacrifice in the extreme; contains effective heart interest at times DIRECTION .... Uses material to good advantage and supplies a rather good ending
PHOTOGRAPHY .............. All right
LIGHTINGS .................. Good
PLAYERS ........ James Kirkwood very capable: Carleton Brickert fair villain; Doris Kenyon an adequate heroine; others Robert Edeson, Mary Carr, Edmund Breese and Russell Griffin, a pleasant youngsters
EXTERIORS .................. Suitable
INTERIORS ................. All right
DETAIL ........ Ample; titles too flowery at times
CHARACTER OF STORY..... Man assumes guilt of half-brother who later refuses to clear his name

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 5,000 feet

Self-sacrifice themes have always held a certain popularity with the picture-going public so they will probably be fairly well satisfied with this latest Mastodon release, "You Are Guilty," from a story by Roy Middleton, with James Kirkwood playing the most important role, that of a man who assumes the guilt of a theft committed by his half-brother in order that his mother's heart will not be broken.

Of course there is much that is unconvincing about self-sacrifice situations especially when they are carried to the extent that they are in this. It is barely possible that any man would be hero enough to give up his honor to save another as obviously worthless as the one in this instance and it is not apparent that the mother's love for her own son was any greater than that for her step-son, at least sufficiently so to make a difference which one committed the theft.

There is considerable that is not explained in the course of the story such as, for instance, the fact that the hero's sweetheart sometime later discovers a difference in the figures indicating that the fraud was not hero's work. It is also not explained why the mother did not clear the step-son's name in the eyes of the law since she knew he was not guilty, even though her own son was the guilty party. It would have been a simple matter for hero's sweetheart, now the owner of the business in which the theft was committed, to also take care of the guilty son.

Overlooking the inconsistencies of the plot, Director Lewis has managed to sustain the interest satisfactorily and the use of the flash-back makes a first rate development in this case. And the material is generally used to the best advantage with a first rate heart interest in connection with the introduction of the little son of hero's former sweetheart who is the means of hero's resolve to win back his place in the world.

James Kirkwood can always be relied upon to put over a role such as this and he does good work at all times. He is not always properly lighted, especially for close-ups. Doris Kenyon is adequate although she might have greatly improved her appearance by a more becoming hairdress. Mary Carr is the mother and others are Robert Edeson, Russell Griffin, Edmund Breese, Carleton Brickert and William Riley Hatch.

Story: Stephen Martin assumes the guilt of a theft committed by a half-brother Jos. Grantwood who promises to clear the former's name in a year. How Martin is double-crossed, loses his sweetheart and becomes a wanderer is followed by the eventual clearing of his name and a reunion with the girl, now a widow.

Should Go Over Well Enough Where You Have The Right Audience For It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can probably satisfy the average audience with "You Are Guilty" since the situations contain a certain amount of audience appeal that draws very well with the usual "fan" crowd. They are enthused by the noble hero who sacrifices himself to save his mother from a broken heart. You can always rely upon this twist to gain the sympathy of a typical audience and this should prove no exception.

Should you cater to a critical clientele, the job will not be so easy. In that event it would be well to see the picture and decide for yourself whether to show it and if so, how it would be best to get them interested. Use the names of the players such as James Kirkwood, Mary Carr and Doris Kenyon.
Short Stuff

“Kick Out”—Jack White—Educational

Type of production .......................... 2 reel comedy

This first reel of this Educational comedy which has been directed by Del Lord under the supervision of Jack White, is not particularly mirth-inducing, but with the beginning of the second the fun becomes lively, due mostly to the animal stuff injected. The cast includes Lige Conley, Otto Fries, Kewpie Morgan and Lillian Hackett, and the story deals with the troubles of a would-be scenario writer, who, friendless and alone, after the moving men take his furniture away, tries in every possible way to get past the gate man and into the studio of the Hokum Film Co. without an official pass. He finally does get in and from that time on trouble starts for the studio in general and every director in particular. He gets into a set where they are using lions and lets them out accidentally. The lions are hungry and mess things up generally, adding many laughs to the picture.

“The Extra Seven”—Range Rider—Pathe

Type of production .......................... 2 reel western

There is plenty of action in this two reeler and sufficient suspense to keep your folks interested until the finish. It is a regulation western with a couple of crooked card players, and a cowpuncher hero but the direction is good and the story moves at a fast pace. Leo Maloney, the star, has written and directed the film in connection with Ford Beebe. Pauline Curley is the girl, and Bud Osborne the bad man. Polly, whose mother owns the ranch is in love with a “puncher,” but she accuses him of encouraging her brother to gamble. A card game is staged by a crooked player who, being “called” by Maloney for having a crooked deck, knocks the brother out and blames it on Maloney who has left after quarrelling with his girl. A final chase and some exciting action enable the hero to clear himself and condemn the cheat.

“Under Secret Orders”—Adventures of Yorke Norroy—Universal

Type of production .......................... 2 reel detective story

This is the second story in the new series of the “Adventures of Yorke Norroy,” being made by Universal, and starring Roy Stewart. Each of the episodes is complete in two reels and has no connection with any other story in the series. Those who like detective stories involving the capture of papers of international value, etc. will find them good entertainment. This one is rather better than the first, the action taking place in New York instead of, as in the preceding story, in Paris. Robert Gordon, a courier for the U. S. Dept. of State, is bringing some important papers over from Europe. On board ship one night he chases some men who have attacked a woman in the next cabin. When he reports at Washington, his papers are missing. His sweetheart appeals to Yorke Norroy, former member of the Secret Service for help. How he unravels the mystery and clears Gordon, to say nothing of rounding up the thieves and obtaining the missing papers comprises the balance of the action.

Pathe Review No. 13—Pathe

Type of production .......................... 1 reel magazine

A novelty is introduced in this issue of Pathe’s Review under the title of “From Nothing To—.” This consists of complete pictures being evolved from chaotic masses. This particular “trick” has not been seen before and it is interesting to watch. Another interesting subject shows the masks and costumes employed by the ancient Alaskan and Northern Indians in driving away sea devils and bringing good luck to the fishermen. The colored bit is particularly beautiful, showing scenes in Normandy in blossom time.

Held At $4,500,000

That's Price Set on L. A. Metropolis by Famous Players—Seven Story Addition Planned

Famous Players and Sid Grauman are holding the selling price of the Metropolis theater in Los Angeles at $4,500,000. A. C. Blumenthal, prominent coast real estate operator, has been in New York some days conferring with the finance committee of Famous Players relative to the sale of the house.

It seems quite likely that the deal will go through and that Famous and Grauman will relinquish control of the ownership but, as pointed out yesterday, retaining a 25-year lease at the same time. The new owners plan to add seven stories to the present building, for office use.

Tervilliger, who has just completed “Wife in Name Only,” for Pyramid, interested with McKay and Tervilliger is Henry W. Morehouse, owner of the Davenport Hotel in Stamford. At a dinner given in Stamford last week, at which were present about 30 prominent residents, the plans of the company were explained. The backers feel that the exteriors available in and around Stamford include everything that can be found in Hollywood. They point to the fact that Famous Players, Cosmopolitan and other companies have sent units there to secure outdoor stuff and feel that the locality is a suitable one in which to construct a plant. Space will be leased to outsiders.

In the Courts

In the suit of Jewel Carmen against Fox Film and the William Fox Vaudeville Co. for $42,500 damages on the ground that because of wrongful interference by the defendants the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corp. refused to carry out a contract with her by which she was engaged to appear for two years in films, the Appellate Division has granted a motion by the plaintiff to strike out the defences. The higher court reversed a decision of the lower court which denied the application.

The decision means that unless the defendants can frame another answer which the courts will hold to be sufficient, the plaintiff will be in position to ask for judgment. The defences included were that Miss Carmen was of legal age when she made the Fox contract and was not an infant, as she asserted, and for that reason the Fox people were justified in warning the Keeney corporation that it might be the subject of legal proceedings if the contract were carried out. As a result of the action of the Fox people the contract was not carried out, after Fox had agreed to be responsible for any damage the Keeney corporation might sustain.

Another defence which the Appellate Division holds inadequate is that the Fox people acted without malice on the advice of their counsel and in the honest belief that its contract with Miss Carmen was valid. A third defense stricken out is that in an injunction suit brought by Miss Carmen in the Federal Court against Fox she won in the lower court but the Circuit Court of Appeals decided she was not entitled to relief in a court of equity by reason of her repudiation of her contracts with the defendants, and the United States Supreme Court upheld this decision.

The Appellate Division decides that the Federal court decision in the injunction suit does not apply in the State court action at law for damages.

"The Leopardess"—F. P. L.

AMERICAN—There is a good storm scene, a large number of the regulation pines, and the usual amount of South Sea atmosphere seen at the Strand. Alice Brady does as well as could be expected.

EVENING JOURNAL—Henry Kolker describes a good deal of action, but it is not quite the same as some rather faire dramatic moments. Neither Miss Brady or Miss Hawn are very good in the play. Miss Brady is the usual half-case (played by Miss Brady), the millionaire American hunter, the clever lynx dancer, in the half-case performs a great deal of stunts to all concerned, especially by Miss Brady and a sure-enough leopard that broke through a plate glass window in time to kill the villain.

MAIL—* * * There is the usual.Anything can be photographed in that country and caught in several other recent pictures. The story is improbable and uninteresting, and yet because of the woman-taking idea may "get over," so to speak.

EVENING TELEGRAPH—Alice Brady deserves better material than this. She makes the best out of what there is about it. Montague Love is convincing and his handling of the situation, "I love you," he says.

POST—* * * They (the cast) do the best they can to make the picture effective. There are some good settings, especially a storm scene with bending palms.

THEATRE WORLD—"The Leopardess"—The role of Tiare, suits Miss Brady exceedingly. She puts into her performance all the necessary fire and dash, tempered by her exceptional acting ability as an actress.

TRIBUNE—In "The Leopardess," at the Rialto, Alice Brady is seen to advantage; never has she looked more attractive on the screen than she does in this tale of the tropics. Nor has Montague Love, her leading man, often had a part better suited to his talents. * * * It is a piece of hack work, not badly done, but commendable only because it shows us Miss Brady looking prettier than she has hitherto looked on the screen.

"The Little Church Around the Corner."—Warners—Strand

AMERICAN—Frankly, we didn't care for "The Little Church Around the Corner." The performance at the Strand is the same. Mainly it is because it is so perfectly one of those complete efforts that are a bit of a mistake."

GLOBE—"The Little Church Around the Corner," an obvious old-fashioned story, has been played in a decidedly new-fashioned way. The first part of the picture is acted almost entirely by children, and the historical scenes by the younger members of the cast. * * * There is nothing more marvellous.

MAIL—* * * Miss Grady is an accomplished actress.

EVENING TELEGRAPH—David Kenny is a great crowd with that special skill or essential to a proper portrayal of the role, and Pauline Starke distinguishes herself as the dumb girl with the most touching piece of work we have seen on the screen in some time. Claire Winston and Herbert Roswell are a good picture, even though the theme is somewhat hackneyed.

POST—It is full of sentiment and "situations" which are for the most part rather effective for the masses.

SUN—Whether you will be deeply stirred by this picture depends primarily on your religious beliefs. No one, however, regardless of his or her faith, can fail to be excited by the very brilliant melodrama in "The Little Church Around the Corner." The chord of the melodrama is at least honest and is never overdone or rolling with the current.

EVEING TELEGRAPH—* * * filled with thrilling moments and a pretty theme.

TRIBUNE—"The Little Church Around the Corner," shown this week at the Strand, is well acted but fails to save an otherwise dull picture into its interior sets. The cast of the picture could not be better; they make it a good picture, one well worth seeing.

WORLD—A little soap for the laboring classes now and then will do motion pictures no harm. It can only be an advantage to those who knows that they are better than the up-and-coming Warners. * * *

There is enough sentiment and a large enough supply melodramas" in it to satisfy the gullibility of audiences almost anywhere.

Renovations First

Selig plans to actively re-enter the film distribution field with the release of his next pictures. SELIG PRODUCTIONS, the company will be headed by Myron Selznick. A few days ago, the company announced that it would establish a new, independent company that will be known as Selig Productions, Inc., and that it would be established by Myron Selznick and the company's five distributors.

Several deals with out-of-town distributors are reported under way. Settlements have been reached with interested parties relative to "Rupert Henty's" and "The Common Men," but members of the reorganization committee feel that satisfactory arrangements will be made with the various financial interests so that the pictures will go through Selig exchanges as planned.

The reissues already selected include:

Expect Musicians Strike

The management of Broadwayaters is understood to be busy engaging musicians to take the place of the orchestras that are expected to walk out later in the week.

Wall Street

Mr. Robert J. Flaherty was in New York the other day to attend a meeting of the Man from Glengarry and Winner Take All, based on the Glengarry Schoolboys and The Apollos. Flaherty has been arranging for the sale of Samoa, where he has made some material for Famous Players. Lloyd Griscom, former ambassador to Japan, will be the toastmaster.

Los Angeles—Harry Beaumont has been placed under a long term contract by Warner Brothers, following the completion of Main Street. Mr. Beaumont's first picture under the new contract is The Gold Digger.

5 Film Franchise

New Plan of Distribution Adopted by Principal Pictures Via State Rights Exchanges

Ivan Lesser announced yesterday that Principal intends selling its next five pictures under a franchise arrangement to state right exchanges. The pictures will include, "The Spider and the Rose," which Lesser has taken over from Bennie Zeidman; "East Side, West Side," "Temporary Marriage," "The Man From Ten Strike" and "Bright Lights of Broadway." The latter will be made by Zeidman from a scenario by Edmund Goulding. The cast will probably include Tom Moore, Doris Kenyon and George Fawcett.

Eight Serials from Universal

Universal has reorganized its serial policy and production staff on the coast. Eight are planned for next year. These will include "The Eagle's Talons," "Daniel Boone," "The Steel Rail," "The Last Submarine," "By Right of Conquest," "The Fast Express," "Beasts of Paradise" and "Hidden Gold." "Daniel Boone" and "By Right of Conquest" are of an historical nature.

12 To Goldwyn

Long-Pending Deal With Distinctive Now Closed—Incorporates Distributors' Output to About 50

The long-pending deal between Arthur S. Friend of Distinctive Prod. and F. J. Godol of Goldwyn was closed yesterday. The distributor acquires 12 more pictures under the contract.

Negotiations were under way for some time. It was reported first in these columns that the transaction had been practically consummated. This was on March 15. It was then stated that Farnum's agreement with Distinctive will make 12 pictures for Goldwyn distribution. The titles of some of these have been announced. The first was "Backbone," then "The Ragged Edge," "Steadfast Heart" and "Two Can Play" which Harmon Weight will direct with Alfreed Lunt and Muni Patten starring. Other stories controlled by Distinctive are "Salome of the Tenements," by Anzia Yezeska; "The Great Gatsby," "The Weavers," "The Adopted Father," "The Inheritors" and "Hearts and Fists."

Goldwyn expects to release about 12 Cosmopolitan Prod. next season. From its own organization, it will probably get about 26. This, together with the Distinctive dozen will bring the total for next season to about 50.

New York Unit for M. P. T. O.

The M. P. T. O. announced yesterday that a Greater New York division had been formed for affiliation with the national organization. The statement was made that although many of the members belonged to the T. O. C. C. they had decided to affiliate with the national body because they desired the advantages of such an organization.

Farnum To Truaut?

Deal Reported Settled—Dolores Cassinelli May Be Added to the Cast.

Los Angeles—It is reported that William Farnum's independently made pictures will be distributed through Truaut Prod. Mr. H. Hoffman is said to have closed the deal before leaving for the East. Faruaut has completed his contract with Fox.

Truaut product is distributed via state right exchanges on a franchise basis. Hoffman is in New York today from the coast.

It was reported yesterday that Hoffman had made a deal for a series of Dolores Cassinelli pictures.
Pegler Goes To Springfield

Jack Pegler, recently exploitation representative in Boston for Associated First National, has left for Springfield, Mass., where he will manage the Capital and Bijou theaters. Abe Goodside is the owner.

"Grumpy" is a perfect gem of photoplay humor. It should not fail to please anyone. Notable for its charm. Artistically produced.

—NEW YORK CALL.

Theodore Roberts excels even his famous Uncle Josh of "The Old Homestead." This is the finest piece of acting Mr. Roberts has done during his long and brilliant career. "Grumpy" is the type motion picture fans love. Mystery, thrills, suspense, and charming love story.

—NEW YORK JOURNAL OF COMMERCE.

"Grumpy" is one of the most delightful of all Theodore Roberts' screen characters and is played with his usual gusto. Tasteful, dignified, entirely true to life. Players all accomplished, charming people.

—NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

"Grumpy" reveals the fact that the role which brought Cyril Maude fame and money on the stage can be even better played by an accomplished character actor like Theodore Roberts. He is a joy to watch.

—NEW YORK AMERICAN.

The character of "Grumpy" fits Theodore Roberts like an undersized rubber glove. Although this sterling actor has done some mighty fine things, "Grumpy" stands out among his other roles like the Woolworth Building on a desert. Heartily enjoyable entertainment.

"The Queen of Sin"—Ben Blumenthal—Lyric

AMERICAN—If you like to see mountains blow up, tempests blow down, and the clouds curl upward, you will like to see the Continental film, "Queen of Sin." There is a hectic love story of the present day, but the flashbacks to the Biblical era are by far the most interesting phase of the production.

DAILY NEWS—It succeeds neither as a photoplay nor as a spectacle. It is true that the spectacle scenes are gigantic, but they are tedious. However, those who like huge temple sets, etc., whether they mean something dramatically in the story or not, and those who like to see the landlips go up in chunks, will find at least that, provided they can sit through what goes before.

EVENING JOURNAL—Certain European pictures have accustomed one to look forward to seeing grandeur and lavishness of invention. The chances are that the makers of "The Queen of Sin" thought their efforts were thunderously impressive and artistically successful. They are neither. The settings have only bulk and no beauty. The photography is conventional and the direction uninspired.

EVENING WORLD—They don't go in for screen drama over there as we know it here, and the results as shown in "The Queen of Sin" are rather pathetic so far as the acting is concerned. In fact, the acting struck us as many, many weak links binding together some of the finest film spectacles we ever beheld.

GLOBE—In the opinion of this writer it is such an inexpertly produced, badly acted, and generally dull picture as to hardly merit critical attention.

MAIL—Two spectacles are shown. These are stupendous, indeed. You will marvel at the hugeness of the sets given the queen and her attendants at the destruction of Sodom. It is a city of marvelous beauty, as designed by the German artists, is destroyed by fire, brimstone, lightning and deluge. The picture is marred by a jerkyness in the action and an overwhelming number of captions probably made necessary in cutting down the length.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—With respect to the spectacular part of the performance, there is nothing left to be desired. Huge sets were erected, one of them surpassing even David Wark Griffith's scenic effects in "Intolerance," and throughout, whenever called for, great quantities of extras melt about in impressive fashion.

POINT—Combined with it were fragments, and they were very fragmentary, of a gigantic spectacle called. * * *

The spectacular parts of the film are mildly interesting, although David Wark Griffith did a far better job years ago in "Intolerance." The acting is poor, judged by American standards.

SUN—Some of the pageantry and spectacle was really imposing and beautiful. Those gorgeous flashes didn't come quite enough, however. The picture carried a dull story even when it shifted to those quaint old days.

TELEGRAM—* * * from a spectacular point is perhaps the best cinema that has reached this country from Europe.

TIMES—* * a lot of money has been lavished on this picture by a director who hoped to make this Biblical theme a success. * * * There are some crowd scenes that elicited applause.

TRIBUNE—It is less effective than "Intolerance," although in the two vision scenes there are some unusually beautiful shots, and it has an immense amount of mob-milieu.

WORLD—* * * entirely worthless as drama, with, ah! toward the end a surprisingly magnificent flash of spectacle photography. It is sad to contemplate the many who will go to see the picture and miss these fine views.

Men Who Know

Si Griever of Griever Productions, Chicago, screened the same subjects and said, "Your terms are fair—I'll take the twelve, but rush the first picture I want to start immediate release." And in two weeks he was working five prints in Northern Illinois and Indiana.

Louis Hyman of All Star Feature Distributors, San Francisco and Los Angeles, took eighteen seconds by a stop watch after screening these first four features to say "yes" and wrote out his deposit check for California, Arizona and Nevada.

Harry Lande of the Quality Films, Pittsburgh, and Lande Film Distributing Co., Cleveland and Cincinnati, said, "I wish you had fifty-two instead of twelve, I would take them all," and signed his contract for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky, and he is releasing them one every two weeks.

David Mundstuk of the Exclusive Film Co., Detroit, Mich., said, "There is more meat, story and action in these five reel productions than is usually found in the so-called $100,000 specials. The only difference is you have not got big ball room sets," and his signature to a contract for the entire twelve followed his remark.

Otto Gaden and John J. Georgen of the Midwest Releasing Co., Omaha, Nebraska, said, "We have been holding our bank roll until something worth while came along—you sure have got it and we want it," and they have started to do a land office business.

Frank J. Warren of the Standard Film Co., Kansas City, Mo., said, "I have seen too many punk westerns so you have got to screen the first four of this series for me." We did—and he bought.

Watch this list grow and in the meantime let us see who the wise ones are going to be in Boston, Minneapolis, Atlanta and Dallas.

Paramount Exploiter

Paramount exploiters have been assigned to all of the five southern exchanges of Famous Players including the Southern Enterprise office at Oklahoma City.

Harry C. Swift, has been transferred from Cincinnati to New Orleans, Alex W. Hicks has been sent to Charlotte, Jack Hays, to Dallas, and George W. Gabriell to Oklahoma City. The vacancy in Cincinnati caused by the transfer of Swift has been filled by Ralph (Buster) Thayer, formerly manager of the Century, Baltimore.

Paramount will open a new exchange at Sourabaya, Java. Donald H. Rodrigues has been appointed general manager in this territory.

A Friendly Split
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Hollywood—It is said that there has been a friendly disagreement between the De Mille brothers on reading new stories. Almost 24 hours after William De Mille closed his reading department, Cecil announced that he would double his reading force.

Reports New Talking Film
The Herald states that Elia C. Rie is an electrical engineer who has received a patent grant covering talking motion pictures. The claim is advanced for him that this gives priority for his invention, called by him the "audioscope," in devices which depend upon the recording of sound on a strip of film.
Last Metro Series

M. H. Hoffman of Tiffany and Stuart Prod., returned from the last yesterday where he closed several deals on behalf of Truitt. He stated that when Mac Murray completes his contract with Metro about the end of the year, he will picture themselves released through independent exchanges.

Hoffman is figuring on 12 or 16 pictures a year. He confirmed the report published in THE FILM DAILY yesterday that he would make a series of Dolores Cassinelli pictures, probably four a year. The Hammerstein will appear in the A. B. from the Ace Carlosi—Rockland West combination, Truitt will have three or four. Hoffman would not discuss the reported deal with William Farnum.

He did, however, divulge some details of the findings of his releasing plans. In those territories where he feels he can strike advantageous deals with the distributors, he will make new arrangements with exhibitors, direct. Hoffman has found that if he is selective, his first-runs are the territories where he will create the most prestige and demand to secure subsequent runs.

Speakers at A. M. P. A.

B. P. Schulberg, of Preferred Pictures, was the chief speaker at the A. M. P. A. yesterday. He was also elected a member of the organization. Schulberg stood at the head of the manner in which the advertisers had nullified the efforts made to publicize and exploit productions of sex appeal, adding that during the past few months there had been further developments along this line, which in his belief was not advantageous to the industry, and suggested that this be taken up by the advertisers with their employers.

Prof. J. M. Lee, superintendent of the Department of Journalism of the New York University, also spoke as the editor of THE FILM DAILY who dwelt upon production activities with consequence in the result and concluded his news with a statement:

Among the visitors were Geo. E. Redman, managing director of Arkansas Film, and H. Williams, all of London, along with Lewis Haynes and Eric Stacey, assistant directors of the same organization, and E. H. Kinsman, all of London.

Following their first success, "The Second Fiddle," comes the Film Guild's lavish production starring Glenn Hunter, "The Lap of Luxury." No actor for years has experienced the quick rise to box-office popularity like Glenn Hunter and his work in "The Lap of Luxury" will go a great way toward increasing his money making value. It's a Hodkinson Picture.—Advt.

Danforth Dead

Charles E. Danforth, vice-president and director of Loew's, Inc., died Tuesday night after an illness of nearly a year. Danforth was senior member of Charles E. M. P. T. O. Unit May Enter Field—Flood of Reports Along Broadway

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—It is unofficially reported that the Michigan M. P. T. O., which is generally considered the best organized exhibitor organization in the country, is about to enter distribution on its own.

Officials of the organization did not be reached for a statement.

There was a flood of reports along Broadway yesterday regarding the meeting scheduled for Wednesday in Chicago of a number of important exhibitors, members and non-members of the M. P. T. O. A. The meeting was called by the board of directors of Michigan to discuss means of adequately financing the national organization according to their telegrams. There were all sorts of reports in circulation relative to the reason for the meeting. Charles L. O'Reilly, was invited to attend but refused to do so because he feared to commit the state organization in a program, the details of which he was not familiar with.

Mich. To Distribute

Instead of attending the meeting, O'Reilly asked for more details by wire regarding the plan. In one quarter, it was said that he was asked not to attend the meeting by the T. O. C. C. Some believed the Chicago meeting was a move to bring the New York unit back into the national organization. Others thought it was a move against Sydney S. Cohen although Cohen stated the meeting was called with his knowledge.

O'Reilly stated the New York organization has been and is now willing to join a national organization that functioned actively and not merely as a "paper" organization. He said that advocates of a national body would find his unit ready to listen to reason providing the program was constructive.

There was a good deal said about the Greater New York division of the M. P. T. O. which Cohen announced yesterday. In circles not particularly friendly to Cohen, the claim was made that it was a bald attempt to organize New York State so that Cohen would be able to present 43 votes for a New York at the Chicago convention. Added to this was the statement from the same quarter, that despite assurances to the contrary, Cohen intruded running for the presidency again.

Cohen was non-committal so far as the presidency is concerned, but he did say that the New York unit

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

“Mighty Lak’ A Rose” In Omaha

Omaha—The Rialto used a music tie-up for its promotion recently. The Edison window and likewise Patton’s Music Shoppe were secured.

The stunt ran along the lines of a song competition, inasmuch as ‘Mighty Lak’ a Rose’ is an old timer, sung many years ago.

As a result the music stores sold more music and the Rialto sold more tickets.

Exploitation Novelties Inexpensive

St. Louis—Exploitation devices highly fruitful in results, yet small in expense, were put into effect in connection with the presentation of “Trifling Women” at the three Skouras theaters.

The novelty was a folder, sent through the mails. Above the space reserved for the address was the warning: “Watch out for Trifling Women.” On the back of this was the line: “Every wife in St. Louis must wait out for Trifling Women.”

A Caveman Stunt

Harford, Conn.—Jim Clancy, of the Princess and Russell Moon, Paramount exploiter, got the whole town in front of the theater through their out-door-hilarity for “Adam’s Rib.”

Two members of the Princess staff were put on the top of the theater in front of the big 24-sheet stand. White paper covered the stand; the men, dressed as cavemen, were equipped with maps and buckets of black paint. They scratched funny little illustrations on the paper, and scheduled their work so the crowd had to hang around for a while before the sign made sense.

They pulled this stunt three days in succession, playing to my thousand.

Cohen Puts “The Christian” Over

Harford, Conn.—When Charles Cohen, Goldwynner, arrived here recently to exploit “The Christian,” he found that municipal regulations—vent the use of almost all sorts of street exploitation. Arrangements were then made with a score of taxi-cab drivers to fasten doorknob hangers on the windshields of their cars, and on the inside of the windows.

All local stores are closed on Sunday, so Cohen proceeded to use this fact to exploit the windows. He had 500 special doorknob hangers printed. On one side they read: “Closed.” Have gone to the Strand theater to see”—with the title of the film on the reverse side. Five hundred more hangers were printed for use on the steering wheels of automobiles. “Stop. At the Strand theater to see”—with the title of the picture on the other side.

Family Night

Topeka, Kans.—Every Friday Night has been designated as Family Night at the Grand. Eighty-three cents including the tax admits the whole family. The regular price is 40 cents for the kiddies, 25 cents for the balcony, and 40 cents for the main. E. D. Keilmann, manager, reports a steady increase in calls for family tickets. The idea is kept before the public in ads, lobby and screen.

Making The 24 Sheet Work

Wash. Court House, O.—R. J. McClain, of the Palace, is exploiting “The Hottentot,” arranged with a billboard painter to give prominent display to the Palace shown. “You must see this good show at the Palace,” and also an announcement of the attraction. This “later is in a very prominent location and although not expected it helped the box-office receipts immensely.

Fashion Pageant Staged

Toledo—Eddie Carrier, Goldwynner put over “Look Your Best” at the Pantheon exploitation campaign.

The outstanding feature was the presentation of a fashion pageant, which was staged in co-operation with the Thompson Hudson Co. department store. A number of manikins were brought to Toledo by Carrier. A runway was constructed out into the audience along which the beauties promenaded adorned with the seasons latest fads and fancies. The runway had special illumination and the spectacle was said the most elaborately ever staged.

Baking Company Helps

San Diego, Cal.—A tie-up with the Superior Baking Co. that netted some good advertising was put over by R. A. Addison, of the Pickwick, on “The Strangers’ Banquet.”

The bakery, in each loaf of bread turned out for a week, placed a herald on the picture, while each 25th loaf carried with it a pass for the show. The baking company, which had just launched a campaign to popularize Superior Queen Bread, placed special window cards on the tie-up in 250 dealers’ windows and carried cards on all its trucks, besides carrying a two column four inch announcement of the picture, illustrated with a cut of Claire Windsor, in its newspaper advertising for three days. The Waldorf Hotel replaced its regular “Merchants’ Lunch” with a daily “Strangers’ Banquet” during the entire week, carrying the idea out on its menus. Ten thousand napkins advertising the picture were distributed through the hotel and the various restaurant and drug store lunch counters. Addison was assisted by L. W. Barclay, Goldwynner.

LUXOR IS PROUD TO ANNOUNCE

LUXOR PICTURES CORPORATION
Suite 1308 Equitable Trust Bldg. 347 Madison Ave.
New York March 29, 1923.

Mr. J. Damonberg, Publisher,
The Film Daily,
71-73 West 44th St.,
New York City.

Dear Joe:

Throughout my career in the motion picture industry to date I have acquired a reputation — that I have never over-estimated the distributor-exhibitor value of a picture and that I am, in short, a good judge of what constitutes box office entertainment.

Marcus Loew, Sam Goldwyn, W. W. Hodkinson, Arthur S. Kane, Al Lichtman, Fred Warren, and other distributing factors with whom I have come in contact through my association in the past with Thos. H. Ince, J. Parker Read, Jr., Hugo Ballin and other producers have had occasion — appreciate this fact.

"SHIFTING SANDS," a Fred LeRoy Granville Production, is a Special that I am proud to have the LUXOR PICTURES CORPORATION market and exploit in this country. It has certain qualities that make it one of the best Showmen's Propositions offered to exhibitors in many months.

Therefore, when I stake this personal reputation on my organization's first presentation I think this personal guarantee should mean something.

Cordially,

Sieg Schlager
General Manager.

Having Just Seen the First Print of
"The Bright Shawl"

We Congratulate You—

INSPIRATION PICTURES, INC., Charles H. Duell, president, on your consistently fine productions starring Richard Barthelmess. With your very first picture, "Tol'able David," there was an artistic quality in every detail of production that made this picture stand out as one of the best of the year. There seemed little likelihood of equalling it, yet we believe that with each succeeding picture you showed an unmistakable determination to strive for even higher perfection in artistry and in entertainment values. And "The Bright Shawl" is, in our opinion, your most sterling achievement.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS, on the many fine characters you have created, and especially on your interpretation of the American boy in "The Bright Shawl," which we believe to be the most appealing of all.

MISS DOROTHY GISH, on your exceptionally fine delineation of the character of the impetuous Spanish Dancer who died for Cuban liberty.

JOHN S. ROBERTSON, on your unusual artistry and understanding in weaving together all the separate elements into a perfect ensemble, making a picture which we believe will be pronounced one of the finest productions of the season.

JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER, on a most colorful romance upon which the photoplay is based.

EDMUND GOULDING, on your fine screen adaptation, in which you have preserved the characters of the story with truth and fidelity and the spirit of the romance with a nicety seldom equalled.

EVERETT SHINN, on your exceptional skill in art direction;

GEORGE FOLSEY on the wonderful photographic values, and the entire supporting cast for their splendid character studies.

We congratulate you for your sincere efforts in producing pictures that build up theatre patronage and bring results at the Box Office.

In the Courts

Patrick A. Powers has filed suit in the Supreme Court against the Sheridan Theater Co., Inc., for a balance of $12,500, alleged to be due on loans for $19,995 obtained Oct. 27, 1921, including a note of Max Spiegel.

Two suits filed in the Supreme Court by Elizabeth Hahn, against Ernest Stern, to restrain him from disposing of films they brought here from Vienna, because he contended that they owed him money for services, and for advances made, have been settled by an agreement that the Hahns will each pay $375.

Harris Lumber, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., has sued in the Supreme Court by the Commonwealth Film for a balance of $480 alleged to be due on the rental of "Eyes of Youth," for a week at $600 and 50% of the gross over $1,800. It is alleged that $650 was due. Replying to allegations in the answer, the plaintiff denies that it made any false representations or agreed to spend money in an advertising campaign.

had been functioning for about six months and that its leaders had been conferring with him while the others were making lots of noise. Another report, if true, presages a hectic time at the next meeting of the T. O. C. C. when friends of Cohen will make it a special order of business for the Chamber to reconsider its attitude toward the M. P. T. O. from which, it will be recalled, it withdrew some time ago.

As a matter of fact, there was so much discussion in the film district yesterday about the M. P. T. O., the T. O. C. C. and the Chicago meeting, that practically every T. O. C. C. member, whether friendly to Cohen or not had a different story to tell.

At the offices of the Theater Owners Dist. Corp. Arthur Ryan stated that the Michigan unit had informally talked about taking $150,000 in stock of the new company but that nothing definite had been done. He said he hadn't heard any reports about the unit entering distribution on its own.

Meet In April

T. O. Directors Will Discuss Financing Plan Then—Two-Day Session Arranged

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—The national board of directors of the M. P. T. O. will hold a two-day session here, April 8, to discuss the financing plan recently adopted by the official organ of the theater owners organization.

president at the meeting were:

The meeting lasted for several days, during which the situation was roughly discussed. Those present agreed that their personal convictions were that the plan as presented to the Michigan should be followed out recommended that it receive the sanction of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. at its coming meeting.

W. S. Mc Laren was also elected chairman. He said that Michigan realized the necessity of national organization, and that lack of finances had not been a handicap.

He stated that the purpose of the meeting was to discuss finances as ways to provide funds for the following administration. He also made plain that at no time during the meeting could personalities or loyalties enter into the discussion.

The plan as outlined, is based on the recommendation that the national organization must be by the exhibitors in the city who are convinced of its necessity. It is also based on the provision that there are 10,000 exhibitors in the United States who will pay a minimum of $100 for the first year to give the national organization the power to meet with, and so do the many things that must be done.

It was the intention of those present at the meeting that the efforts of the meeting be constructive, that the men who could bring to the their respective states to get to Chicago exhibitors, to realize the necessity of national organization, would make the the a reality.

Film Daily says, "James Kirkwood can always be relied upon to put over a role such as this and he does good work at all times. Doris Kenyon is adequate. You can satisfy the average audience with "You Are Guilty." The critics unite in their praise of this latest C. C. Burr release.

H. M. Richey Says Michigan M. P. T. O. Hasn't Reached Decision About Distribution

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—In response to a request for a statement from THE FILM DAILY relative to the report that the Michigan M. P. T. O. would enter distribution on its own, H. M. Richey, general manager of the unit, stated yesterday:

"Some move to eliminate the unnecessary waste in distribution that will be required to lower film rentals is vitally necessary. However, Michigan has not decided to go into distribution on its own will as yet. Some plans, however, may be devised to work co-operatively with producers in getting direct-to-theater distribution or cooperative with the Motion Picture Theater Owners Distributing Corp., when that organization begins to function."

A Counter Combine

To Offset Stars' Protective Ass'n Suggested by Montana Exhibitor—Boedicker's Ideas

F. A. Boedicker, manager of the Gallatin Theater Co. which operates the Ellen at Bozeman, Montana, has some definite ideas about the formation of the new coast protective association. In a letter to this office, he gives what he thinks is the attitude of the "small boys." This is what he says:

"I noticed in issue Saturday, February 24, 1923, an article in which it states that the following stars: Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Harold Lloyd, D. W. Griffith and Mr. Joseph M. Schenck representing Norma and Constance Talmadge have definitely formed a combine to keep the big boys from taking them. It looks like they are getting a little of their own medicine that they are trying to hand us. Now I do not see any reason why the small exhibitors should not form a combine to keep them from taking us. I have had the pleasure of having had the following experience with United Artists of hitting off Thrice Musketeers, Way Down East, and Little Lord Fauntleroy, and lost both my shirts, and believe me, this is a cold climate. Now they come along with Robin Hood, Tess of the Storm Country, and One Exciting Night, after showing them my former losses, with propositions that are absolutely impossible. "I could not resist writing this after reading" that article, and the way I am situated here, I can get along without exhibiting impossible propositions. Not writing this letter with any malice but thought I would let you know how a few of the small boys feel."

Cuts And Flashes

"Success" will be shown at the Capitol but no date has been set.

RACING STORY

A Wonderful Story for a Female Star. Full of Action. Only a Few Interiors. Can be Produced Very Reasonably

ADDRESS J. O. 6, c/o THE FILM DAILY

WALTER R. GREENE
Two Good Space Grabbers

Rockford, III.—Three different newspaper gags were put over on the local newspaper for the run of “Racing Hearts.”

Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiter, framed an interview with Agnes Ayres in which the star was quoted as remarking that women would never make as good automobile drivers as men. The newspaper followed this up sending a reporter to interview women known to drive cars. They protested in vigorous terms, and the copy was worked into a two-column front page spread.

The next gag was a Saturday matinée for the blind. The management invited every lightless person in town to “see” “Racing Hearts.” They got about forty responses and so forty school teachers were invited to attend and act as the eyes of the viewers. This made an interesting experiment and the newspapers took up it for a three column spread.

For The Victory Opening

Evansville, Ind.—An elaborate and extensive campaign was worked out for the opening of the Victory recently.

This was the attraction. The campaign consisted of the following:

Several thousand heralds and regular posters.

A book tie-up with the Smith & Butterfield book people.

A selected list of 2,000 received an announcement of the opening.

Andres & Co., gowns, co-operated with a window display. The gown worn by Mae Busch in the picture being shown in the window.

A newspaper campaign running for three weeks concluded.

Buddy Stuart At It Again

Providence—The following is a report, submitted by W. Keily manager of the Victory, of an exploitation campaign in which Buddy Stuart, Goldwyn, played a prominent part. The campaign was for the benefit of “Mad Love.”

Posting 25 twenty-four sheets, 300 one sheets and 250 window cards. Several hundred half sheet cards were also used in the down-town windows.

The newspapers carried a very effective teaser for several days finishing up with quarter page ads on Sat. and Sun.

Two 24 sheets were mounted, perambulator style, for ballyhoo. This was used in advance and during the run.

The lobby was decorated with a mounted cut-out of Pola Negri, on both sides of the marquee. Painted posters and a number of smart looking photos dressed the rest of the front.

In the Courts

Supreme Court Justice McCook has dismissed a suit by Texas Guinan Johnson against Nicholas Kessel for $40,000. She alleged that she made a contract with Victor Kremer, by which she was to appear in eight pictures and was to get 25% of the net profits, and have a drawing account of $700 for the first two pictures and $350 for the others. She alleged that Kremer broke the contract and damaged her in the amount claimed.

Miss Guinan sued Kessel on an alleged guaranty that Kremer would carry out the contract, losing her claim on a telegram sent her by Kessel in which he said, “My connections will assure you of fulfillment of the contract.” Kessel asked the dismissal of the complaint on the ground that this language in the telegram did not amount to a personal guaranty by him, and the court upheld him, stating that the words “cannot be interpreted as a guaranty.”

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has denied the application of William Gillette, Charles Frohman, Inc., and the Alco Enterprises for an injunction restraining Stoll Films and the Educational Film Exchanges from distributing films bearing the name, “Sherlock Holmes” or the “Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.” The plaintiffs contended that they have a prior right to the use of the name.

Counsel for the defendants offered a number of points in opposition to the injunction, which included the following:

1. The case of the plaintiff is insufficient, both on the facts and on the law.
2. None of the plaintiffs acquired rights from Conan Doyle to produce motion pictures based on his writings.
3. The productions of the defendants and of the plaintiffs are not competitive and there is not the slightest evidence of unfairness.
4. The name “Sherlock Holmes” has become “descriptive” as distinguished from “fanciful” and will not be restrained unless it has a secondary meaning as applied to the plaintiff’s production, or the defendants have engaged in fraud.

W. G. Gilmore, for three years production manager for Charles Ray, is now production and business manager for theNiblo unit.

W. R. Hearst Has Scouts with Definite Orders to Look Over Houses for Cosmopolitan First-Run

It is understood that William Randolph Hearst has sent a number of scouts out into the field to look over the general theater situation, with a view to lining up houses for Cosmopolitan first-runs. Several are now engaged along these lines. If the report is true, a representative of the Hearst organization is investigating theater conditions and locations in Canada.

Incidentally, it is said that Hearst and Famous Players have reached a settlement regarding what Cosmopolitan Productions are yet to be distributed through Famous. "The Love Piker" and "The Go-Getter" are understood to be the lost two. Goldwyn expects to handle from 12 to 18 pictures from Hearst next year, but it is understood the Hearst organization has not yet advised Goldwyn when delivery of the negatives will be made, and that no mention has been made of the first release through Goldwyn.

"Enemies of Women" opened at the Central yesterday, following a special showing on Saturday night.

Gyppers

WRITTEN IN HOLLYWOOD

Find them all along the line. In production, distribution and exhibition. It would seem that this sort of thing would have died out. Long before this. But the old idea rides merrily along. And the result is that every branch of the business is paying for it.

Incidentally these self same gyppers are in the financing end. There is one concern out here in Los Angeles that has a fine idea of gypping. And plays it to the limit. It's one of those concerns which finance production. And here's about the way the game is played: Mister Producer wants, let's say, $100,000. After he signs away his right arm and pledges the negative as security he gets the loan for six months. But does he get his $100,000? Let's see. He first pays interest at the rate of 6 per cent a year. This is deducted first. Leaving him $97,000. Then he pays a bonus of 10 per cent. Which reduces the loan to $87,000. Then he must have a certain attorney—named by the concern—to prepare the various papers. This costs about $5,000. So he gets a gross of $82,000. For which he pays back $100,000, and then pays from 10 to 25 per cent of his profits as well. It's sweet. For the financial folk. And if you think these boys take any risks bear this in mind: that of over 600 propositions made one concern they have accepted the "risk" on less than 25 productions.

FLEECING THE DISTRIBUTOR

Then there is the other type of gypper. The producer who rigged a cost sheet for production that would take in many of accountants and lawyers to straighten out. And then perhaps it. One producer out here who had a deal on to get an advance of $100,000 a picture, on a four picture contract, bought a generator, a complete lighting plant, and two motor trucks out of two productions and was finally checked up when he added Marmon car to the cost of the third production.

Another producer made a deal with a distributor in New York and was guaranteed something like $65,000 returns on his picture. It wasn't a super special. Or anything like it. But: said he had put over $50,000 of his own money in it and only wanted a trifling profit" for his work because he admitted it wasn't such a much of a picture. He was right about the last bit. It isn't. In fact the distributor now knows—despite the importance of the producer's name and the cast—that it's going to be tough sledding to get anything worth while in. But he is to make good that $65,000 guarantee. And here's the tough part of it. Investigation disclosed that instead of the picture costing the $50,000 that the producer claimed, that it actually cost less than $20,000; the sets being part of another production and some of the studio charges also going into another production. "The trifling profit" talked of by the producer happened to be something like $45,000 on an investment approximately half that amount.

THE DISTRIBUTING DISTRIBUTOR

Who has a funny kink in his brain. And who cannot see why a producer should get the money which his pictures have earned. And who keeps it "just for awhile" to meet other operating costs. Is another type. And there are producers out here who can talk by the hour of these gypers. If you give them a chance. A certain well known producer talking of this specie said that when this sort of a distributor got his hands on a picture that after the advertising and print costs were deducted that if he producer got a nickel for his trouble he was lucky. And then if he did he had to wait a terrible length of time for it.

THEN THERE'S MR. EX-HI-BI-TOR

Who gypsy in the old fashioned way. Who "never made a nickel" on this or that picture. And who pleads the baby act until his tears almost seem real. And mops up on a picture. And never thinks of sending an extra nickel to the distributor. Regardless of what he paid for it or what it did for him. You know him; his middle name is Legion.

True, there are some exhibitors honest enough to send those checks in to the distributor. But they are an unusually limited lot. And that's one of the reasons why the distrust and poker playing buying of film goes on. Incidentally one of the reasons why this business is held back.

Universal Pictures Corporation
1600 Broadway, New York City
This history-making New York sensation established a record run of eleven weeks, playing to tremendous business at $1.65 top at the Lyric Theatre. Instead of road showing this stupendous production in legitimate theatres, Universal gives every exhibitor a chance to scoop in on the cream which it could have retained for itself. It will be released at once as a Universal Super-Jewel Production.

Winnipeg Shelves 50 Cent Tax
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Winnipeg—The proposed theater tax of 50 cents a seat per year by the City Council, has been shelved for a year, owing to the stubborn opposition of the theater managers. It was pointed out that exhibitors already gave one-twentieth of their gross revenue to the Municipality or the Provincial Government.

Gypers
Of course they expected P. A. to come through with the finances. Sensing something like this P. A. commented: "This is a great idea. There's lots in it for all of us. But, boys, what are we going to use for money?"

The scheme died right then and there.

THE BUSY STARS
Wallace Beery. One of the greatest character actors in the business. So much in demand in Hollywood that he is usually working for several companies at the same time. Working for three at the moment. So busy that he hasn't time to sell some of his real estate. And he owns a lot of it.

SOME FORTUNES
Talking about real estate brings this to mind: that there isn't one producing company working here that couldn't sell its ground and raze the huge studios and still have a big profit from the deal. Of course everyone knows how real estate values in Hollywood have been jumping for the past few years. No end in sight. And many picture people hold big parcels. Mack Sennett said to have over 350 acres of ground within the city limits of Los Angeles. Probably the largest holder of all. The William Fox studios facing Western Ave. and Sunset Blvd. are probably the best site, yet the Famous Players huge lots are situated ideally. Universal City is reported worth five times today what Carl Laemmle paid for it nine years ago, and way out in Culver City all the studio sites have increased tremendously in value. The Christie boys have made a fortune, according to report, in realty transactions and there is hardly a star or prominent actor or director who doesn't own a lot of ground. Lots of lots usually.

New England Deal

The F. B. O. franchise for New England has been disposed of to a syndicate formed by Harry Asher and Sam Grand.

No Confirmation

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Boston—It is reported here that the F. B. O. franchise for New England has been disposed of to a syndicate formed by Harry Asher and Sam Grand. The amount is placed at $100,000. Asher and Grand are important figures in Federated New England. They have moved over to the F. B. O. at 39 Church St., where the rooms are more spacious. Local men say that the deal is significant because it placed Federated here in a position where it will be able to produce more readily for this territory. It is held that the prestige acquired by Federated in view of the success it has shown in other states will be of great value to New England.

GOLDWYN STATEMENT

Shows Deficit of Over a Million—Last Year's Operating Loss Placed at $303,388—Godsol Issues Statement Explaining Liquid Position of Company is Better Than 1921

The Goldwyn financial statement as of Dec. 30, 1922, shows a deficit of $1,405,587 for 1922. The net loss incurred from actual operations of the company is $303,388.

Other interesting figures include theater buildings and leaseholds, valued at $1,687,398; unreleased productions, $1,467,533; cash in the bank, $717,116, and total assets, $13,771,188.

In connection with the statement, President F. J. Godsol said:

"During the year, the convertible notes of the corporation, amounting to $1,755,000, were liquidated, and the entire discount and expenses incurred in the placing of the note issue are charged off. This, in addition to other items charged off and the fact that the liquid position of the company is better than at the end of the preceding year, has put your company in position to operate more advantageously for the ensuing period. You will note that the current and working assets are in excess of $4,750,000, including cash and Liberty Bonds of over $750,000."

Costume Pictures

And Period Productions to Fill Much of the Schedule for Next Season

There promises to be a vogue of costume and period pictures for the coming season. Many of the production schedules are not fully set and a number may be added to those in sight. But if the various producing companies do not add to the schedule as now set there will be a much larger number of this type of picture out next season than was scheduled for the present season.

Doug Fairbanks will have "The Black Pirate" and an Arabian story by Knabb, and Mary Pickford is working on "Rosita" which is laid in Spain. Also for release through United or Allied, will come "The Talisman," a costume production made by Allied Authors, and Charles Ray's "Courtship of Miles Standish."

UNIVERSAL GETS IT!

A Life-saver for You—for Spring and Summer

A Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President, Universal Pictures Corporation

UNIVERSAL has landed the big prize of years!

Universal has bought the world's rights to the picture marvelous—“HUNTING BIG GAME IN AFRICA WITH GUN AND CAMERA”—the picture which has just closed its sensational run at the Lyric theatre in New York.

It's a good thing for you that Universal bought it, BECAUSE WE ARE NOT GOING TO SKIM OFF THE CREAM OF THE MONEY BY ROAD-SHOWING IN LEGITIMATE THEATRES. We are not going to offer you the skimmed milk.

We are booking it right now—immediately—into the picture houses, at the very moment when you need every bit of pulling power on earth to keep your house packed!

We paid a record price for it, but it's worth it. We are going to treat it as we would treat a circus, and I advise you to handle it exactly the same way.

But no circus on earth—with all due respect to the great Barnum & Bailey and Ringling outfits—can hope to show such perfectly amazing things as you and your astounded patrons will see in this greatest of all wild animal pictures.

Years ago I bought the Paul J. Rainey African Hunt picture and it created a sensation all over the world. You remember it. Ever since then I have wanted something even better and greater. I found it in H. A. Snow's “Hunting Big Game in Africa With Gun and Camera.” And now it goes direct to you.

I don't doubt there will be feeble imitations on the market. The Universal has never done a thing in all the years of its existence without having a flock of me-too folks tagging along behind. But you won't be fooled by the imitations. You will want the real, genuine blown-in-the-bottle article and you can get it only from the Universal.

Something greater than the circus is coming to your town. If you are the live and hustling exhibitor in your territory, you'll be the one who will bring home the bacon with this picture.

Here's a real life-saver when you need it most. I've done my part in buying it and firing it straight to you.

BELL BOY 13
Newspaper Opinions

“Enemies of Women”—Cosmopolitan

AMERICAN—For sheer splendor of setting, for characterization of “Enemies of Women,” the Cosmopolitan production, stands out among the achievements of the century.

EVENING JOURNAL—* reveals in a remarkable manner the limitations of the motion picture camera. In this respect, the Cosmopolitan picture brings out in a picture characteristics which the camera cannot express.

GLOBE—Many will find fault with one or another of the costumes, but few will be bored.

The adaptation is one of the most remarkable I have ever seen. It is not unlike the picture—like a picture. Whatever popularity it brings out will be reflected from the success of the picture based on books by Bancroft which have preceded it.

Picture is one example of what can be done with motion picture pictures in the way of furnishing romance, melodrama, thrill, and moving and beautiful scenes.

SUN—* a brilliant screen production for practically nothing in the sense that an artist or a movie audience could see it. To the best of the screen achievements it has preceded it.

TELEGRAM—* without doubt one of the most lavish films ever placed before the public. From beginning to end it is enriched with a wealth of beauty and original scenes.

THE TIMES—* Barrymore has a fight with a revolutionary...* and this is an especially fine piece of acting by Mr. Barrymore. The whole cast was exceptional. * It is a long story beautifully directed for such a small amount of money... * Both Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens are exceedingly good in their parts. In fact, memory does not summon an occasion when Alma Rubens has done better work or looked more beautiful. * But after the intermissions, the picture gets bash.* And yet, despite its faults, this is a picture that is well worth seeing.

WORLD—In “Enemies of Women” is a series of connected motion pictures, generally of great beauty, occasionally stirring. A splendid effort to “fade out” colored pictures of sufficient interest to hold one’s interest to the end.

Famous Players will have “The Covered Wagon,” Pola Negri in “Don Caesar,” “Salome Jane,” “The Whirlwind,” “Venasque,” which will be partly costume at least and possibly “Peter the Great,” made at the Central. And through the Central, the Cosmopolitan picture, some of which may come through Famous and others through Goldwyn. But Cosmopolitan will have the Red Rose,” “Little Old New York,” “A Gentleman of France” and a drama of the Elizabethan period which Marvin Davis and Julia Arthur will appear.

From Fox are promised “Camel Kirby,” “The Wilds of Virginia,” and “The Shepherd King.””St. Elmo” and others including “Monna Vanna,” made abroad.

Goldwyn will lead off with the monster spectacular production of “Ben Hur.” It is expected to be in time for late showing next season—”The Palace of the King,” “Vanity Fair,” and “The Gold Letter” to be made by George D. Baker. Included in the list is Balzac’s “The Magic Skin,” which will be made on a scale.

Metro will have “Scaramouche” and “Tollers of the Sea,” by Ingram, and “Captain Applejack,” which is in part a costume play.

One of the outstanding features of this year will be “The Hunchback of Notre Dame,” which will cost upwards of $800,000 and be made by Universal, who will also release “The Merry Go Round,” a story of historical pictures, and “The Lady of Quality.”

There will likely be released by Goldwyn “Sunset Beach,” “Great Expectations” and Hodkinson will have “Lady Hamilton,” made abroad. Warner Brothers will include on their schedule “Beau Brummel” and “Dobson, and the Rocketts have not yet determined release for “The Life of Abraham Lincoln.” No release has been determined for the Clancy production of “Ali Baba and the 40 Thieves,” or Earle’s “Rubaiyat,” or W. P. S. Earle’s “Tot-Ankh-Amen.” Release will also be obtained probably for “Chin Chun Chow,” to be made in England, and “The Virgin Queen” and “The Cypress Cavalier” made by J. Stuart Blackton abroad. There are a number of others to be considered including “O’Pollo” and “Queen of Sin,” performed by Ben Blumenthal, Oscar Lund’s promised production of “Birth of Switzerland.”

Reported Near End of Vitagraph Contract But No one in New York Will Discuss Matter

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—The Times says that Jerry Semon has two more pictures he is to make under his present contract which he is to sign up with a studio.

"It is possible," says the report, "that the two pictures will be at Vitagraph, a feature of five or six and a half reels, instead of two short reels. After that he will probably be given only full length pictures, under a new contract with the firm."

Trouble Over, Capitol Reports

The Capitol management reported yesterday that the musicians returned to work. The Capitol management reported yesterday that the musicians returned to the 2 o'clock performance yesterday, following a walk-out on Monday. Other Broadway theaters, with the exception of the Criterion, stated they had experienced no difficulties over the musicians' strike.

Three New "U" Stars

The three new stars which Carl Laemmle promised for appearance in Universal Special Attractions are Roy Stewart, William Desmond and Jack Hoxie. The other three in that category are Gladys Walton, Herbert Rawlinson and Hoot Gibson. Stewart's first will be "Burning Words," and Desmond's probably, "The Skyline of Spruce."

Beware of Re-issues or Tame Imitations

UNIVERSAL PICTURES CORP.
“Safety Last!”—Patie Strand

EVENING JOURNAL—“Safety Last!” Harold Lloyd is running a close second in the popularity stakes this season, for most movieland types say that it hurts. The thrills that the comedian wrings out of the simplest situation and his comedic inventions are so intense that the spectator finds his lower extremities growing numb and his countenance assuming the expression of the pit of his stomach.

POST—Harold Lloyd, no matter what he does, will always strike us as the best comedian to be found in the cinema. The last picture to hit this screen was his real forte.

GLOBE—There is more thrill than humor in the picture and in Harold Lloyd's performance.

MAIL—It is true the spectator screams and grips his seat when Harold Lloyd loses his hold and requires him to 'climb a human ladder' fashion up the side of a building as he does in “Safety Last!” at the Strand this week. We are sure the comedy is his real forte.

POST— * * * * * * * * * * is laughable from beginning to end, and in fact the laughter reaches the point of hysteria in the last couple of reels. The film will be a great favorite of the youngsters—both boys and girls—and the much used word 'stupid' seems really new when this ingenious young man of the tortoise-shell spectacles uses it.

SUN—* * * is pretty nearly the most amusing movie ever made, and it certainly is one of the most thrilling.

TELEGRAPH—At the Strand theater the hearty laughs break through that play. The house reveals unmistakably that Harold Lloyd has made another hit, a bigger and better one in his new film comedy, "Safety Last!"

TIMES—Harold Lloyd's latest effort is filled with laughs and gags. When people are not rocketying on their seats at the Strand, they will be holding on to the chair arms to keep them down.

The original "business" in this picture has every one on the alert, and where there have been ten laughs in two weeks there will be twice as many rollicking laughter.

WORLD— * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * is a little ingenious film play which he has made since he entered the ranks of great screen comedies something like three years ago.

GLOBE—It is all unworthy of a young man of whom a vast and admiring public expects fine things.

"Glimpses of the Moon"—F. P. L. Rivoli

AMERICAN— * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * may prove disappointing to many who found the novel intensely interesting.

If the delicate shadings of Mrs. Wharton's characterizations are lost, the gorgeous camera work of this film is a great disappointment. The entire branch of the film is distinguished by the correctness of the camerawork. The sumptuous sets are furnished with a wealth of authentic detail. No one would be so insensible as to miss the opulent splendor of the California set. The director appears to need a little less art and more reality.

DAILY NEWS—It fails dramatically, because only the stylish side of Mrs. Wharton's novel has been attempted. It is a series of beautiful and artistic scenes and sets made into a continuity through the use of copious subtitles. * * * * * * * * * * But if your taste is not at all picky, you will undoubtedly find the film thoroughly enjoyable. The mounting of the film is gorgeous.

EVENING JOURNAL—So much of the effectiveness of Edith Wharton's novel. The "Glimpses of the Moon," depends upon the delicate, charming style of art that is the most attractive part of the book and it is achieved here. It is very probable that it will be admired almost as much as the novel itself.

POST—If your taste is not at all picky, you will undoubtedly find the film thoroughly enjoyable.

EVENING WORLD—One expects, after remembering what Allazi Dwan did for "The Sun," to be amazed by the modern Parisian director's technique here. The film is more than a trifle strange and the Risekels Fairbanks masterpiece, and now on view at the Rivié, Dwan does not shine more brilliantly.

Of course "Glimpses of the Moon" would have been much heavier in its impact if the director had not dallied away the blame upon the shoulders of Dwan.

MAIL—This photoplay is dull entertainment, moving along in a laborious manner. To use the stage vernacular it is "high society stuff," done in the approved movie style.

GLOBE—An extraordinarily good piece of filming has been done with Edith Wharton's "Glimpses of the Moon." A large factor in this film's success is its excellent acting, performed under the watchful direction of Allazi Dwan.

POST—To any one who has read the book, there will be no disappointment, but to the others who have not read it, "Glimpses of the Moon" will be a fair play for a good deal of enjoyment.

TELEGRAPH—Beautiful women, gorgeous situations, and numerous loving-interest scenes are features of "Glimpses of the Moon." The scenery and art direction are marvellous.

TIMES—With fine photography, interesting sets, sudden changes in atmosphere and the talent of the principals. "Glimpses of the Moon" is always entertaining. But it does not live up to what might be expected from Allazi Dwan after his remarkable work from "Robinson Crusoe."" The final five minutes of the film were entirely out of place and out of character.

TRIBUNE—* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * It is such a story as one rarely sees in pictures. There are no false heroines, no agonizing, no overweening prettiness. And there are an ease and naturalness in every scene that makes it seem unforced.

WORLD—* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * "The Glimpses of the Moon" of a lonely South Sea Island beauty it brought to the screen a lovely, distinguished cinematic play. It is not to be compared with the puerile splashes of sentiment which have graced the picture screen recently under the name of "South Sea romances," but is done up with an air of campiness and warmheartedness which removes our own curse from the "tropical" drama.

TELEGRAM—It is a picture without hokum, without the lovers embracing in the last scene, a picture that relies only upon the authors story, and one in which there is real characterization.

"Where the Pavement Ends"—Metro Capitol

AMERICAN—The story is picturesque, there are several interesting scenes, and the picture is open to several constructive ideas. In this case, we are informed, where the pavement ends in romance.

EVENING WORLD—A treat in store for you if you drop into the Capitol during the week, for Ingram has made a wonderful picture again.

GLOBE—  * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * there is so much of the characteristic brilliance which has marked Rex Ingram's previous productions, but far from being sufficient to place it in the same class.

MAIL—As usual in Mr. Ingram's pictures there is much that is ingenious in the directing, but the director appears to need a little less art and more reality.

EVENING TELEGRAPH—There is considerable beauty of setting and photography throughout the story, which is a great success, and Miss Towry's performance is only exceeded by her beauty.

POST—It is thoroughly enjoyable, even though the screen has been flooded with tropical island stories and is a shining example of what really can be done in celluloid form. "Rex Ingram's " Where the Pavement Ends"" has been given. "Where Pavements End" all the fashion, all the flourish, all the razzamatazz. It is a fine setting for the story of a ginger bread, and even a storm scene has been made to appear truly magnificent.

SUN—* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * It is not only Rex Ingram's most artistic work since "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," but it makes every other South Sea island film look as if it had been cast under an earthquake in the Pacific.

MAIL—This tells a moving story simply and logically, with a light of beauty shining through that is not entirely due to the projection behind the film.

Author, Critics and Public Proclaim “Enemies of Women” a Masterpiece!

THE AUTHOR SAYS

“I am truly enraptured at the magnificent and artistic manner in which you have interpreted my novel. I consider it superior to any film I have ever seen. It is better in many respects than ‘The Four Horsemen’ because of the excellence of the actors and the magnificence of the sets. No author could desire anything finer for his work. I am sure it will be a great success.

“As author of ‘Enemies of Women’ I congratulate and I thank you!”

(Signed) VICENTE BLASCO IBANEZ

THE CRITICS SAY

“Without doubt one of the most lavish films ever offered to the public. From beginning to end it is embellished with a wealth of beauty.” N. Y. Telegram

“It is the last word in what is known as ‘a box-office attraction.’ It will be a joy forever to exhibitors.” N. Y. Globe

“For real entertainment, it would be hard to beat. Thrills, romance, melodrama, movingly beautiful scenes.” N. Y. Post

“It is an eye-full. Looks as if it cost a fortune to make.” N. Y. World

AND THE PUBLIC

“Enemies of Women” opened at two dollar top at the Central Theatre, on Sunday. The house has done absolute capacity. Hundreds have been turned away at every performance.

In all likelihood, he will continue as sales manager for the Weber-North organization.

Tough Times
Writes an important film man from the Northwest: “March was certainly a “bear” in the northwest. We had blizzards regularly on Saturday and Sunday, with an occasional hangover on Monday and today. The wind is coming from the north at about six miles per hour with the thermometer four below. In some spots in our territory it was down to 28 below several times during March. In the words of the Gods above and Hiram Abrams both seem to be against us.”

Liane Haid is considered to be the most beautiful woman in the world today, and her portrayal of that great figure in modern history, Lady Hamilton, will stamp her as one of the finest actresses appearing on the screen today. “The Affairs of Lady Hamilton” is a Hodkinson picture.

Floyd M. Brockell, manager of distribution for First National is back from a 10 weeks’ trip to exchanges. He met with the problem of the lengthy feature against which a number of exhibitors have voiced their opposition in THE FILM DAILY.

“The problem of the exhibitor says Brockell,” is to run his program in the allotted time, and naturally he will hesitate before booking a feature that is going to hold up his show.

“Practically every exhibitor I met seemed to feel that the producer could serve him best by keeping the big features from running to excess footage, thereby forcing a disruption of the world.”

In the Courts

A jury in the City Court gave a verdict for $1,500 against Loew's 86th St. theater in a suit of Rose Pritchard to recover $2,000 because a sign fell on her leg.

In the suit of Charles H. Duel against Thomas H. Ince to recover $60,000 for legal services, filed last year, Ince has asked for particulars in the Supreme Court as to when the services were rendered and when the demand for the $70,000 was made.

A judgment for $7,800 has been filed in the Supreme Court by Ollie Sellers against the C. R. Macanly Photoplays Inc., for a balance due from "When Bearcat Went Dry." Sellers alleges he was to get 5 per cent of the net receipts up to $100,000, and salary, and alleged that the net was $85,000. He claimed $11,837 but the defendant agreed last year to pay him more than $9,000 to settle the claim, but has paid only $2,000.

Fox Film has been sued in the Supreme Court for $50,000 damages by the Starlight Farms Development Co., for breach of an agreement. It is alleged that the plaintiff owns a tract of land in Sullivan County which it is using for club and development purposes, and it was agreed in October last that the company would furnish actors and equipment to make a film there showing how game wardens and State troopers protect game, for the purpose of exhibiting the films prior to the hunting season last fall. The plaintiff admits that it contemplated that the film would be exhibited publicly to advertise the plaintiff's property for club and hunting purposes but the defendant refused to exhibit them.

the regular program. It seems to be the feeling that any story can be told in five or six reels.

"There is no question about exhibitors being ready for longer runs where they have pictures that warrant them. Our own records show a steady improvement in this respect." It appears that there is not any ideal type of motion picture for the country at large. A really big picture must over-ride all local conditions and prejudices, and for the others, it all depends what class of audience, or section of the country you want to reach."

He asked each exhibitor a question, "What type of picture do you patronize?" Some exhibitors were too indefinite to permit a checking of their opinions, but approximately 200 were explicit enough to be placed on record. These observations are embodied below:

Society comedies and dramas are first in demand in the large cities. Novelties are not wanted, especially when they run beyond the usual feature length. The dramas and musicals are popular in the smaller theaters of large cities and in small towns, but as a rule they are not favored for first run houses.

The western picture made on an elaborate scale appears to be gaining in popularity.

The tendency is a avoid star plays, unless the drawing power of the star, has been thoroughly tested and found adequate in the exhibitor's locality.

The prejudice against costume is passing, because of the number of recent successes claimed as costume plays.

Adaptations of famous books and plays are popular, owing to the advertising behind them and the exploitation possibilities they offer.

Rural plays are popular only in certain sections, usually the part of the country used as a background for the story.

Everywhere exhibitors want pictures with what is characterized as human appeal.

REAL

The only authentic, genuine picture of big game ever to come out of Africa. It has my full endorsement."

Carl Akeley, of the American Museum of Natural History Staff and America's greatest authority on Africa, so said of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson's AFRICAN BIG GAME HUNT.

This is the final authority that the amazingly thrilling scenes of the man-shilling beasts of the African jungle are REAL.

There may be other big game pictures, but none has the stamp of authenticity of personal endorsement from such authorities as Dr. Akeley and Governor Pinchot.

AFRICAN BIG GAME HUNT is not only six thousand feet of gasping thrills. The scenes that make the thrills are REAL.

Of Features—Northwestern Exhibitors Give Ready Response to Idea, Sponsored by J. F. Cubberley
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—It is reported here that J. F. Cubberley of the F. & R. Exchange has asked every exhibitor in this section to write to the home office, trade papers and the Hays organization in an effort to check the tiresome length of features. It is said that within the past week that at least 100 letters have gone in from this territory and that letters written in the language of the exhibitor sent to the home offices as well as the trade papers should make the producers and distributors understand what the exhibitor really wants.

More and more of the exhibitors are becoming sold on short subjects and where their feature is not too long they are only too glad to book in the excellent short subjects the market now affords.

Inc to Direct Personally

Thomas H. Ince plans to direct one picture of the new group that will go to First National under the new deal. This will be "Country Laws and City Pavers," in which Madge Bellamy will appear. Others of the series will be "Her Reputation," "The Just and the Unjust" and "Unguarded Gates."

J. F. Cubberley Inviting Visiting Exhibitors at Minneapolis Confront to "Breakfast and "Get Together"
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—J. F. Cubberley of his F. & R. Film Co., is sponsoring "Ham and Eggs" breakfast at the West Hotel on the morning of April 1. Cubberley has extended invitations to exhibitors in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Wisconsin and Oregon, to come and have a good time on that morning. He has sent each theater man a letter which reads in part:

"You are invited to eat breakfast with the offer on the morning of Wednesday, April 1st, at the West Hotel, at eight-thirty. The menu consists of ham and eggs and old Virginia corn cakes. The enlisted ticket will admit you, and remember at breakfast starts promptly at eight-thirty."

"The exhibitors of Minnesota, North and South Dakota are holding their annual convention at the West Hotel in Minneapolis on April 10th, 11th and 12th: Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and the writer deduced it would be a lot of fun for all of you to have breakfast together some morning while you are in town. To this breakfast I am inviting all the old timers, and want...

A $50,000,000 Unit
Warner Bros. Form Highly Capitalized Company for Expansion—$4,000,000 for Production
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Dover, Del.—Warner Bros. have formed a $50,000,000 company under the laws of the State of Delaware. The incorporation provides for the issuance of 500 shares of stock without nominal or par value.

Warner Bros. have in the past few weeks formed three distinct corporations. One of these has been organized under California laws as a holding company for various studio properties and other real estate. A second, with only a nominal capitalization has been incorporated in New York to control the company's activities in that State, but the Delaware company, which incidentally represents one of the most highly capitalized units in the motion picture business, will act as the holding company for all of the Warner enterprises.

While no one at the Warner office yesterday could be reached to comment on the flotation of the huge company, it is understood that production plans for next year and a general program of expansion have brought about the necessity of additional financing. The Warners plan 18 pictures to be released within the year. In that number, as noted, there will be two with John Barrymore, one with Lenore Ulric and one with Home Hampton. At least four D. W. Griffith pictures will be made, "Debrau," "Daddies," "Digger Rose" and "The Gold Diggers."

It is understood that about $4,000,000 will be spent on next (Continued on Page 3) to arrange for about three minute talks from the various speakers who have been in the motion picture business ten years or more.

An early morning breakfast is not going to try to sell you films; simply get together and have a good time. The regular meetings of the convention will not start until thirty, and breakfast at eight-thirty it will give us two hours of real fun. Remember, this is neither a sales nor business meeting. No prohibition officers will be invited.

“Come on in to Minneapolis for a day or two, meet the other exhibitors, get the hope for next year, and you will find the money well spent.”

Plans Cycle on Woman

(Los Angeles—M. H. Horstmeir who recently purchased the Balboa studio at Long Beach, says he intends making a series of six pictures covering the general exposition of “Woman—Her Past and Her Future.” The pictures by individual titles will be “The Other Woman’s Husband,” “Respectable Sinners,” “Lust for Possession,” “Regulated Vice,” “When Passion Ends” and “Free and Unshackled.”

In the Courts

An attachment for $5,000 against the property of Hall Caine, has been granted in the Supreme Court in a suit of Harvey K. Fly, who alleges that he was commissioned by Caine to sell the film rights to “The Master of Man” and that Caine bought them for $50,000. He says he has been unable to collect the $5,000, which is a reasonable commission in his opinion.

A verdict for $993 obtained by Arthur M. Brillant against the Mack Sennett Comedies Corp., Inc., for breach of contract, has been reversed by the Appellate Term and a new trial ordered on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence. Brillant alleged that he was hired as director of exploitation at $175 a week for very short time, on Jan. 23, 1922, and was discharged June 17.

An order was signed in the Supreme Court yesterday transferring to the Federal Court a suit by Franklin L. Hutton against Associated National Pictures, Inc., on an assigned claim of Joseph L. Frothingham, alleging that Frothingham sold the world rights to his photographs to Associated Producers, which in turn transferred the contract to First National, which got two films, and is alleged to hold the sum sued for for the plaintiff. The films are not named in the papers.

Ruth Roland will probably be in town from the coast in a few weeks.

That's the only word for it.

Think of it—a brand new idea.

Something the human race has been groping for since man got up on his hind legs and walked.

Groping blindly—in the dark—longing—dreaming of it.

Something a millionaire would give his last dollar for.

Something a woman would barter her immortal soul for.

And now FOUND!

Gertrude Atherton has revealed it—in one bold, master stroke.

A book—but such a book—vivid, absorbing, compelling.

Magic—that's what it is. But scientific magic. It's true.

Every woman in the land is reading it—or will.

And First National has the screen rights—is making a picture of it.

A picture? More! A SENSATION!

A sensation the Box Office will never forget.

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over.
Send a letter, let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Tuesday Night, Bargain Night

Windsor, Conn.—The Tunxis theater has made Tuesday nights bargain night. When a part of three or more come in, the first is charged the regular admission price and the others two cents. This has proved a box-office booster, and started many coming to the movies that never went before.

"Mystery" Poster Helps

Baltimore—The New Wizard recently used mystery advertising in an exploitation campaign for "Missing Husband." The theater issued a poster on which was a large photograph of a man, showing the back of his head and shoulders and a small portion of his face. In big type over the picture was printed: "$25 reward to anybody who will give any clue, information, or identity of the person in this photograph." Below the photograph was "One of the 'Missing Husbands.' Call at the Wizard Theater, etc.,"

"Kisses From Pola Negri"

Portland, Ore. — Pola Negri s kisses were free and distributed when "Mad Love" played the Liberty. Through a tie-up with a local candy concern, 14,000 Polyanna kisses were distributed in small glassine envelopes carrying a picture of a pair of lips, and labeled "A Kiss from Pola Negri." The envelope carried the theater announcement. Distribution was made through local hotels, restaurants, cafes and drug store lunch counters. The girls in white uniforms worked the principal downtown corners on the opening day, passing the kisses out to pedestrians.

A Good Stunt For "Robin Hood"

San Francisco—During the recent run of "Robin Hood" at the Curran theater, S. F. Mason, manager of the house, conceived the idea of a tie-up with the Bulletin, which offered $100 in gold for the capture of a Robin Hood bandit, who for 10 days had the freedom of the city from the Chief of Police, and whose whereabouts daily was announced in advance in the paper.

The bad man stole a bar of gold one day from the teller of one of the biggest downtown banks and escaped. The Bulletin carried a four-column cut of the outlaw as he snatched the gold. Another day he made a call on Sheriff Finn, from whom he also had a passport, and again escaped capture. Still another day he appeared in Sherwood Forest, Golden Gate Park, in civilian dress, and uniform, and no one was able to claim the $100, despite the fact that the paper that day published a "roque's gallery" portrait of the "bandit" and issued a map telling exactly where he would be at stated hours.

year's production schedule. Of the 18 planned, six will cost in the neighborhood of $350,000 each to produce; two will cost about $100,000 each while the others will each cost about $200,000.

In the past few weeks there have been a number of conferences held regarding distribution of the Warner product for next year. While no announcement has been made, it is confidently expected that the present method of distribution will be used next year. There will be, however, some changes. It is expected that the home office of the Warner organization will exercise a general supervision of its territorial distributors especially so far as the approval of contracts is concerned. In this field, there will be what will amount to individual organizations. The independent exchanges will release the Warner product in many cases distribute other pictures. Next year, except in those cases where they feel that the outside product will not conflict with their own, there will probably be an agreement made whereby the territorial exchanges will handle nothing but Warner product.

Jailed for Blue Law Violation

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Findlay, O.—Walter C. Richards, manager of two theaters here, is the latest arrest on a "blue law" violation. A house was closed. This case in Findlay is the latest in a series of similar cases in which the validity of the "blue laws" of the state are centered. In every case the decision has been against the Findlay exhibitors, and still they keep appealing to the court higher up.

Allen Winnipeg Unit Hit

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Winnipeg—A crisis has been reached in the financial affairs of the Winnipeg Allen Theater Co., according to a statement sent out by a committee of the shareholders to more than 50 shareholders. Not only have the holders of the first mortgage of $141,000 intimated their intention to foreclose, but $26,500 in principal together with a half year's interest of approximately $5,000 on April 1st, but the balance sheets show current liabilities amounting to $89,133.25 with current assets of only $52,005 available. A deficit as shown by the auditors' report is $72,240.63. Net assets, comprising the building and contents, are shown at $886,253.09. Liabilities listed include business profits and war taxes for 1920, income tax for 1921, municipal taxes of $31,776, sundry expenses of $22,000, etc.

$25,000 Pledged to Launch Plan Which Would Seek to Establish Pictures as Fine Art

The Cinema Foundation is the name of a new institution designed to help elevate the standards of the motion picture and ultimately place it on its own feet, as the art form of the foundation are described, among the acknowledged Fine Arts, Baron Hrolf Dewitz, who has appeared in the public eye from time to time as an advocate of more originality in motion pictures, is the equivocateur for the foundation and Clarence R. Freeman, secretary of the organization committee. It is said that $25,000 has already been pledged by the moral support of a number of representative men and women associated, among them Hudson Maxim, its founder; Winthrop Ames, the theatrical producer, and Hamilton Holt of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

The sponsors believe that there is a large audience tired of routine pictures, made with any imaginative power and that there are also a good many artists who stand ready to work. It is not, as employees, if given the chance. The foundation hopes to foster and coordinate these movements. A bureau of information and a reference library are planned at the foundation headquarters, which will be in New York.

"Phono-Films" Weekly

Dr. De Forest Working on Releases—Invention Records Action and Music on Same Stock

Dr. Lee De Forest, who gave a demonstration of his new invention "phone-film," which records action and music on the same width of stock the other night, is now at work on a weekly release schedule, the first of which will be ready in June. The "phone-film" is adapted primarily for the reproduction of musical instruments and solos. It is not De Forest's idea that the ordinary pantomime drama is adapted to the "phone-film," but he expects scenario writers to write stories around the acoustic idea to work in the voice and music to the greatest advantage.

Cohen Won't Run

Says He Is Definitely Out of M. P. T. O. Race—So Informs Exhibitor Conventions

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Omaha — Sydney S. Cohen three times this week repeated his intention not to run again for the presidency of the M. P. T. O., despite the fact that he was urged to do so at M. P. T. O. conventions in Little Rock, Kansas City, and Chicago. Cohen, accompanied by C. A. Lick, W. A. True, W. D. Burford and M. J. O'Toole has left for Chicago on the way back to New York. The first convention of the week was held at the Hotel Marion, Little Rock; the second at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Wednesdays, on which day there were two smaller meetings in two other cities en route to Omaha.

A Little Rock, E. W. Collins, president of the state unit, offered the use of the screens so far in furthering a new school building plan. At all of the conventions resolutions were passed endorsing the action of the M. P. T. O. in refusing to accept the uniform contract offered by the Hays organization. Cohen's administration was also endorsed as were the plans of the Thirteen Owners Dist. Corp.

For Better Films

National Committee Reports Recruits to Movietone Pictures—Exhibitors Helping

"Film Progress," a bulletin issued by the National Committee for Better Films, on May 21, 1918, reports a grow in the better films movement. The report contains the following:

1. Alabama, Birmingham—The Better Films Committee has given this department the impression that the film made in the Birmingham News. To inaugurate this movement there was printed the membership and its endorsement, its constancy and by-laws, and the points to consider in judging a picture.

2. Florida, Jacksonville—The Better Films Committee is endorsing pictures and reporting on endorsements to the newspapers. It is also providing Saturday morning matinees for boys and girls and working on plans for the development of a suitable machine so that the picture which is available in the city in the morning may be used to varying parties at an early hour for showing on Saturday afternoons.

3. Iowa—Council Thrus has put itself on the Better Films map by evolving a plan of cooperation between school authorities and exhibitors. Better Films Committee has been organized by the Board of Education, the Public Library Board and the Parent-Teacher Association acting together. Wherever a local management believes it is worthy of special mention to parents or guardians of school children, he will give this committee a private advance review of such film.

4. South Carolina, Greenwood—W. A. Byers, manager of the Liberty and Bargie, appealed to citizens to form a Better Films Committee to cooperate with his theater. If the public will cooperate with the organization, a review committee will be formed to write the Better Films Committee, which is working in helping him choose his pictures. The result is that Madison has an active Better Films Committee.

5. Washington, Aberdeen—Various parent-teacher associations here are active in the Better Films Movement. The Aberdeen Better Films Committee gives space to enter an important film, and includes the film's approved. At least one good program is given each week.

The Film Daily, New York City.

Gentlemen:

I want to take this opportunity to congratulate you on the splendid results we have received from our advertising in The Film Daily on Paul Rainey's, "Heart of the Jungle."

We have confined our advertising on this subject exclusively to your publication and have practically sold the entire country thru The Film Daily alone.

I have given careful study to what results one medium alone can produce, for several years - we know that every independent exchange man reads The Film Daily - if he doesn't get it he is not the kind of exchange owner to whom we care to sell our product.

Our contracts with producers for whom we distribute, producers for whom we act as fiscal agents and exchange owners who purchase our products invariably carry a clause stating that a certain amount of advertising must be carried in motion picture trade papers - it may interest you to know that "The Film Daily" is the only medium specifically mentioned by name as one publication which will be used - proving that we are right in our contention - producers, distributors, exchange owners as well as the theatre-owner believes yours' is the one indispensable medium.

Here's hoping that you will help everyone to "hole-out" in 60.

Yours very truly,

JACQUES KOPFSTEIN

Coast "Expo" In July

The "Expo" of the Coliseum, into a circular court, guarded by tall towers and surrounded by a colonnade. The Coliseum, now almost completed, will afford a chance for an impressive pageant. There is to be an immense square stage placed in the center of the amphitheater, which will seat 80,000 persons. This stage, 200 feet square, with three graduated levels, has been designed by F. B. Davison. It is in the form of an Aztec temple. At the top the hands and orchestras will be placed. On the next level the spectacles and ballets will be presented, while the main level will be used for the floats and pageants.

While many of the usual features of an exhibition will be introduced at this, a Monroe Doctrine Centennial, interest will grow in exhibits connected with the picture industry. Many exhibits from Rio Janeiro may be brought to Los Angeles after the close of the exhibition there; displays of unique interest from all the Southern republics. Every day the floats presenting episodes in history and pageants in which heroes of the past live again are to be photographed for theaters everywhere. When the Revue and Exposition ends there will be a library of historical films.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.........6,114 feet
With the posters showing Lloyd suspended in mid air from the hands of a clock, as well as others showing him in equally precarious positions, it isn’t unlikely but they’ll have a pretty good idea of what "Safety Last" is all about. But even the posters will fail to suggest the thrills and hair-raising stunts that actually occur in the picture. In this connection it might be said that this last half of Lloyd’s latest may not have a soothing effect upon people afflicted with nervous disorders or women to whom shock of any kind would be dangerous. And there are genuine shocks in "Safety Last," some that can only be described by seeing them.

The first half of "Safety Last" is made up of the regular brand of Lloyd humor, fine spontaneous laughs and new gags. It starts right out with a roar when Harold is supposedly bidding good-bye to his sweetheart preparatory to being hung, but the cameraman goes around the other side of the iron bars and you find Harold is merely at a railroad station. Next comes the bit in which he mistakes a little pickaninny in a basket for his grip and starts running for the train, is overtaken by the mammy, returns her child and hops onto the back of an ice wagon instead of the train.

The picture proceeds with a succession of good comedy sequences mainly concerned with the effort of Lloyd to hold down his job in a department store and later his effort to impress his sweetheart with his importance in the place. For the most part the comedian supplies new and original stunts with the possible exception of one or two, such as trying to board a crowded trolley and getting burned by a plumber’s torch, which Chaplin has used.

But the real riotous episode of “Safety Last” is that in which Lloyd performs the human fly stunt, climbing up the side of the twelve-story department store building in which he is employed. Harold is promised $1,000 by his employer if he can attract crowds to the store. He promises to go 50-50 with his buddy if the latter will do the stunt, but at the last moment the buddy is chased by a “cop” he had played a joke on earlier in the picture. He tells Lloyd to go up the first flight and he’ll change clothes with him and finish the act. At each floor, however, buddy is still pursued and Harold forced to continue the climb. The thrills in this sequence are rapid, hair-raising and surefire except for nervous people who will probably not feel benefited by the strain of suspense caused by Lloyd’s threatened spills.

Will Undoubtedly Keep Your S. R. O. Sign Busy
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor
They were packing them in at the Strand all last week with “Safety Last” and if this is any criterion as to what drawing power there is in Lloyd’s name, all you have to worry about is getting your order in before the other fellow. There is just one angle which you may have to give some consideration in connection with Lloyd’s latest, and that is the nerve-wracking human fly sequence. You might advise your patrons of the nature of this episode and let them decide whether or not they want to see it.

People of nervous temperament or women to whom a shock would prove dangerous may be done more harm than good by witnessing the numerous narrow escapes regardless of the fact that they know Harold isn’t going to fall, and that he was amply protected while he was performing these stunts, but they look so thoroughly genuine that the effect is sure fire that they cannot help but be frightened. Otherwise you can go the limit with promises of laughs and you might add that “Safety Last” is a thriller besides being a comedy. Announcing the star’s name and the title of his latest picture should be enough to bring them in.

"Masters of Men"
Vitagraph

DIRECTOR ................. David Smith
AUTHOR ....................... Morgan Robertson

CAMERAMAN ................. Steve Smith, Jr.
AS A WHOLE ................. Fine live entertainment with punch in its action, sure-fire patriotic atmosphere and all that goes for a good picture STORY ....................... A romance of the Spanish War period with action, thrills and plenty of genuine audience appeal DIRECTION ................. Splendid; succeeds in making story realistic and atmosphere is great; development very good

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Excellent

LIGHTINGS .................... Very good

PLAYERS ................. Cullen Landis at his best in role that he handles in fine style; Alice Calhoun and Wanda Hawley attractive maids of '98 and Earle Williams suitable; others all good types

INTERIORS .................... Good

DETAIL ......................... First rate

CHARACTER OF STORY .......... A character development showing the rise of an American lad from boyhood to manhood

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 6,800 feet

Here is one with a genuine wallop for American audiences and if the patriotic atmosphere in this doesn’t send them out with their blood tingling and their fervor for the stars and stripes increased a hundred fold, then the guess is all wrong. “Masters of Men,” David Smith’s production of Morgan Robertson’s novel, is an out and out American picture for Americans and it contains an unlimited supply of real audience appeal—the sort that starts them talking about the picture and brings others in.

Much of the credit for the success of the picture belongs to Director Smith for the very worth while and capable way in which he has handled the material and to C. Graham Baker, who prepared the scenario. Added to this is the splendid performance of Cullen Landis in the role of a sailor of the U. S. Navy, as well as a uniformly well suited and capable cast.

To start with, Morgan Robertson’s novel contains splendid material for the screen and in retaining the author’s method of development, Baker has gotten the most out of it and Director Smith has been able to tell the story smoothly, consistently and cover the ground in much less footage than he might have been able to proceed in the usual fashion. This chapter style of telling the story is wholly pleasing and satisfying and eliminates considerable unnecessary detail. And at the same time the sequences dovetail nicely and there are no gaps in the continuity.

The first two chapters are concerned with the early boyhood of the hero and his subsequent entrance into the Navy followed by the entrance of the United States into war with Spain. This leads up to some mighty fine business and includes a variety of thrills and action with sure-fire punch. It all registers and is flavored with such definite patriotic atmosphere that it is even more impressive than ordinarily. It is distinctly the treatment given the story and the wealth of realism and excellent detail that makes the piece absorbing. For a climax you have the destruction of the famous battleship Maine and the fight in Santiago Harbor.

Cullen Landis works like a real trooper and his portrayal in this is easily one of the best things he has ever done. They are going to get a real thrill out of his many scraps. Alice Calhoun and Wanda Hawley are both charming in their ‘98 costumes. Picture patrons all over will “love” the romance of Alice Calhoun and Landis, and Wanda Hawley and Earle Williams. Director Smith had fine cooperation from the whole company.

Story: Dick Halpin is accused of theft by the brother of Mabel Arthur, whom he loves. To save Mabel from humiliation Dick accepts the blame, runs away and joins the U. S. Navy. It isn’t until Dick and his lieutenant, Breen, have been shanghaied aboard a sailing vessel, that Dick learns Mabel knows the truth, but before there can be a reconciliation Dick and Breen return to their ship and are pitched into active service at Santiago Harbor. Dick is transferred to work under young Arthur, now an ensign, and is with him when he dies. After it is all over Dick and Breen return to the home town, Dick to claim Mabel, and Breen to claim Bessie, Mabel’s chum.

Better Get Your Order In and Then Get to Work On It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Vitagraph’s latest production looks like a sure thing for the box office. It has all the requisites of a box office attraction and they are all fully satisfying from an audience viewpoint. “Masters of Men” has been done in a big way and should do a big business. You can safely make promises for it and rest assured your crowd will vote it a winner, unless, of course, you happen to be catering to a foreign clientele. In that case they may not be carried away with the spirit of enthusiasm that the picture is almost certain to create with American audiences.

There is a trailer available which you would do well to secure and use well in advance of the showing. Be sure and tell them of the historic episode and of the blowing up of the battleship Maine. There will be those of your patrons to whom the incident will still be current history and they’ll be especially interested. Tell them about the excellent work of Cullen Landis, of the action and thrills. The picture really deserves your best exploitation efforts with the receipts proving it well worth your while. You have something to talk about. Do it.
They expected to find her a wild young lady without a thought in her head except for jazz, theatres, parties and everything that was frivolous.

Instead they were confronted with a prim, studious looking maid who looked upon the phonograph as an instrument of the devil; men as brutes that were never to be trusted, and that the life of a missionary was her greatest ambition.

She immediately placed a ban on cocktails, noise, dancing, low neck dresses, furs and feathers, and made life miserable for her aunts until—but that is the real surprise of the story and it is told so delightfully, that all movie fans will vote "Just Like a Woman" one of the most entertaining pictures they have ever seen.

CAMERAMAN ....................... Ira H. Morgan

AS A WHOLE .... A lavish spectacle that contains unlimited pictorial appeal and has been produced on a very big scale.

STORY ........ Gorgeously mounted and always good to look at; direct story appeal is inclined to vary.

DIRECTION .... Splendid in the way of production; unessential detail makes picture much too long.

PHOTOGRAPHY ..................... Excellent.
LIGHTINGS ........................ Very good.
PLAYERS ......................... Alma Rubens has several particularly fine opportunities that she makes the most of; Lionel Barrymore well suited and does good work; others capable and suitable are William Collier, Jr., Pedro de Cordoba, Gareth Hughes, Gladys Hulette, Wm. H. Thompson.

EXTERIORS ............. Many fine shots, especially those of Monte Carlo.

INTERIORS ............... Elaborate.

DETAIL ......................... Good, but too much of it.

CHARACTER OF STORY ........ Rich Prince idles away time and money during war but eventually enters into it after causing the death of the son of the woman he loves.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 10,000 feet.

Cosmopolitan's production of the Vicente Blasco Ibáñez novel easily ranks with the big spectacle plays of the day and in the way of giving an idea of its stupendousness might be compared to the Von Stroheim picture, "Foolish Wives," both in the atmosphere and production. "Enemies of Women" is notable for its extravagant and gorgeous presentation and as a purveyor of pictorial appeal the picture is decidedly a fine achievement. Director Alan Crosland has made good use of a liberal bank account and the photographing of his scenes upon actual location are indeed gratifying and beautiful to look upon. There is little left to be desired in the way of visual splendor and the picture may readily be termed "a feast for the eyes."

Inasmuch as the author is purported to be thoroughly satisfied with the visualization of his novel it would seem that John Lynch has written a suitable scenario and from a general viewpoint the theme will probably prove of value as a box office attraction. But a critical analysis of the plot shows the basic situation is not at all new. Audiences are quite familiar with the prince overburdened with riches who lavishes his wealth upon himself and keeps his house well supplied with women. Of course this allows for elaborate detail and spectacular side sequences that greatly cover up the shortcomings of the situations themselves, and in this respect they have certainly been camouflaged with a liberal array of luxury and lavish display.

But in dressing the story Director Crosland has occasionally gone to the extreme in the way of detail. There is altogether too much of it, especially in the second half of the picture, where he takes so very long to reach the ending. Cutting would improve this immensely and much of it can be done in the way of eliminating long entrances and exits, so noticeable throughout the picture. A great deal of the news weekly pictures providing a resume of the war should come out.

The marvelous backgrounds, those of Monte Carlo in particular, are a delight to the eye and the numerous artistic interiors are all to be admired. The photography is excellent at all times.

Lionel Barrymore was never more impressive than in the role of Prince Lubimoff—when he fights a duel with a Cossack and later when he battles with a terrorist, most genuinely portrayed by Ivan Linow, who, for a time, looks as though he were really going to batter Barrymore against the wall. This is a cocking of the picture and Alma Rubens does very good work at times, but her performance is varying. Her emotional bits are well done and with good restraint, but there are others in which she does not meet the situation, nor does she always photograph to the best advantage. The cast includes a long list of capable and well suited players.

Story: Prince Lubimoff has many women but, although he refuses to acknowledge it, Alicia Delille is the favorite. At the outset of the war Alicia, not wishing Lubimoff to know that she is the mother of a son of sixteen years of age (a new sub-title should increase this figure for William Collier, Jr., would never pass for sixteen) allows him to believe that the young man is a lover. Lubimoff persuades his friend, Castro, his protege, Spadoni, and old Colonel Marcos to join him in his seclusion, self-styled "Enemies of Women," but Alicia follows to Monte Carlo, asking a loan of Lubimoff. Lubimoff goes back to his women and is challenged for an attack upon one of them by Alicia's son, invalidated home. The boy dies of a heart attack preparatory to the duel. It is then that Lubimoff learns his true identity and in reparation for his part enters into the war to be reunited with Alicia at the close.

A Good Deal For You to Talk About in Cosmopolitan's Latest

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This will undoubtedly be classed with the big pictures of the year because of the elaborate and expensive way in which the story has been mounted. It is the sort of picture that you can do a lot of talking about and picture patrons are always interested in pictures that claim production costs of seven figures. And Cosmopolitan can supply you with a long list of data in connection with the making of "Enemies of Women."

Your big talking point is essentially the lavishness of the production, the pictorial values contained in it and the fact that a good part of the picture was taken upon actual location. They should be attracted by the fact that the players really appear at Monte Carlo as well as numerous other beautiful foreign locations. You have the name of Lionel Barrymore to exploit and Alma Rubens, as well as a long list of well known players. The fact that Vicente Blasco Ibáñez, who wrote "The Four Horsemen," is the author, is another asset. There are plenty of exploitation angles for you to work on and the picture should prove interesting to your box office. Distribution has not been announced at this writing.

Lavish Production With Visual Appeal Its Talking Point

Allan Dwan Prod.
"THE GLIMPSES OF THE MOON"
Paramount

DIRECTOR .................. Allan Dwan
AUTHOR .................. Edith Wharton
SCENARIO BY .................. Lloyd Sheldon
CAMERAMAN .................. Hal Rosson
AS A WHOLE........... A "showy" picture with three attractive feminine stars doing their best to put it over STORY............ Lavishly mounted and with continuous visual appeal; weak situations in the screen adaptation DIRECTION............ Always with an eye to the pictorial side of it; plenty of display but lacks dramatic strength
PHOTOGRAPHY ................. Splendid LIGHTINGS .................. Вery good PLAYERS............. Nita Naldi, Bebe Daniels and Rubye de Remer in a striking array of gowns; David Powell an accessory to the plot but has little acting opportunity; others Maurice Costello and Charles Gerrard
EXTERIORS .................. Few
DETAIL .................. Ample
CHARACTER OF STORY........ Two people enter into trial marriage agreement and decide to separate at the end of the time but are reunited
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 6,502 feet

Allan Dwan apparently set out to make a thoroughly fine looking picture of Edith Wharton's novel and the result is an offering of a high standard in the way of visual appeal and general attractiveness but weak in story element. For this reason "The Glimpses of the Moon" may have a varied appeal. For those who prefer good looking pictures, beautiful women and a generous display of gorgeous gowns, jewels, etc., you can count on satisfying them with it.

On the other hand where they want dramatic value in their entertainment, they will find it lacking. Edith Wharton's novel in its screen form serves chiefly as a vamping vehicle for Nita Naldi who appears in one scene after another, and in each more alluringly costumed, with seducing the young hero-novelist her chief occupation. Miss Naldi has certainly a style of vamping all her own and her performance is sufficiently attractive to make the picture pleasing to many, and this in spite of the fact that her portrayal will be looked upon less favorably by certain others.

From beginning to end "The Glimpses of the Moon" offers scenes which are pleasing to the eye. Besides the variety of episodes including ball room affairs, Palm Beach parties, a wedding reception, a European honeymoon, etc.,—all of which are elaborately done, —there is the continuous display of feminine beauty with Bebe Daniels and Rubye de Remer competing with Nita Naldi for the honors. All wear stunning gowns and are mighty good to look at at all times.

As for Mrs. Wharton's novel it has lost considerable of its strength in the transition. At any rate you have the marriage of Bebe Daniels to David Powell, the unsuccessful novelist, and the trial marriage which comes to a climax in the threatened separation of the two. But there is no force in back of the situation and the reunion follows just as expected with the vamping Nita satisfying herself with a substitute. The story unfolds smoothly, with the interest sustained through the pictures themselves rather than the situations.

Story: Susan Branch, a protege of the rich Mrs. Ursula Gillow, marries Nick Lansing in spite of Ursula's love for him. Because of the lack of funds they separate after a year and they are about to be divorced, Susan believing Nick in love with Ursula, when a kindly old lawyer who knows they still love each other, brings about the reunion.

Make Your Promises In Connection With The Production And Players

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

With "The Glimpses of the Moon" it all depends upon whether or not you can satisfy them with visual appeal alone. If you can, it will be easy to please them with this latest Allan Dwan production because it is certainly good to look at. Besides promises in this direction you have good names in the cast to work with particularly those of Nita Naldi and Bebe Daniels, plus David Powell, Maurice Costello and Rubye de Remer.

Confine your promises to gorgeous gowns, excellent settings and a wealth of display in general. Be sure to tell your women folks about the array of gowns and use stills in the lobby to get them interested. They'll remember Allan Dwan as the director of "Robin Hood" and you might tell them this is his first production since the Fairbanks picture.
Bushman-Bayne Come-Back Should Bring Them To The Box Office

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in "MODERN MARRIAGE"
Whitman Bennett Prod.—American Releasing Corp.

DIRECTOR .................. Lawrence Windom
AUTHOR ..................... Derek Vane
SCENARIO BY .............. Dorothy Farnum
CAMERAMAN ................ Edward Paul
AS A WHOLE .............. Very likely a good audience picture especially for the regulation "fan" crowd

STORY.......Has many familiar twists and works toward a conventional conclusion but it is what many picture patrons want DIRECTION.......Quite effective especially in sustaining interest and handling players; picture is trifles too long PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Good LIGHTINGS .................. All right STARS.......Back to their old roles and seem none the worse for the absence; will probably draw very well
SUPPORT.......Satisfactory although considerably subordinate to stars; includes Roland Bottomley, Ernest Hilliard, Zita Moulton and little Frankie Evans
EXTERIORS ................. Not many INTERIORS ................. Appropriate DETAIL ................. Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY.......Woman becomes implicated in murder of man from whom she tries to retrieve letters to prevent suspicion of husband she still loves

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 6,331 feet

It seems very much like old times to find Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, erstwhile screen idols, back in the harness after an absence of several years and undoubtedly exhibitors will find the comeback quite profitable, particularly where the typical "fan" crowd is catered to. There is no doubt but what they thoroughly enjoyed the pictures of these two stars and where the crowd is still right for them, "Modern Marriage" should do a first rate business.

While the Bushman-Bayne return is not made in a story especially attractive or unusual, "Modern Marriage" does contain situations very much on the order of those popularized by these two stars in the past, not that these eternal triangle themes have ceased to be popular in their absence. However, Derek Vane's novel suffices as a vehicle inasmuch as it suits the stars nicely and provides them both with appropriate roles, has been given a first rate production and otherwise measures up to what is usually expected.

The direction is quite all right. There are inconsistencies in the development such as the lack of police investigation when a murder is committed. It seems very improbable that the affair would be marked with so little notoriety especially in view of the people concerned in it. Of course there would probably be an alibi for each of these bits sufficiently strong to excuse them although this does not make them the more convincing. Windom does sustain the interest very well even though he has taken a little too much footage to tell the story. There is a good climax in which Bushman and Ernest Hilliard have a thrilling fight with Hilliard providing the happy ending through a confession which clears the woman's name. The necessary heart interest touches are supplied by the child of the couple. They are effective except in such an instance as that in which the child lisp's "Muvver why doesn't Daddy kiss you any more."

Story: Denise Varley decides to end her infatuation for Frank Despard and goes to his apartment for her letters. Despard refuses to give them up. Denise leaves in a hurry, later hearing that Despard has been murdered. As far as the audience is concerned the guilty one might be one of four people: Denise, Cort Maitland, a destitute neighbor of Despard's, his valet or Nita Blake, in love with Despard. The story proceeds to a climax in which it is eventually disclosed that Maitland killed Despard and also brings about a reunion between Denise and her husband.

Play Up Stars' Names And Exploit The Title

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors will, or should have, a first rate number to interest their folks with in "Modern Marriage." The Bushman-Bayne combination used to mean something at the box office and where you still have a regulation "fan" crowd their return should give them something to anticipate. In your announcements make a point of the stars' return and tell them this is their first picture in several years. Where they have been seen in person during their vaudeville tour, it should be very easy to get them in.

Appeal to your women folks in particular. The picture is the sort they "love" and they probably haven't forgotten Bushman, a popular "movie" idol of the early days. Display plenty of stills of Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne in the lobby. The title is a good one and can be effectively exploited. Play it up with catchlines such as: "Is 'Modern Marriage' a failure?" Why? You'll find the answer in the picture at the blank theater starring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne.

AS A WHOLE ................. Comedy number that keeps going at good pace STORY .............. An effective idea for comedy and has some good twists but also some humor that doesn't belong DIRECTION ......................... Fair
PHOTOGRAPHY ......................... All right
LIGHTINGS ......................... Good
STAR .................. Has appeared to better advantage SUPPORT ...... Violet Mersereau, the lead; several old timers in the comedy line-up such as Charlie Murray, Polly Moran and Flora Finch

INTERIORS ......................... Not many DETAIL .......... Picture too long; Ralph Spence titles
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Rich young man wagers a hundred thousand that he can earn ten thousand in a year without using his own money
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 6,442 feet

Johnny Hines has had much better material for his comedies than this People's Magazine story by Jackson Gregory or perhaps the scenario didn't do it justice. At any rate the humor in his latest, "Luck," is several degrees lower than what his admirers have come to expect of him and certainly there is no good excuse for a few off color bits of business that have no place in screen entertainment.

There is one bit in the dance hall sequence in which the recent corset checking expose is visualized and followed by a Ralph Spence title that may go big with the gallery gods but will disgust others. "Luck" needs some housecleaning and after that it will offer a much more pleasing comedy than it does at present. It is a fast moving feature with plenty of lively incident and some pretty fair comedy business. It isn't the biggest laugh getter but with some cutting it can be greatly improved and stand a much better chance of holding them. The Earle and Wilson collar comes in for some advertising in the film.

The "Brewster's Millions" idea has just been reversed and instead of hero wagering to spend his money in a given time, hero Johnny bets a hundred thousand he will make ten thousand in a year without a penny to start with. This affords a succession of incidents in which Hines becomes involved in various complications such as his arrival in a town where a fighter is expected to take part in a prize bout and a case of mistaken identity when Johnny is hailed as the fighter. Polly Moran, Charlie Murray and Flora Finch supply some fun at the ringside. Prior to this there is some good stunts in which Johnny avoids the conductor on the train.

They will probably like the melodramatic climax in which hero saves the girl from the mine cave-in and wins her father's support in his town-building scheme thereby making it possible for him to collect the ten thousand necessary to win the wager. Johnny Hines works hard to put the picture over and his following will probably like "Luck." The appearance of Charlie Murray, Flora Finch and Polly Moran is another good feature and Violet Mersereau is a suitable heroine.

Star's Name And Old Time Comedy Players Will Attract

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

For the regulation comedy liking crowd "Luck" will probably prove a satisfying feature and it is sufficiently peppy and fast moving to get over if they don't demand too much in the way of comedy situations. If the offensive humor mentioned previously is cut you can safely show it to all classes but make sure that it is out or your family patronage will have something to say to you.

Where Johnny Hines is popular you can easily attract them by mention of his name and the title of his latest picture. "Luck" is a good title to work with and you might hand out cardboard horseshoes bearing lucky numbers for free admittance to the showing. This would undoubtedly get them interested. Be sure to say that Flora Finch, Charlie Murray and Polly Moran are in the cast.

CAMERAMAN ................. Victor Milner

AS A WHOLE.........Thoroughly pleasing and enjoyable picture with star in another of her delightful characterizations

EXTERIORS ..................... Few
INTERIORS .................... All right

CHARACTER OF STORY........Chorus girl "shows up" members of home town Purity League when they refuse to give her a job because she is a show girl

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION........4,704 feet

Gladys Walton has been running in a streak of good luck lately in the way of having stories selected for her that are especially well suited to her personality and give her the sort of characterization that she does best. In Frederick Arnold Kummer's "The Town Scandal" she has a splendid vehicle not only in that it fits her to a "T" but the theme is original, clever, and contains a thoroughly interesting and convincing idea.

Original Small Town Scandal Story

The theme not only provides good material for humorous treatment but might also serve for a more serious venture in which the situations would be handled in a different fashion. As it is here it provides a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment under the comedy treatment carefully accorded it by Director Baggot, who gets the most out of the situations and with liberal use of hokum makes it completely satisfying and quite unusual.

There is always more or less discussion relative to the chorus girl and her manner of living, but probably it has never been used in connection with a story to better advantage than it has here. Added to this there is an interesting "slant" on the reform problem in the introduction of a small town Purity League composed of the town's leading merchants and citizens who want to abolish ice cream sodas along with other reforms, but sneak off to the city for a party with the chorus girl from their own home town. These two situations comprise the most important angles of the story with much fine incidental comedy.

The development is especially effective and Baggot succeeds in increasing the interest as he goes along and finally reaching the climax in which the chorus girl "shows up" the puritan citizens, the picture comes to a great finish with the puritan gentlemen narrowly escaping the wrath of their wives by having their secret parties exposed. There are many laughs in the picture and it is thoroughly satisfying in every respect.

Gladys Walton can always be relied upon to put over a role of this type. She doesn't fail in this one and her admirers are going to like her better all the time if they keep giving her the right stories. So far she's been fortunate in securing effective material. A word of praise can be said for the players representing the town's best citizens. They are all fine types and do very good work. Edward Hearne hasn't a very big part as the hero of the story.

Will Bear Out Your Promises and Can Be Effectively Exploited

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Here is a right pleasing number that your folks should be well pleased with. Where the star is popular you can make extra promises for it, telling them it is even better than her last two or three pictures. They'll be delighted with her work in this. Use plenty of stills of her in the lobby showing her in her chorus girl regalia. With regard to the story tell them she plays the part of a chorus girl who is refused a job by the men of her town but that later she has them all at her mercy. Invite them in to see how she does it.

The title is particularly good and will stand exploitation. Distribute throw-aways with the line "Have you heard 'The Town Scandal,'" and follow them up with others, "Learn about 'The Town Scandal' at the blank theater." You can promise a thoroughly enjoyable, wholesome comedy for this latest Universal release is that.
A First Rate Thrill in Climax But Otherwise An Average Picture

"THE BROKEN VIOLIN"

Arrow—State Rights

DIRECTOR ....................... Jack Dillon

AUTHOR ........................ George R. Rogan

SCENARIO BY ...................... L. Case Russell

CAMERAMAN ....................... George Peters

AS A WHOLE...... An average picture both in story and production; has a fine thrill in climax but no other high lights

STORY...... Conventional theme that has not been given a particularly good continuity; rather incoherent at times

DIRECTION...... May have been held to a certain production figure although material hardly merited a more expensive production

PHOTOGRAPHY ........................ Good

LIGHTINGS .......................... All right

PLAYERS...... Warren Cooke a good looking hero and capable; Dorothy Mackaill pleasing but hasn't enough to do; Zena Keefe has even less to do; others Gladden James, Joseph Blake, Henry Sedley and Rita Rogan

EXTERIORS .......................... Appropriate

INTERIORS .......................... Suitable

DETAIL ............................... Fair

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Crook claiming right to rich man's estate is later exposed by the rightful heir

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5,700 feet

"The Broken Violin" is the sort of an offering that you are inclined to consider in the light of "not bad and not good." It is one of those in-betweens which in the end measures up to the average with a few good points in its favor and some against it. In this case there is a first rate thrill in the climax and a generally satisfying ending in its favor, and also the fact that the picture is not too long. On the other hand there is a fairly conventional plot, and a not too coherent continuity.

Jack Dillon is capable of much better direction than he has accorded this one, and his introductory sequence is especially weak and does not establish a satisfactory premise. The action jumps from the city to Canada and back again, with the characters first one place and then another. Of course this is all very probable but not quite convincing, nor is the part of the plot which is concerned with the crooks' plan to secure the fortune left by a rich old man to the nephew he had never seen. That such a thing would ever occur in reality the way it does here is very unlikely. Heirs to fortunes don't just present themselves as such and such a person and collect. Anyone knows just how difficult it is.

But excusing the improbabilities, "The Broken Violin" offers an average entertainment with a good cast and a good thrill in the last reel that should send them out fairly well satisfied. There is a pursuit in which the rightful heir chases one of the crooks who has made off with his little sister. Hero goes after his man via airplane and shots of the plane following up the speeding motor boat, the drop from the machine to the boat, and the fight in the boat are all very good and supply some first rate excitement.

Warren Cooke is a regular college type hero who will undoubtedly please the feminine members of the audience. Dorothy Mackaill is thoroughly pleasing, although she has very little to do and has not always been properly lighted. Zena Keefe has even less to do than Miss Mackaill, which puts the feminine members of the cast rather well in the background, leaving Warren Cooke the most important role with little Rita Rogan next. Gladden James is the villain.

Story: Jeremy Ellsworth sends for the children of the son he disinherited. Knowing Ellsworth has never seen them, his secretary, Gault, plans with Phil Carter to have the latter represent himself as the grandson. How the plan is frustrated by the appearance of the real grandson is followed by his marriage to the girl whose life he saved in Canada.

Should Give Medium Satisfaction Without Your Making Promises

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You will probably be able to satisfy enough of your patrons with "The Broken Violin" to get it over. It isn't a picture that you can make any big promises for, so it would be best to play it up with announcements of the usual order, poster displays, stills in the lobby and give the title prominence, although it does not seem to have any particular drawing power and has no great bearing upon the story.

It will be all right to talk about the thrill in the climax in which hero rescues his little sister. Very likely stills of this episode would serve to get them interested. There are no names to use unless those of Zena Keefe and Dorothy Mackaill who should be remembered if they saw her in "Mighty Lak' a Rose." You might mention Warren Cooke for the good work he does in this.
